Maintaining of landscaped gardens, terraces, conservation and management of the vegetation and gardens. Clearing vegetation only in construction areas and demarcating areas where no clearing will happen.
Changes in surface and sub-surface hydrology	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> During construction, the design (of the drainage system) should ensure that surface flow is drained suitably into the public drains provided to control flooding within the site. Drainage channels should be installed in all areas that generate or receive surface water. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Cover the channels with gratings or other suitable and approved materials to prevent accidents and entry of dirt that would compromise flow of run-off. • The channels should be designed with regards to the expected peak volumes. • The drainage channels shall be self-cleaning (with a suitable gradient). • Storm water generated from roof catchments shall be harvested and stored for use. • The side walkways, driveways and other open areas shall be paved using pervious materials such as cabro to encourage water recharge and reduce run-off volume.
