GAZETTE NOTICE NO. 4503

THE INDUSTRIAL COURT

CAUSE NO. 418 OF 1985

Parties:

Railways and Harbours Union (K)
and

Kenya Railways Corporation

Issue in dispute:

Unjustifiable dismissal of Fredrick Muyeyeli, ex-assistant station master—grade RB V, by D. T. S., Nakuru.

THE Kenya Railways and Harbours Union shall hereinafter be referred to as the claimants and the Kenya Railways Corporation shall hereinafter be referred to as the respondents.

2. The parties were heard in Nairobi on 24th August, 1987, and relied on their written and verbal submissions.

AWARD

3. The Notification of Dispute Form "A" dated 2nd March, 1985, duly signed by the parties, was received by the court on 4th October, 1985, together with the statutory certificates signed by the Minister for Labour and the Labour Commissioner.

Mr. Muyeyeli was first employed by the then East African Railways and Harbours Administration, on 14th June, 1962, as a trainee clerk division III. He was promoted to clerk grade XI after completing three-months training. He was subsequently admitted to permanent and pensionable terms on 31st October, 1962. He attended a further training course at the end of which he became an assistant station master grade NB. VB, with effect from 1st September, 1964. He later rose through the ranks to the position of assistant station master grade NB. VA, effective from 1st March, 1970.

His service record was not blameless as he had series of warnings. He was dismissed from the respondents' service on 23rd March, 1979, after seventeen (17) years.

The circumstances that led to his dismissal started after his posting to Turbo Station as an assistant station master. On 30th August, 1978, Mr. Muyeyeli was booked to work on shift starting at 4 p.m. up to mid-night. At about 18.40 hours he gave "line clear" to Kipkaren River Station for DO2 passenger train to approach his Turbo Station. The said train then left at about 19.01 hours and reached Turbo at 19.25 hours and it left after two minutes stop for Leseru.

In the meantime, an effort by the desk controller at Nakuru to contact Mr. Muyeyeli with a view to check on the train movement failed. Similar attempts through the two adjacent stations in an effort to call Turbo, both yielded no result.

When the train eventually reached Eldoret, the desk controller instructed the assistant station master, Eldoret to notify the assistant traffic superintendent that although the train had reached Eldoret, Turbo Station had failed to give timings, nor had Kipkaren River been notified of the train's arrival at Turbo and the token locked in the instrument. The same situation applied to Leseru too where the train had arrived, but the assistant station master could not lock the inward token in instrument due to inattention by Turbo station.

Following this serious situation, the assistant traffic superintendent, accompanied by a policeman left in a Land-Rover for Turbo. On arrival, they found no one in the station office which was left open. They found the lights on and the token "line clear" No. 22 which had been given to the driver of train No. DO2 and surrendered at Turbo lying loose on the instrument, unlocked.

They took the possession of the token and proceeded to the staff quarters, and on their way found Mr. Kemei, another assistant station master who was due to relieve Mr. Muyeyeli for the next shift.

They proceeded to Mr. Muyeyeli's house and were told that Mr. Muyeyeli was at the station, on duty. They continued with their search and went to a Mr. Mutiti's house where a lady directed them to a bar where she thought her husband, Mr. Mutiti, could be drinking. In the meantime the assistant traffic superintendent instructed Mr. Kemei to take charge of the station immediately while Mr. Muyeyeli was still at large.

Their search now took them outside the station area and eventually they located Mr. Muyeyeli drinking in Navava Bar. On seeing them, he left and started running towards the station but was caught after he fell down. They thought of taking him to the doctor for examination but when they reached Eldoret, the police officer commanding the station felt that he had already recovered from the effects of the alcohol he had consumed. It was, therefore, decided to take departmental action against him.

The respondents wrote him a letter asking him to answer charges arising from his absence from the station on the material day but he failed to reply, instead, he instructed his lawyer to file a civil suit against the respondents for damages amounting to KSh. 505,000 arising from an alleged assault.

Mr. Muyeyeli was finally dismissed on 25th March, 1979, having failed completely to offer an explanation for his acts of gross misconduct.

He then referred the matter to the claimants who took the matter on his behalf through the laid down machinery and the Ministry after their investigations found that Mr. Muyeyeli's dismissal was justified, but the claimants rejected this decision and the matter was then referred to this court for adjudication.

The claimants in their submission stated that Mr. Muyeyeli was wrongly dismissed from the respondents services. They refuted the allegation that the grievant left his station unattended between 16.00 hours to 24.00 hours as he remained on duty for the greater part of that shift despatching train No. DO2 and issuing tickets to passengers.

They denied that a token was left loose on the instrument arguing that to lock it would require two persons between the two stations. With regard to the issue of the grievant found drinking, this they said was neither proved by a doctor nor by another independent person. They dismissed Corporal Mzungu's and the assistant traffic superintendent's testimonies as biased because Wesley arap Kimei had testified that the grievant was not drunk.

They further submitted that Mr. Muyeyeli had to leave his work place to prepare a quick meal for himself because he knew very well that there were no other trains coming his way. He was, therefore, a victim of witch-hunting and blackmail by the assistant traffic superintendent and the policeman and was also denied a chance to defend himself.

Under these circumstances, they prayed the court to find the dismissal wrongful and unjustified and asked that the grievant be reinstated back to his position.

The respondents on the other hand submitted that when Mr. Muyeyeli was sent a departmental letter on his misconduct he failed to acknowledge or answer it. If he felt that he was unable to attend to the letter due to sickness he could have passed on the matter to the claimants as provided for under Annexure "D" paragraph 12 of the Industrial Relations Machinery, 1978. However, one fails to understand why he chose to file a civil suit against the respondents for damages amounting to KSh. 505,000 instead of answering a letter sent to him containing departmental charges preferred against him which were more crucial to his future employment. The respondents, while admitting that the grievant was, at one stage or another, an outpatient stated that he was discharged and recommended for light duty for a month and he returned again for an operation in December 1978 following an injury to his right shoulder. He had left hospital when he was transferred to Turbo. He was, in fact dismissed two (2) months after resuming duty. He definitely had no intention whatsoever to reply to the charges.

It is the respondents strong submission that the grievant left his station without permission after despatching train No. DO2, and remained away for more than three hours when the two officers finally traced him in a bar. He acted very irresponsibly when he left the station office open with all the respondents' cash and properties unguarded and at the same time threatening the safety of trains when he left a loose token "line clear" unlocked and allowed an easy access to the keys for signals and points. It is the respondents' view that their action against the grievant was totally justified under these circumstances.

The court has carefully analyzed the submissions placed before it and finds that in consideration of what the grievant did, he was totally careless and irresponsible considering that he had served the respondents for over seventeen (17) years. When he was caught redhanded in the bar he was never repentant at all, instead, he ran away when he saw his superiors and produced flimsy excuses that he went to prepare a meal when he was never found in his house. The claimants stated that he had to run away due to the physical danger posed by the aggressive assistant traffic superintendent and the policeman. It is the court's view that this is a baseless accusation against the respondents' senior staff who went round looking for Mr. Muyeyeli who should have been at his work place. The court fails to understand what the claimants wanted proved in this case when the grievant was never at his work place and was eventually found in a bar drinking. He, totally, undermined the trust and responsibility placed on him by the respondents, which require among others, that safety rules on life and property should be strictly observed.

After a careful consideration of all the submissions, the court upholds the respondents' action in dismissing Mr. Muyeyeli and rejects all the demands made by the claimants on his behalf.

Given in Nairobi on the 14th September, 1987.

- (v) Wrongful grading of some employees by the company under the CBA.

THE Bakery, Confectionery, Manufacturing and Allied Workers' Union (Kenya) shall hereinafter be referred to as the claimants and Elliot's Bakeries Limited shall hereinafter be referred to as the respondents.

2. The parties were heard in Nairobi on 25th, 26th November, 1986, 10th, 11th, 13th February, 29th and 30th June, 1st, 2nd, 21st, 22nd and 24th July, 1987, and relied on their written and verbal submissions. In addition the following persons were called by the respondents as witnesses:

Gerrard Tirii Jason
Jotham Asiligwa Kahi

The claimants called no witness.

AWARD

3. The Notification of Dispute Form "A" dated 9th April, 1986, duly signed by the parties, was received by the court on 30th June, 1986, together with the statutory certificates signed by the Labour Minister and the Labour Commissioner.

Out of the eight (8) issues appearing on Form "A", the parties settled three (3) leaving the aforesaid five (5) issues in dispute.

The parties to this dispute have collective agreements governing the terms and conditions of employment of the respondents' employees. The said agreements run for two years. The last of such agreements ended in 1984 followed by a fresh one which expired in July 1986.

The court notes with great regret that this dispute which has cost implications of well over five (5) million shillings has arisen from the interpretation of various clauses in a collective agreement which the parties themselves negotiated, agreed, and signed and which was registered by the court at the parties request.

The disputes of this nature, and there are quite a few of them that have come to the court of late, are worrying the court as it is apparent that the parties are careless and word ambiguously some of the vital clauses from which they try to back out later and ask the court to retrieve the situation for them. The court has repeatedly warned the trade unions and the employers to be extremely careful when collective agreements are being drawn and to ensure that they contain in simple and clear terms what the parties have agreed leaving no doubt in anyone's mind as to their intentions. Obviously, the court's warnings have had no effect and parties continue to create difficulties for themselves and then ask the court to find solutions for them.

Under these circumstances the court's task becomes most difficult when it has to tell the parties what they have agreed themselves at their own level.

The collective agreements govern and regulate the terms and conditions of employment of hundreds and thousands of workers in the country and there is no room for any laxity in them.

The court notes that some of the issues in dispute concern both collective agreements, that is, 1982/1984 and 1984/86, hence the need to compare the relevant clauses in both the collective agreements in order to determine their correct interpretation.

Issue one.—Refusal by the company to pay shift allowance to employees under the CBA since 1st July, 1984.

The court has carefully analysed the relevant clauses on this issue in the two collective agreements and notes that the parties merged the old clause with the claimants' new demands and came out with "shift allowance" as opposed to "night-shift allowance" and this clause now reads:

"Shift allowance.—an employee who works for a period of not less than one day between hours of 6 p.m. and 6 a.m. shall be paid shift allowance based on 10 per cent of his basic wage provided that the employee shall be allowed to alternate his working hours."

The court finds that an employee has to be within the cycle of shift work for a period of not less than one day between hours of 6 p.m. and 6 a.m. to qualify for shift allowance which has to be paid to workers on all the three shifts otherwise the deletion of the word "night" by the parties makes no sense. The shift workers can also alternate their shifts, that is they need not be on night shift all the time.

The court is in agreement with the findings of the Ministry of Labour investigator on this point and finds that the shift allowance has to be paid at the rate of 10 per cent of the workers' monthly wage as the basic wage in the aforesaid clause means monthly wage. If the parties had intended it to be something else they should have stated so.

The court must emphasize that the parties are bound to honour the collective agreements which they enter into notwithstanding the labour costs involved which factor they should consider before signing them.

The court awards that the workers are entitled to be paid shift allowance as demanded by the claimants.

Issue two.—Refusal by the company to pay $\frac{1}{2}$ hour overtime to employees under the CBA since 1st July, 1984.

The court notes that the basis of the claimants' demand is that the parties agreed that the workers will work $7\frac{1}{2}$ hours per shift which includes $\frac{1}{2}$ hours rest period—in other words they say that the respondents have to allow $\frac{1}{2}$ hour paid rest or pay overtime for work beyond 7 hours per shift.

The claimants demand overtime amounting to Sh. 1,624,932 under this issue which they maintain has not been paid to their members.

Admittedly in the relevant clause "8 hours" has been changed to read " $7\frac{1}{2}$ hours" but the other related clauses fundamentally remain the same. These are that each week will be of forty-five working hours and under the "shift" clause it is stated as before that where by reason of overtime it is necessary to extend the period of work beyond 8 hours, a further 15 minutes break will be arranged and treated as part of overtime.

The court has carefully considered the submissions on this issue and the evidence tendered in support thereof and finds the claimants' demand is misconceived in the absence of reduction of working hours per week to 42. Further the words, "to extend the period of work beyond 8 hours" have not been altered to read "beyond $7\frac{1}{2}$ hours."

The court finds that the workers are required to work 45 hours per week and any work in excess of these hours is deemed to be overtime.

Under the circumstances the court accepts the respondents explanation that 8 hours were changed to read $7\frac{1}{2}$ hours in clause 8 (b) in order to make the issue of $\frac{1}{2}$ as break clear. The workers work $7\frac{1}{2}$ hours and get $\frac{1}{2}$ hour rest making an 8 hours shift; any worker who does not get the $\frac{1}{2}$ hour rest within 8 hours is paid overtime.

The claimants' demand under this issue is rejected.

Issue three.—Refusal by the company to pay employees' salary for 2 days after the company locked the workers out on 21st and 22nd November, 1984.

It is not seriously in dispute that employment cards in different colours had been issued by the respondents over the years to their employees. The respondents admit that they had not made it a rule that workers will gain entry to the premises on production of these cards. In fact the production of employment cards was never enforced although it was discussed between the respondents and the claimants about a year earlier to the date of the incident on 21st and 22nd November, 1984.

Under these circumstances the court finds it unreasonable for the respondents to have insisted on production of employment cards on 21st November, 1984, without any prior notice having been given to the workers. But then the claimants' reaction to this was volatile and whereas the unhappy situation could have been resolved the respondents' operations were paralyzed on 22nd November, 1984, as well as the Labour Commissioner had to intervene to resolve the matter and on the same day the following memo of understanding was arrived at—

- (i) the doors will be opened immediately;
- (ii) those employees with employment identity cards will enter and resume duty;
- (iii) those without the employment identity cards will be identified by the management, after which they will enter and resume duty;
- (iv) those without the employment identity cards will then be issued with cards for deductions in cases of those who have lost theirs;
- (v) the whole issue of employment identity cards will be subject of discussion between the two parties;
- (vi) payment or otherwise for the time lost shall be subject for discussion between the parties;

After carefully considering all the circumstances surrounding this dispute, the court finds that on 21st November, 1984, the respondents were at fault but on 22nd November, 1984, the workers having known that the respondents had decided that they should produce employment cards before gaining entry to the factory, should not have refrained from doing so and those who had not lost their cards should have produced them and the others could have applied for replacement. The matter could then have been discussed between the parties if the claimants wished to pursue it any further.

The court awards that the respondents should pay their employees salary for one day only, that is 21st November, 1984.

Issue four.—Wilful underpayment of wrapping general employees by the company under the CBA since 1st July, 1984.

The court finds it to be in poor taste for the respondents to have stated that the claimants fraudulently inserted the words "wrapping general" under former job description of grade 3 as it appears in schedule of interpretation. There is no basis for such a scandalous allegation and the court clears the claimants on this point.

The cost of claimants' demand under this issue according to the Department of Manpower Planning and Development report is almost Sh. 734,408 by way of accumulated arrears due to wrong grading of the employees in wrapping section.

Now coming to the facts of the issue the new job title for grade III with effect from 1st July, 1984, is "machine operator in various sections including wrapping general and wrapping slicing." The operative and over-riding words are "machine operator." The fact that the words wrapping general appear along with machine operator, dividersmen, coolermen, boilermen, dough confectioner after two years and wrapping slicing under the former job description does not make an ordinary worker a machine operator to entitle him to earn a machine operator's salary. The appearance of these words in former job description is meaningless unless they operate machines.

This particular item has a history behind it in which the claimants advised their members at one stage not even to lift a finger to touch the machines as a result of which the respondents took appropriate action in appointing machine operators and the rest were left as ordinary workers.

After careful consideration of all the submissions the court finds that only those workers who operate machines in wrapping general and wrapping slicing are entitled to grade III and not the ordinary workers. The claimants' demand must therefore fail.

Issue five.—Wrongful grading of some employees by the company under the CBA.

(i) Jason N. Onditi:

The court has carefully considered the submissions and finds that this is a case where the employee having asked for a transfer from Nairobi to Nakuru for personal family reasons and was prepared to do any job, now wants to be appointed to the post of Assistant Credit Controller, Nakuru just because he acted for the credit controller once for a short period and for which he was paid an acting allowance.

There is absolutely no merit in this demand and the court accordingly rejects it. The Ministry's investigator completely misguided himself on this issue.

(ii) Ben Waswa:

After a careful consideration of all the submissions the court finds that Mr. Waswa was correctly graded and the claimants' demand must therefore fail.

(iii) Philip Gachoka:

The court finds that the claimants have made out a case in respect of Mr. Gachoka and the court has come to the conclusion that the dictates of justice demand that Mr. Gachoka be placed in grade 7 with effect from 1st July, 1984, and the court so awards and directs that he be paid all his salary arrears.

Given in Nairobi on 10th September, 1987.

GAZETTE NOTICE No. 4505

THE INDUSTRIAL COURT

CAUSE No. 11 OF 1987

Parties:

Tailors and Textiles Workers Union
and

National and Season Garment Factory Limited

Issue in dispute:

Wrongful dismissal of Justus Mwambeje.

THE Tailors and Textiles Workers Union shall hereinafter be referred to as the claimants and National and Season Garment Factory Limited shall hereinafter be referred to as the respondents.

2. This dispute was mentioned on 30th April, 1987, in the absence of the respondents as they failed to attend and the hearing date was fixed for 5th August, 1987. On 5th August, 1987, the hearing proceeded without the respondents since they had indicated in their written submissions dated 31st July, 1987, that they would not be able to attend the hearing and requested the court to rely on their written submission to make a ruling.

AWARD

3. The Notification of Dispute Form "A" dated 18th December, 1983, signed by the parties, was received by the court on 27th February, 1987, together with the statutory certificates signed by the Minister for Labour and the Labour Commissioner.

The grievant, Justus Mwambeje, was employed by the respondents on 15th June, 1975. He was dismissed on 2nd July, 1981, after a service of nearly seven (7) years. At the time of his dismissal Mr. Mwambeje was earning KSh. 601 per month.

The claimants told the court that the respondents were members of the defunct Mombasa and Coast Tailors Employers Association, which had a collective agreement with them. Therefore, at the time of the grievant's dismissal, both parties were bound by the collective agreement between the claimants and the mass production group of the Federation of Kenya Employers of which the respondents were a member.

The dispute was investigated by the Ministry of Labour and its findings were that the dismissal be reduced to normal termination of employment and be paid all his terminal benefits. Further he should be paid three (3) months wages as compensation for loss of employment.

The claimants told the court that the incident that led to his dismissal took place on the night of 29th and 30th June, 1981, when he began feeling sick and in the morning went to seek medical treatment at the Kisauni Health Clinic which was nearest to his residence.

The claimants further pointed out that, Mr. Mwambeje was treated and given one day off-duty by the doctor and since he had no means of communicating with the respondents about his sickness he waited until the following day 1st July, 1981. On 1st July, 1981, he reported on duty and gave reasons together with a medical certificate to show cause for his being absent on the previous day 30th June, 1981.

The claimants have rested their case on the procedures system clause in the collective agreement and vigorously submitted that the respondents should have utilized this clause in full before deciding to terminate Mr. Mwambeje's services. They told the court that the Ministry's findings and recommendation are in favour of the grievant and are also acceptable to them. The claimants have asked the court to award the grievant as recommended by the Ministry of Labour as a warning to employers who do not follow the provisions of the collective agreements seriously.

The respondents in their written submissions stated that the grievant absented himself from duty on 30th June, 1981, only to report the following day with a medical certificate which was not acceptable to them. They further submitted that on 1st July, 1981, the grievant refused to collect his wages less one day's pay but only collected the same on 2nd July, 1981, when he was advised to do so by the shopsteward.

The respondents further stated that the grievant left his place of work during the working hours on 2nd July, 1981, without informing the management or asking for permission to go to the claimants' office.

The respondents maintained that, they acted correctly in dismissing Mr. Mwambeje in order to have discipline in their labour force and asked the court to award in their favour by rejecting the claimants' prayer.

The court has, carefully, considered all the aspects of this dispute and bearing in mind the Ministry's findings and recommendation, has come to the conclusion that this particular employee did not deserve dismissal. The respondents' action was harsh indeed as a warning for absence without permission on 2nd July, 1981, would have sufficed.

In these circumstances the court finds that the Ministry of Labour's recommendation of reducing Mr. Mwambeje's dismissal to normal termination of employment and be paid all his terminal benefits as well as being paid three (3) months salary by way of compensation to be reasonable and the court so awards.
