55       9. The Pensions (Increase) (Amendment) Ordinance, 1948, is hereby repealed.

No. 19 of 1948.

MEMORANDUM OF OBJECTS AND REASONS

The Pensions (Increase) Ordinance, 1945 (referred to hereafter as the principal Ordinance), was modelled on legislation in the United Kingdom. It provided for temporary increases in the lower range of pensions in order to mitigate cases of hardship which were occurring under the then existing conditions. As a result of the continued rise in the cost of living the United Kingdom legislation was amended in 1947 to provide for more generous increases. Following the lines of that amendment, the principal Ordinance was amended by the Pensions (Increase) (Amendment) Ordinance, 1948 (Ordinance No. 19 of 1948), so as to effect a raising of the ceilings up to which increases in pensions might be granted, a lowering of the age limit at which increases might be payable and an increase in the amounts by which pensions might be increased.

The adjustments provided for under the Pensions (Increase) (Amendment) Ordinance, 1948, have been found to be still inadequate. This Bill, accordingly, provides for a further raising of the ceilings up to which increases in pensions may be granted (clauses 2 and 3); a further lowering of the age at which pension increases become payable (clause 4), and for an increase in the amount of income, apart from pension, which may be disregarded in relation to the ceilings (clauses 6 and 7).

Clause 5 of the Bill provides that an officer who has elected for the revised terms of service shall not be eligible for any increase in pension under this or the principal Ordinance, unless he retired between 1st January, 1946, and the date of assent to the Ordinance. The object of making this exception is to ensure that no officer will, as a result of this Bill, suffer any reduction in a pension already awarded, or due.

The Bill provides (clause 1) for the new adjustments to have retrospective effect from the date from which the principal Ordinance became operative. This provision is inserted for the reason that the increases provided for in the principal Ordinance were inadequate to meet the then existing circumstances.

This Bill continues the principal Ordinance in force until the 31st day of December, 1949, when it will expire unless further continued by Proclamation of the Governor, made with the approval of the Legislative Council (clause 8).

As the provisions of the Pensions (Increase) (Amendment) Ordinance, 1948, have been incorporated in the present Bill, that Ordinance will no longer be required and will be repealed (clause 9).

Any additional expenditure which will be incurred, if this Bill becomes law, will be limited to the pensions' adjustments made by the Bill itself.

Nairobi,
8th January, 1949.

Attorney General.
