GAZETTE NOTICE No. 1646

THE INDUSTRIAL COURT

CAUSE NO. 57 OF 1989

Parties:

Kenya Union of Commercial Food and Allied Workers and

Inoi Farmers Co-operative Society Limited

Issue in dispute:

Termination of service of Messrs. Njine Karuri, B. W. Kanoru and Mwaniki Kumeria.

THE Kenya Union of Commercial Food and Allied Workers shall hereinafter be referred to as the claimants and the Inoi Farmers Co-operative Society Limited shall hereinafter be referred to as the respondents.

2. The parties were heard in Nairobi on 7th November, 1989, and relied on their written and verbal submissions.

AWARD

3. This dispute was referred to the court by the Minister for Labour under powers conferred upon him by section 8 of the Trade Disputes Act, Cap. 234, laws of Kenya. The court received the Minister's reference dated 5th July, 1989, on 25th July, 1989, together with the statutory certificates from himself and the Labour Commissioner.

The respondents are a farmers co-operative society registered under the Co-operative Societies Act, Cap. 490, and are affiliated to the Kirinyaga District Co-operative Union Limited.

The parties signed a recognition agreement some time back in 1977, and have since had several collective agreements between them.

The first grievant, Mr. Karuri, was employed by the respondents on 1st October, 1978, as a lorry driver at a basic monthly salary of Sh. 560. He benefited from two salary adjustments in 1981, and, at the time of his termination of service on 9th February, 1983, he was earning a salary of Sh. 1,125 per month.

The second grievant, Mr. Kanoru, was engaged by the respondents in 1977 as a general labourer at a monthly salary of Sh. 205. He received salary increments in 1980 and 1982 and at the time of his termination of service on 9th February, 1983, he was working as a night watchman at Kiamwenja Coffee Factory, earning a monthly salary of Sh. 322 and a house allowance of Sh. 50 per month.

The third grievant, Mr. Kumeria was employed by the respondents on 15th January, 1978, also as a general labourer at a salary of Sh. 228 per month. He received a salary adjustment in 1979 and at the time of his termination of service on 9th February, 1983, he was similarly working as a night watchman at the aforementioned coffee factory, and earning a monthly salary of Sh. 251.

The parties met at their own level with a view to resolving the issue, but no agreement was reached, and a trade dispute was therefore reported to the Ministry of Labour. The usual pre-industrial court investigation was carried out by the Ministry; and on 5th March, 1987, the chief industrial relations officer forwarded the following findings and recommendation to the parties:

FINDINGS:

In the case of Mr. Njine Karuri (driver) it is evident that he had worked with the society for five (5) years. In all respects he had not been served with any warning letter and his personal records were clean. The statement that he had failed to take reasonable care of the vehicle by the management culminating into an accident of 20th September, 1982, and driving under the influence of alcohol cannot be accepted, especially when no evidence is adduced to support the allegation against him. The only confirmed statement is the accident of 20th September, 1982, but issues of misconduct and drunkenness have not been established.

In view of the above and taking into consideration the fact that Mr. Karuri had worked for five years with a clean record, I find the decision to dismiss him summarily to have been too harsh and therefore wrongful.

On the issue of Messrs. Bernard Warui and Mwaniki Kumeria the circumstances which led to their dismissal ensued due to loss of electrical motor from the factory. They were accordingly suspended and handed over to the police for investigations.

The two were never charged but instead somebody else who was not an employee of the company was accordingly arrested and convicted of the offence. In mitigation the accused stated that he was misled by somebody whom he did not name.

At no time were the complainants mentioned in the theft and they were summarily dismissed when the matter was still under investigation. I therefore find that the decision to terminate their services to have been wrong.

RECOMMENDATION:

After careful consideration of the parties submissions and the above findings it is recommended that the three (3) employees be paid two (2) months salary/wages as compensation for having suffered wrongful termination of their services.

The claimants accepted the above findings and recommendation, but the respondents rejected them, and the matter is now before the court for consideration.

On careful consideration of the parties' submissions in respect of the first grievant, Mr. Karuri, the court notes that he had worked for the respondents, without any warning letters on record, for a period of just over four years. His service was terminated as aforesaid for careless and/or reckless driving and causing an accident on 20th September, 1982, in which several members of the society were injured and one died.

On page 3 of their submission, the claimants stated as follows:

The accident which occurred was as a result of brake failures. Mr. Njine reported this earlier but was forced to drive. He simply obeyed lawful instructions. The traffic police were better placed to clarify as to who was at fault. We have nothing to prove that Mr. Njine was held responsible for this accident.

On the other hand, the respondents stated under paragraph 3 of their submission that they "had for sometime been dissatisfied with the manner in which the grievant was handling the two lorries which were frequently in need of repair." This contention is supported by the management committee's minutes which stated, inter alia, that the grievant had "caused a lot of damages to both KNA 552 and KRZ 191 due to his careless driving." and that he "was very drunk when he was transporting members of the co-operative to Moi Stadium for KANU rally." They also submitted that the grievant "ran away from the scene of the accident without reporting the matter to the police."

The court, to say the least, is astonished that despite the grievant's appalling driving record and drunkenness, the respondents did not issue him with any warning letters in order to bring about an improvement in his work performance. Furthermore, they also permitted him to continue driving the lorries while under the influence of drink.

The court has in the past repeatedly pointed out that the warning procedure as specified in the collective agreements between the parties has got to be strictly adhered to. In this case, if, as the respondents claim, the grievant's performance had steadily deteriorated, then they should have strictly and properly warned him about his poor performance.

Another very important point which has clearly emerged in this matter is the absence of a police report on the accident. The claimants submitted that the brakes of the lorry had failed, but there is no conclusive evidence to show that they had failed. In view of this unclear situation, the court finds it rather odd that the respondents did not report the accident to the police and/or press them to give their report before the grievant's services were terminated. The court further finds it very unsatisfactory that in a dispute of this nature the parties, particularly the respondents, did not call any supporting evidence.

Although the court has no intention of restricting an employer's right to hire and fire, it finds that in this case the respondents took a precipitate action in dismissing the grievant without waiting for a police report which they should have pressed for, and secondly by not ascertaining properly whether or not the braking system of the lorry had actually failed; and, if the brakes had failed, the reasons for that failure.

After a thorough consideration of the parties' submissions, the court is therefore unable to come to a clear-cut decision as to the circumstances under which the accident took place; and, accordingly, it has decided to give the benefit of doubt to the grievant.

In view of the foregoing reasons, the court finds that the grievant has suffered a wrongful summary dismissal but it rejects the claimants' demand for his reinstatement. Instead the court awards that his summary dismissal be reduced to normal termination of service and he be paid all his terminal benefits. In addition, the grievant should be paid four months' salary for wrongful termination of service that he has suffered.

As regards the second and third grievants, Messrs. Kanoru and Kumeria, the court notes that they had worked for the respondents fairly satisfactorily for a period of six and five years respectively. The grievants had clean records all along until they were summarily dismissed in consequence of theft or loss of the electric motor on the night of 10th September, 1982, when they were on duty as watchmen at Kiamwenja Coffee Factory.

The respondents contended that they investigated the matter and came to the conclusion that the grievants were deeply involved in the theft or loss of the electric motor because they went off duty the next day without reporting its theft or loss or any break-in. In the circumstances, they lost trust and faith in the grievants and summarily dismissed them.

On the other hand, the claimants strongly argued that the grievants were innocent because they were not charged in a court of law for the theft or loss of the electric motor, but one Mr. Obadia Mwangi was. They viewed the respondents' action in terminating the grievants' services before the result of the police investigation as harsh and improper.

The nature of this type of case is that of a duty of fidelity to render faithful and honest service, and a breach of this duty would normally justify an employer in terminating the employee's services for misconduct. The degree of misconduct which will justify dismissal is a question of a fact which will depend on the circumstances of the particular case. So an act of dishonesty in the course of service or a breach of confidence by an employee in, say, conduct prejudicial to the employer's interest will justify summary dismissal.

An employer can rely upon reasons which he reasonably believes in, after sufficient inquiry or investigation, to dismiss an employee even if later proven to be mistaken. Thus, for example, if the employee is suspected of theft, dismissal may be justified even if after the dismissal he is acquitted of the charge in criminal proceedings.

On discovering the misconduct, the employer should take action to dismiss the employee concerned purely on employer/employee relationship, otherwise this will constitute a waiver and the employer cannot at any subsequent time dismiss the employee on account of the offence which he has waived or condoned.

In this particular case now before the court, the respondents promptly terminated the grievants' services, after making sufficient inquiry or investigation, and reasonably believed that the grievants were involved in the theft or loss of the electric motor.

Having made the above observations and after serious consideration of the parties' submissions, and the Ministry's findings and recommendations, the court is convinced that the services of the grievants were terminated by the respondents with full justification, and therefore the claimants' demand for reinstatement and compensation in respect of each of them is accordingly rejected.
