Memorandum upon the Ancient Monuments Preservation Bill, 1927.

1. In 1924 it was suggested that the question of the preservation of ancient monuments should be taken up and a circular was issued to Administrative Officers by Government. This invited suggestions for the due preservation and identification of such memorials as the graves of early explorers, officials and pioneers, old Government stations and evidences of earlier civilisations.

In 1925 the Acting Governor called attention to the state in which he found the graveyards during his tours and required a return of graves.

2. The aims of Government in introducing this Bill may be summarised as follows :—

(a) Ancient Ruins.

Ruins, ancient in the strict sense of the word, are only to be found on the Coast. There are, however, relics of stone-age dwellings in various parts of the country and these are probably more important in this Colony, one of the chief migration areas of Africa, than any other type of relic of the past. It is therefore in the interests of archaeology and of science that care should be taken of such memorials.

(b) Modern Ruins.

These are mainly old Government stations and the like and present no difficulty, a tablet is sufficient to commemorate them when desirable.

(c) Memorials.

Under this head come such memorials as the Wavell Memorial and Sir William Mackinnon's statue in Mombasa, the War Memorials in Nairobi and Muthaiga, memorial churches as the Boughton-Knight at Kisumu, memorial buildings as the Colonists Memorial Hall in Nairobi and the like. Here the State, apart from any trustees, has an interest in preservation and so legal provision must be made for preservation by the State in certain circumstances. It must also be recognised that in the later years it may be considered essential, as in the case of certain churches in the City of London to-day, for the land or structure or both to be used for other purposes and so provision should be made for the State to be consulted before this is done.

(d) Graves and Graveyards.

This is a more complex matter. There are the graves of private persons and of officials, some on private land, some on Crown land and the others in Native Reserves. There are graveyards in Government stations, graveyards on private holdings and graveyards in municipal and town areas. There are graves unmarked which should be marked, there are graves, marked and unmarked, which should be tended. There are Christian graves, Mohamedan graves, idolatrous graves, and heathen graves. The State is scarcely concerned with the graves of other than celebrated individuals; it is, however, concerned with the establishment of graveyards as a measure of health. It is, therefore, of itself, or through its municipalities and other agents, concerned in the preservation of graveyards and the memory of noted men. The Government apart from the State, is, of its charity, concerned with the preservation of the graves of its servants when their relatives fail or are not.

(e) Antiquities.

By this is meant such objects as the written Chronicles of Pate, the Horn of Shella, preserved now by the District Commissioner, Lamu; the old china plates set into various monuments on the Coast. In many cases relics as these have been pillaged or lost.

3. In accepting the foregoing, Government, in the Ancient Monuments Preservation Bill, 1927, has followed the scheme of the Indian Act No. VII of 1904. This Act was the late Marquess Curzon's especial care and it has already abundantly justified its enactment in India.

4. The following is a brief account of some of the monuments, etc., which may come within the terms of the Ordinance; there are other instances and when necessary they will, no doubt, be brought to the attention of Government:—

KIKUYU PROVINCE.

(a) Fort Hall Old Station.

(b) Dick's grave in the Kedong Valley.

The story of Dick is that he was a hunter and met a party of Masai taking their vengeance in 1896 on a caravan of Government porters proceeding to Mombasa. The caravan had molested Masai girls. Dick and some 600 porters were killed by the Masai, and their Laibon, as a result of the manner in which the massacre was dealt with by Mr. (afterwards Sir) Frederick Jackson, swore an unbroken loyalty to the British Government. A cross has been set up over his grave by the League of Mercy.

(c) Graveyard at Fort Smith.

Fort Smith was a famous station in the caravan days. There is a small graveyard there containing the remains of Captain A. J. Haslam, Army Veterinary Department, killed by Akikuyu in 1898; W. A. Harrison, died of lion wounds in 1898; Captain Nelson, Collector at Fort Smith in 1898; Captain Captain Ibrahim Effendi; a Gcan, killed on the Uganda Railway during construction; a child of a Mr. and Mrs. Brink; and an unknown grave.

(d) Graveyard at Fort Hall.

This contains fourteen graves; most of these are of Government servants, one is of Captain F. G. Hall who founded this station.

UKAMBA PROVINCE.

(a) Machakos Fort.

This was built by Mr. John Ainsworth, then H.B.M.'s. Sub-Commissioner, some time before 1899. Machakos was once the centre of up-country Government. The present offices, etc., were completely surrounded by a heavy stone wall with a gatehouse until 1920.

(b) Graveyard at Machakos.

This contains three graves; Captain E. Cook, died 1898; Captain A. I. S. Godfrey, died 1899; and an unknown grave.

(c) Graveyard at Kibwezi.

This contains eight graves; four are unknown, three appear to be marked. Kibwezi was an important stage in the Uganda caravan route.

(d) Graveyard at Kitui.

This contains the grave of Mr. B. R. H. Hiley, Assistant District Commissioner, who died in 1905

(e) Graveyard at Voi.

This contains nine graves, two are marked.

(f) Mr. Ryall's grave near Kima Railway Station.

Mr. Ryall was Superintendent of the Railway Police. He was taken by a lion from a railway carriage in 1900. His death was mentioned in a speech on the Uganda Railway by Lord Salisbury and the story of his end has provided material for writers of fiction.

(g) Graveyard at Ikutha.

This contains the bodies of ten German missionaries.

(h) Graveyards in Nairobi.

These are the South and Forest Cemeteries. The work of enumeration has been done.

KERIO PROVINCE.

This was once the headquarters of the Suk and Turkana District. It dates from about 1908.
