THE INDUSTRIAL COURT

CAUSE No. 18 OF 1982

Parties:

Kenya Union of Commercial Food & Allied Workers and Cadbury Schweppes Kenya Ltd.

Issue in dispute:

Sunday work without overtime at double rate

1. The Kenya Union of Commercial Food & Allied Workers shall hereinafter be referred to as the Claimants and Cadbury Schweppes Kenya Ltd. shall hereinafter be referred to as the Respondents.

2. The parties were heard in Nairobi on 3rd June and 30th July, 1982 and relied on their written and verbal submissions.

AWARD

The Notification of Dispute Form "A" dated 23rd November, 1981 duly signed by the parties was received by the Court on 22nd March, 1982, together with the statutory certificate signed by the Labour Commissioner.

The Respondents used to operate a three-shift system from 1972 to 9th March, 1981 when they started a four-shift operation. It is not denied that up to 9th March, 1981 they used to pay workers overtime for Sunday work but they discontinued paying overtime when they commenced four shifts. The workers demand is that in accordance with their collective agreement with Respondents they are entitled to be paid overtime for the Sunday work notwithstanding the four-shift system. The Respondents have strongly opposed this demand on the ground that they were not required by law to allow only Sunday as rest day and that they could give the workers any day of the week as a rest day. Further they were entitled to organize their work schedule as they thought it best in the interest of the enterprise.

The Court must examine the relevant provisions in the parties collective agreement. The most relevant clause is number seven dealing with hours of work. It reads as follows:

"Clause 7 (a) Hours of Work and Overtime, reads as follows:

- (i) Each employee shall attend at his place of work as appointed by the Company from time to time during the standard working hours. The hours of work may be varied according to the Company's requirements such as shift work provided that the basic hours shown in 7 (a) (ii) below are not exceeded.
- (ii) The standard working hours shall be forty-five (45) per week. Normally, eight (8) consecutive hours of work constitute a working day Monday to Friday and five (5) consecutive hours of work for Saturday. The time of beginning and stopping work shall be in accordance with the departmental requirements.
- (iii) The Company has the right to require any employee to work for more than forty-five (45) standard hours provided that an employee wishing to be excused (from) extra working hours shall receive full consideration on presentation of reasons for such consideration."

It is clear that hours of work may be varied by the Respondents due to requirements of shift work but they are not to exceed 45 hours per week. Clause (a) (i) does not contain any provision which would give the Respondents the right to reconstitute the working week. It is clearly stated that 8 hours of work from Monday to Friday and 5 consecutive hours for Saturday constitute the working week. There is no mention of Sunday which obviously is the rest day.

The Court has given careful thought to the Respondents submission pointing out that 40 new employees were engaged as a result of the four-shift work and that at least 23 employees were made to act in higher job grades and 3 operators were promoted to the grade of charge hand and 3 general labourers to operators. This argument of new jobs having been created was however effectively demolished by the Claimants who exhibited through fact and figures in their final submission and which were not effectively denied by the Respondents that there was no real increase in employment. This leaves the Court with no alternative but to attach no great importance to this particular submission of the Respondents.

The Court also appreciates the Respondents other extremely important submission that the weekly hours of work were reduced from 45 to 42 hours and that in a cycle of 21 days work the shift workers are able to get 5 days of rest. Moreover if they work more than 45 hours a week they get paid appropriate overtime.

Ordinarily the Court would have had no hesitation in finding in favour of the Respondents but unfortunately for them the relevant clause in the collective agreement does not allow them to make workers work on Sundays without paying them the agreed overtime. It would have been very much in their own interest to have had proper discussions with the Claimants and securing their agreement if they thought that by introduction of a four-shift system they would escape paying overtime for Sunday work. It may have necessitated an amendment to the hours of work clause in the collective agreement but this they did not do.

In view of the foregoing and after carefully considering the parties submissions the Court awards that the Respondents should pay all the workers the agreed overtime for all the Sunday work they have performed since the introduction of the four-shift system.

Given in Nairobi on the 23rd September, 1982.

Judge.
