THE INDUSTRIAL COURT

CAUSE No. 2 OF 1970

Parties:

Kenya Union of Commercial Food and Allied Workers
and

Kenya Bankers' (Employers) Association

Issue in Dispute:

Amendment to Recognition Agreement—Union's demands that they should be allowed to represent the category of workers known as "supervisors" in the banks, this would entail going into and determining the definition of the word "supervisor" who is deemed to be excluded from union representation and further to determine whether or not the said supervisors in the banks fall within the said definition.

1. The Kenya Union of Commercial Food and Allied Workers shall hereinafter be referred to as the Claimants and the Kenya Bankers (Employers) Association shall hereinafter be referred to as the Respondents.

2. The parties were heard in Nairobi on the 21st, 22nd, 23rd and 24th April 1970 and again on 18th, 19th and 28th May 1970. In addition to relying on their written and verbal submissions the parties called a number of witnesses. They were—

Claimants.—Messrs. F. V. D'Silva, J. C. C. Patel, J. D. Akumu, P. X. Soares, S. N. Kinuthia, J. W. Ouko.

AWARD

3. The question of union representation of the category of workers known in the banking industry generally as supervisors came before the Industrial Court in Cause No. 40/68 when the issue in question was "amendment to recognition agreement—union representation". The court issued certain directives in its award in the said cause and the parties subsequently sought the Court's interpretation on this matter. The Court gave its ruling on 7th July 1969, as follows:—

"The Court therefore rules that if no definite decision is reached by COTU/FKE on this matter by the end of August 1969, then the Claimants and the Respondents should embark on discussions on the question of Union representation as far as their supervisors are concerned. These discussions will naturally start off by finding an acceptable definition of the word 'supervisor' after which a detailed examination will be made to find out whether or not the supervisors in the banks fit into the agreed definition. In the event of a deadlock the matter should be referred to the Ministry of Labour and if still not settled then it should come before the Industrial Court for adjudication as a fresh dispute. The Court is aware that the discussions between the parties and the efforts of the Ministry of Labour officials are not likely to succeed in solving this complex issue but the Court is not prepared to bypass the pre-Industrial Court steps—the parties must go through this procedure and define their demands and offers and their respective attitudes in respect thereto. The Court hopes that during these discussions it will be brought out what work these 'supervisors' in the banks actually do."

It transpired that COTU/FKE made no progress whatsoever on the question of the definition of "supervisor" by the end of August 1969. In fact nothing has been done up till now by these two central organizations of the workers and employers on this issue which has of late caused such a tremendous amount of industrial conflict.

The parties went through the formal motions before referring the dispute to the Industrial Court for its decision and signed the notification of dispute form on 9th February 1970 and stated the issues in dispute as follows:—

"Association's version:

Recognition Agreement—definition of 'supervisory'.

Union's version:

Amendment to Recognition Agreement—definition of supervisory and what they actually do."

The Court held a preliminary hearing on 27th February 1970, and after hearing the arguments, ruled the issue in dispute to be as set forth hereinabove under the appropriate heading.

The current Recognition Agreement between the parties was signed on 3rd August 1962, and the present position regarding union representation is as laid down in clause 2 of that Agreement which reads as follows:—

"The Union shall be recognized as the negotiating body representing employees of members of the Association with the exception of officers who, for the purposes of this Agreement, shall be defined as follows:—

"Those who exercise confidential, directive, administrative, representational or supervisory functions, and the lowest level of management to which disciplinary matters and decisions are delegated. Such levels of staff are as set out in Appendix D."

The aforesaid Appendix D excludes from union representation the following categories of staff:—

"All officers and members of staff having authority to check and/or supervise the working of any department or section of any office in Kenya.

Those designated . . . , sub-officers, supervisors and . . .

Departmental Heads with signing status. . . .

. . . , Senior Assistants, Assistants, . . .

Employees having signing authority.

All Authorized Signatures and Heads of Departments or Sections.

Those accorded from time to time signing status.

Those accorded signing powers from time to time."

One of the Claimants' witnesses, Mr. P. X. Soares, in his evidence stated that prior to the 1962 Agreement, the Respondents agreed that the supervisors could be members of the Claimants and be represented by them except that they would not be allowed to go on strike, hence the detailed description of officers which appears in Appendix D of the Recognition Agreement. He gave very detailed account of what transpired before the Agreement was signed and in fact explained that all the persons present there at that time split into seven groups and discussed who should remain on duty in the event of there being a strike in the banks and eventually the said Appendix D was worked out.

Subsequently the Local Director of the Barclays Bank D.C.O. issued a staff circular letter of 26th February 1963 as follows:—

"It is evident that the second paragraph of the Recognition Agreement, which deals with the categories of staff for which the Union is recognized as the negotiating body, has deterred some of our signing officials from joining the Union on the grounds that they could not be represented by them.

We would like to make it clear that the Bank has no objection to signing officials joining the Union, and, in fact, in our view any member of our staff who is locally engaged is free to do so, but it must be understood that in the event of a strike occurring, those officials specified in Appendix D of the Agreement are excluded from strike action, and must remain on duty."

The Respondents' submission that whatever transpired prior to the signing of the 1962 Agreement is not relevant any longer after the document had been signed is valid but the evidence of Mr. Soares and the Local Director's letter assume great importance in the present dispute where the Claimants are trying to prove that the Respondents had even prior to 1962 no objection to the supervisors being represented by them. Therefore this can be a strong argument in their favour in the present dispute.

This particular problem in the banking industry is very much interlinked with the various categories of staff that had been agreed to be excluded from union representation by the Kenya Federation of Labour (now COTU) and FKE. It is common ground that the staff falling within the definitions of "confidential", "directive and administrative", "representational" and "supervisory" are to be excluded from union representation. Various definitions were worked out and agreed on. The one relevant to the present dispute is that of "supervisory". In April 1962, the National Joint Consultative Council of KFL/FKE agreed on the following definition:—

"Supervisory—

A person who supervises the work of others, who is responsible for a section of the activities of the Company, who is required by Management as part of his duties to make recommendations in connection with hiring, firing, promotion, demotion or disciplinary action, and to whom subordinate staff would apply in the first instance for the remedy of grievances."

Certain difficulties having arisen on the question of who was a supervisor or not within the context of the aforesaid definition, the parties made a further attempt in 1963 to work out a revised definition and the following definition of the word "supervisory" was produced:—

"A person who supervises the work of others, who is responsible for a section of the activities of the Company, who is required by Management as part of his duties to make recommendations in connexion with hiring, firing, promotion, or disciplinary action, and to whom subordinate staff would apply in the first instance for the remedy of grievances, if in connexion with the foregoing the exercise of such authority requires independent judgment (this therefore excludes from this definition Charge Hands)."

This second definition has been repudiated by the trade union movement on the ground that the minutes of the meeting at which this definition was tabled were never confirmed. This has thrown the whole question wide open and there is considerable confusion on this point in the country at present.

There are several hundred recognition agreements in force in the country just now which on the question of recognition contain the following clause:—

"The company affords full recognition to the Union as a properly constituted and representative body and the sole Labour organization representing the interests of workers who are in the employment of . . . concerning rates of pay and overtime, hours of work, method of wage payment, paid leave, duration of employment, collection of union dues, retirement benefits, medical benefits, principles of promotion, principles of redundancy and other generally accepted terms and conditions of service. This shall not include Supervisory Staff as defined from time to time by the FKE and COTU(K)."

Yet there are other agreements where in certain industries supervisors are allowed not only to join the union but to be represented by them and in fact evidence during the hearing was produced to this effect.

The Claimants themselves being one of the largest unions in the country did not appear to have followed a consistent policy on this question, as the Respondents produced several agreements where the Claimants have accepted the position as laid down in the FKE/COTU directives on the question of non-representation by union of certain categories of staff, and again the Claimants themselves produced some agreements in which they have been accorded the right to represent the supervisors. This is most unsatisfactory, to say the least.

In the present dispute the parties have agreed to amend clause 2 of their current Agreement to read as follows:—

"The Union shall be recognized as the negotiating body representing employees of members of the Association with the exception of those who, for the purposes of this Agreement, shall be defined as Confidential, Directive and Administrative, Representational and Supervisory staff.

Such levels of staff are as set out in Appendix D."

They have gone further and have already agreed, after some discussion, on the definitions of "confidential", "directive and administrative" and "representational" but they got stuck on the word "supervisory".

The Respondents have put forward the following definition:—

"Supervisory—

All Supervisors, Sub-officers, Heads of Sections and those accorded signing status from time to time—provided that they supervise the work of others, they are responsible for the activities of a Section of the Bank, they are required by Management as part of their duties to make recommendations in connexion with hiring, firing, promotion or disciplinary action and to whom Subordinate Staff would apply in the first instance for the remedy of grievances if, in connexion with the foregoing, the exercise of such authority requires independent judgement."

As against this, the Claimants have put forward their definition of "supervisory" which they want the Court to endorse as follows:—

"Members of staff with full powers to hire, fire, promote and administer disciplinary action."

The dispute proceeded from here and the parties put forward their respective arguments in support of their definition. The Respondents argued that in view of the numerous agreements which the Claimants had signed based on the FKE/COTU agreement on this matter and the fact that their definition of "supervisory" was based on the definition agreed between FKE and COTU and further because COTU had not taken any steps whatsoever to put forward their proposals on the revised definition of "supervisory" which they want, the Court should have no hesitation whatsoever in accepting their definition.

The Claimants on the other hand maintained that as the supervisors in the banks were no more than "glorified clerks" and that the real management rested mainly in the hands of the covenanted staff in the various banks, they are the only people who should be strictly defined as supervisors. Therefore they asked the Court to accept their definition.

It was inevitable that the principle of freedom of association and I.L.O. Convention Nos. 84 and 87 should have been referred to at considerable length in these proceedings. Suffice it to say that all the rights guaranteed under the constitution carry with them considerable obligations the sight of which must not be lost.

Freedom of association can be qualified by law, by the rules of the organization or by collective agreement. In fact this is what has been done in the banking industry in Kenya as a result of the 1962 Recognition Agreement. Convention 87 does not give the unqualified right of any person to join any union.

The dispute before the Court is to determine the status of supervisors so that there should be no doubt in future as to where they belong.

There is ample evidence to show what these supervisors in the banks do. Their function mainly is to append their signatures to various banking transactions which invariably involve money and are important because customers' money is being handled. Once a clerk is accorded the signing status then he is called a supervisor which in Barclays Bank D.C.O. starts with "B" and then leads through promotion to "A". In National and Grindlays Bank they are called Sub-officers Grade I and II. Other banks also have similar arrangements with certain variations.

The Respondents have claimed that in addition to above, their other no less important function is to make recommendations on hiring, firing and promotion and they initiate disciplinary proceedings as well in addition to being in charge of a section of the banks' activities.

The Court has very carefully considered the whole evidence as given by the various witnesses and has come to the conclusion that whereas in Barclays and National and Grindlays Banks officers with signing status "A" and Sub-officers Grade I respectively carry out to a large extent all the functions as claimed by the Respondents, it is far from so in the case of those supervisors who are accorded "B" signing status or are Sub-officers Grade II. In Barclays Bank a clerk who is given the signing powers is issued with the following letter:—

"You will have been advised by your Branch Manager that you have been granted signing powers on behalf of the Bank in the 'B' category. He will instruct you as to the use of your signature, but we wish to take this opportunity of drawing your attention to the necessity for the exercise of the utmost caution and prudence in the use of the powers which have been given to you. You must be personally satisfied in all cases before placing your signature upon any documents and, in no circumstances, must you sign on instructions from other parties or merely because an 'A' signatory has signed before you. We feel sure that you will exercise that discretion of which we have considered you capable, but we remind you that if you feel uncertain in any case you have the right of approach to the Manager."

It will be seen that there is no mention of any other duties or responsibilities regarding hiring, firing, promotion and/or for taking or recommending disciplinary action. In fact on promotion to status "A" also no formal letter is issued spelling out the various responsibilities the exercise of which gives the person the status of being part of Management.

In National and Grindlays Bank the position is slightly better in that when a clerk is appointed a sub-officer Grade II he is at least given in writing his new salary scale but again there is no mention of the other duties regarding making recommendations on hiring, firing, promotion and on disciplinary matters.

The Court appreciates and has taken due note of the evidence of Mr. Whittet of Barclays Bank and Mr. Mankelov of the National and Grindlays Bank. As against this evidence, there is the testimony of Messrs. D'Silva and Soares, two experienced and long service employees of the Barclays Bank. Both of them have taken active part in the union affairs for many years and have been in the vanguard in their fight for supervisors to be represented by the Claimants. They gave very vivid and detailed account of what the supervisors with signing status "A" and "B" do and how they are the laughing stock of the clerks whom they supervise as in many instances they earn less than the clerks. Here it should be noted that the expectations of a person who is appointed a supervisor are greater than those of the clerks. Both these witnesses categorically stated that they are definitely not any part of the management and are not treated as such—in fact they are "glorified clerks". During the hearing it was accepted that the learned counsel for the Respondents in one of the earlier proceedings between the parties had coined the phrase "glorified clerks" to describe these so-called "supervisors". The Respondents have of course denied that they are glorified clerks while admitting that it was their advocate who had originally invented this term.

Messrs. D'Silva and Soares did not accept that there would be a conflict of loyalty if the supervisors were also to be represented by the same union as the clerks. Both these gentlemen are non-citizens and would in due course be replaced by Kenyans, mainly Africans.

The Claimants also called one Mr. S. N. Kinuthia, an employee of National and Grindlays Bank, to give evidence but the Court is not inclined to attach much weight to his evidence as he has been dismissed recently from the service.

Mr. Denis Akumu produced in Court "a Comparative Study of Supervisors' Rights to Organize and Bargain Collectively in the Private Sector". This document is an impartial study and sets out the position of supervisors vis-à-vis the unions catering for other workers in various countries. He also said that the definition drawn up by a subcommittee of FKE/COTU which was subsequently revised was never agreed and that the matter was under consideration just now. He advised the Court to issue an interim award on this highly controversial issue.

On the other hand the Respondents called two African supervisors who have recently been granted "B" signing powers and those of Sub-officer Grade II in Barclays and National and Grindlays Banks respectively. Both of them said in evidence that they did not want the Claimants to represent them—they would prefer to have a separate union of the supervisors.

One of them, Mr. B. Okul, was the Chairman of the Claimants' Nairobi branch until February this year when he resigned from his post. The Claimants came to know of his resignation during the hearing when Mr. Okul was giving evidence and in fact on that day he still appeared as the Branch Chairman of the Claimants' Nairobi branch in the files of the Registrar of Trade Unions.

This witness who is an experienced person in industrial relations was of the view that union membership and representation was incompatible with the worker's new status of supervisor as it would lead to not only embarrassment but to serious conflict of loyalty. Both these witnesses stated that the majority of supervisors did not favour the idea of the Claimants being given the right to represent them and added that all the supervisors they had come across were of the view that they should form their own union as distinct from the Claimants.

The Respondents have seriously urged that the supervisors can exercise their right of freedom of association by forming their own union. The Court has given considerable thought to this suggestion but has come to the conclusion that it is not desirable to have more than one union in an industry in Kenya. The formation by supervisors of their own association is, at best, a rarely adequate arrangement implying acceptance of an unsatisfactory situation in which the people who are called supervisors are neither workers nor members of management. This is exactly the position of supervisors in the banking industry according to Messrs. D'Silva and Soares. Their complaint is that the supervisors feel insecure as they have nobody to represent them. They are entirely at the mercy of the management who makes them work, in the language of one witness, Mr. Patel, like "donkeys" without adequate reward. Mr. Patel acted on probation as a supervisor but was not confirmed and reverted back to clerical grade. But he is an extremely competent clerk and an active union official.

The supervisors enjoy substantially the same terms and conditions of employment as the clerks except that their salary is better than the clerks in the long run. In the recent past the wage increase granted to clerks was also granted to them except the last time when the supervisors were given a 7 per cent wage increase as against the clerks' 6 per cent. The Court notes that by that time the Claimants were vigorously pursuing the right to represent the supervisors.

The Court is of the view, particularly due to the evidence of Mr. Soares as to what took place prior to the 1962 Recognition Agreement and the Local Director's letter of 26th February 1963, that the Banks' main concern in denying the Claimants the right to represent supervisors was to have some workers on duty in the event of strike. As it transpired later on, despite this provision, everyone, including the supervisors, with one or two exceptions, have taken part in strikes that have taken place since 1962. There is no denying the fact that the Respondents' attitude has hardened on this point after securing the 1962 Recognition Agreement which was signed despite the protests of Mr. Soares who eventually accepted the Respondents' statement that they, the workers, should have confidence in them as they were good and enlightened employers.

Mr. Whittet produced an organizational chart of a medium size branch of Barclays Bank showing the position occupied by "A" and "B" signatories. At the Court's request the National and Grindlays Bank, Standard Bank and Bank of Baroda also marked the position their supervisors occupied on the same chart produced by Mr. Whittet. It is significant that the Sub-officers in National and Grindlays Bank are at the level of "B" signatories in Barclays Bank, as are the supervisors of Bank of Baroda. The supervisors in the Standard Bank are at a point between "A" and "B" signatories of Barclays Bank.

The Claimants during the closing stages of the hearing and after the hearing was concluded, submitted to the Court letters bearing signatures purported to be those of supervisors in the various banks requesting the Court that they wanted the Claimants to represent them.

This sort of evidence is most unsatisfactory and on which the Court would be loath to rely. The evidence of the Respondents' witnesses on this point is also inconclusive as the Court cannot overrule the possibility that these witnesses probably hope and expect a reward in the shape of promotion for opting to give evidence on behalf of the Respondents. However, this point is not all that important or material to the issue in dispute because if the Court finds that these supervisors or some of them do not fall within the definition of "supervisory" in order to exclude them from union representation then that is the end of the matter as far as they are concerned. In other words the Claimants would be the proper union to represent them if they so wish.

As the Claimants could not represent the supervisors due to the 1962 Recognition Agreement they have not done anything for the supervisors. They are under a pressure now to achieve something quick otherwise they will lose the membership of hundreds of these supervisors.

The Respondents' arguments very briefly can be summed up as follows:—

- (a) The current definition of supervisor has been acceptable in the past and should be retained. They assert that the supervisors do supervise and thus functionally fit in with the definition.
- (b) Countries where supervisors are represented by the same trade unions to which their subordinates also belong are very much in minority (Britain is one). As far as Kenya industry is concerned it is nothing but a novel idea for which there is no suitable answer at present and therefore unacceptable yet.
- (c) They agree that at the moment the supervisors have no union to represent them. But they argue that supervisors like any other citizens can have recourse to civil litigation against the bank in respect of breach of terms and conditions of employment.
- If the supervisors so wished they could have their own separate association for collective bargaining.
- (d) The I.L.O. Conventions or the Kenya Constitution referred to, do not give unqualified freedom either of association or of collective bargaining. The freedoms are not absolute.
- (e) They do accept some supervisors in the banks have at the same time been active union members; but not without constant conflicts of split loyalty between the employer and the union, especially during industrial crises.

The Court has given anxious thought to the question of the definition of "supervisor" and the stalemate that exists on it at the FKE/COTU level. The trade unions want to extend their right of representation to as high a level as possible. The real difficulty on the definition has arisen in its interpretation because the revised definition of September 1963 as it stands is reasonable by any test.

For instance in the United States Labour Management Relations Act the word "supervisor" is defined as follows:—

"The term 'Supervisor' means any individual having the authority in the interests of the employer, to hire, transfer, suspend, lay off, recall, promote, discharge, assign, reward or discipline other employees, or responsibly to direct them, or to adjust their grievances or effectively to recommend such action, if in connexion with the foregoing the exercise of such authority is not of a merely routine or clerical nature, but requires the use of independent judgment."

The definition of the word "supervisor" wherever it has been statutorily defined is more or less the same with few minor variations here and there.

The Court is inclined to accept the definition of the supervisor as it stands revised at the FKE/COTU level for the purposes of this dispute, particularly in view of the fact that the Claimants have themselves in many agreements, which they have concluded, subscribed to it.

After a careful consideration of all the arguments, submissions and evidence that Court rules that the definition of the word "supervisory" in the banking industry should be as follows:—

All those officers who supervise the work of others, who are responsible for the activities of a section of the Bank, who are required by Management as part of their duties to make effective recommendations in connexion with hiring, firing, promotion or disciplinary action and to whom subordinate staff would apply in the first instance for the remedy of grievances if, in connexion with the foregoing the exercise of such authority requires independent judgment.

Now coming to the question of whether or not the supervisors in the banks fall within this definition, the Court finds that the granting of signing status is not relevant for the purposes of determining this issue. The granting of signing status is an integral part of the functions of the various officers in the banking industry. It is part of normal routine work and the fact that certain persons make sure that the work being done in the bank is done properly without mistakes does not make those persons part of management. The granting of signing status "B" is a promotion for clerks and the Court finds that they then are somewhat like senior clerks with added responsibilities derived from the signing powers.

The essential ingredient for the purposes of declaring the supervisors beyond union representation is "who are required by Management as part of their duties to make effective recommendations in connexion with hiring, firing, promotion or disciplinary action and to whom subordinate staff would apply in the first instance for the remedy of grievances if, in connexion with the foregoing, the exercise of such authority requires independent judgment".

The Court rules that for a supervisor to be denied union representation he must be empowered to carry out all the aforesaid duties which are interlinked. If a person is simply in charge of a section of an undertaking and supervises the work without having the powers to make effective recommendations on the second part of the definition regarding hiring, firing, promotion and discipline, then there can be no objection to his being represented by the union.

From the evidence that was produced during the hearing the Court has no hesitation in coming to the conclusion that supervisors with "B" signing status in the Barclays Bank and Sub-officers Grade II in the National and Grindlays Bank do not fall within the aforesaid definition. A belated attempt appears to have been made to vest in these supervisors some powers which would make them appear to fit in the aforesaid definition. The Court is not inclined to accept that such important powers regarding making effective recommendations on hiring, firing, promotion or disciplinary action are vested in these supervisors verbally or that they are deemed to be there as a matter of course with the granting of "B" signing status or on promotion to Sub-officer Grade II.

On a balance of probabilities the Court accepts by and large the evidence of Messrs. D'Silva and Soares as against the evidence of Messrs. Okul and Gicharu. The latter have not yet gained the same experience as the other two. The fact that both Mr. D'Silva and Mr. Soares are non-citizens and would in the near future be replaced is a fact which goes in their favour because they have no vested interest as such and there is little chance of their retirement benefits being improved by the Claimants. They stand to gain nothing from this.

The Court cannot get away from the fact that right from the beginning as far back as 1962, prior to the signing of the Recognition Agreement, the banks' main concern in excluding the supervisors from union representation was to have a nucleus of persons on duty in the event of a strike. This is borne out by the letter quoted hereinabove written by the Local Director of Barclays Bank. Since then the Respondents have naturally consolidated on the concession which they obtained from the Claimants.

The fact is that out of a total of 4,865 persons engaged in the banking industry in Kenya 450 are executive and managerial and 478 are supervisory. This means that a total of 928 persons are denied union representation. This is an unsatisfactory state of affairs and the Court cannot accept that such a large body of persons carry out all the functions set out above in the definition of "supervisory". It is significant that the Respondents' own learned advocate sometime in the past had coined the phrase "glorified clerks" when referring to these supervisors in some previous proceedings. The Court finds that he must have had good reasons to do so. If that was not the position the Respondents should have asked him to withdraw this phrase and put forward the submission that they are part of the management.

In view of the fact that the other banks have also indicated the position of their supervisors on the chart produced by Mr. Whittet regarding a medium size branch the Court has thought it fit to use the terminology of Barclays Bank signatories "A" and "B" in making its award.

After a careful consideration of all the evidence the Court has come to the conclusion that only those supervisors who are in the category of signing status "A" in Barclays Bank, and those who are Sub-officers Grade I in the National and Grindlays Bank and those supervisors in the other banks who can be classified in the same bracket as the said signatories "A" and Sub-officers Grade I, fall into the aforesaid definition of "supervisory" and are therefore deemed to be excluded from union representation.

The Court would like to make it clear that the evidence of both Mr. Whittet and Mr. Mankelov has been considered most carefully by the Court but the Court cannot accept their view that all the supervisors should be excluded from union representation.

The Court would like to direct that in the event of any disagreement arising between the parties regarding the determination of the position of supervisors in the other banks vis-à-vis the supervisors with "A" powers and Sub-officers Grade I then they should apply to the President of the Court for the appointment of a subcommittee to go into this question and once the subcommittee has been appointed and it completes its work the findings of the said subcommittee would be final and conclusive.
