GAZETTE NOTICE No. 1959

THE INDUSTRIAL COURT

CAUSE No. 9 OF 1981

Parties:

Kenya Management Staff Association
and

D.T. Dobie & Company (K) Limited

Issue in dispute:

Dismissal of Mrs. G. Mwanzi.

1. The Kenya Management Staff Association shall hereinafter be referred to as the Claimants and D. T. Dobie & Co. (K) Ltd. shall hereinafter be referred to as the Respondents.

2. The parties were heard in Nairobi on 26th, 27th and 29th May, 1981 and in addition to relying on their written and verbal submissions called the following witnesses to give evidence on oath:

Claimants.—Mrs. G. W. Mwanzi.

Respondents.—F. Makau.

AWARD

3. The notification of Dispute Form "A" dated 27th June, 1980 duly signed by the parties was received by the Court on 19th February, 1981 together with the statutory certificates signed by the Minister for Labour and the Labour Commissioner.

The lady involved in this dispute, Mrs. G. Mwanzi, started working for the respondents as an accounts clerk on 29th October, 1975. Previously she had worked for the National Social Security Fund for two years as an accounts officer and then had joined Wellcome Kenya Ltd. as an accounts clerk but left them as a senior accounts clerk when, as claimed by her, she was victimized because she was an assistant shop-steward. She told the Court that she was paid five months' salary by way of compensation by Wellcome.

It is not disputed that the Respondents sponsored her for further studies as a result of which she passed AIA Part I (old syllabus) and ACCA—"A".

Her services were terminated on 29th January, 1980 when she was simply advised that she had been summarily dismissed from that day. No reason for her summary dismissal was stated in this letter.

The Claimants reported a trade dispute to the Minister for Labour and an investigation was carried out by the Ministry and the findings and recommendation were conveyed to the parties on 20th June, 1980. These were that the action taken by the Respondents in terminating her services was justified with the following recommendation:

"After careful consideration of the foregoing and particularly the fact that Mrs. Mwanzi had to stay away from her family because of her work and the subsequent social strains and stresses I recommend that her dismissal be reduced to normal termination so that she can be paid her terminal benefits in accordance with her letter of appointment."

The Claimants rejected the above findings and recommendation mainly on the ground that they were not given an opportunity by the investigator to answer to the points made by the Respondents in answer to their submission to the investigator.

It is not disputed that Mrs. Mwanzi was given three warning letters on 28th September, 1978, 21st June and 31st July, 1979, the last one being third and final warning. What is disputed is whether or not Mrs. Mwanzi accepted the warning letters or rejected them by sending appropriate replies to the Respondents. Mrs. Mwanzi claimed on oath that she replied to each and every warning letter repudiating the allegations made against her and giving satisfactory explanation in respect of each incident on 5th October, 1978 and 28th June and 9th August, 1979. The copies of all these letters appear as appendices to the Claimants' memorandum. The Respondents, however, stated in Court through their spokesman that they had received none of these letters. They however, did not call the officer concerned to give evidence on oath on this particular point. So the Court is left with the evidence of Mrs. Mwanzi on this point on oath that she did reply to the warning letters as stated. Even in the Respondents' written submission there is no specific denial of Mrs. Mwanzi's replies to the warning letters and there is only a vague reference to them if at all in paragraph 6 of their submissions which reads as follows:

"On 7th September, 1976 Mrs. Mwanzi and another employee were warned for shouting to each other in the group chief accounts' office. This was the beginning of series of warning letters none of which Mrs. Mwanzi took notice of nor properly challenged as it is being alleged by the Claimants."

In these circumstances the Court finds that Mrs. Mwanzi did reply to these warning letters. It is obvious that she having once been an assistant shopsteward is well versed in these matters and it is highly unlikely that she would have taken these things lying down. So the picture that emerges is that there are these warning letters issued to her but there is a detailed reply to each one of them and no further action appears to have been taken by the Respondents one way or the other to come to a definite conclusion on the incidents contained in the warning letters. Even without going into details of these incidents the Court finds that the third and final warning which was given to her for being 45 minutes late in reporting for duty in the morning of 30th July, 1979 was extremely harsh in the personal circumstances of Mrs. Mwanzi. Her husband had been transferred to Mombasa and had taken the children with him and Mrs. Mwanzi used to visit the family over the weekends. On this particular Monday when she was coming back from Mombasa the train was late. In these circumstances the Respondences should have been more considerate, more so because despite Mrs. Mwanzi's request to be transferred to Mombasa so that she could be near her husband and children she was denied this.

The Court would now like to deal with the incident that led to her dismissal.

On 24th January, 1980 the group chief accountant gave instructions that May, 1979 postings to account 65 should be checked. He gave these instructions to Francis Makau who appears to have been somewhat senior to Mrs. Mwanzi in the chain of command. He told the Court that he received instructions from the group chief accountant that Mrs. Mwanzi was to check June, 1979 postings. Mrs. Mwanzi at the time was engaged on costing or transit accounts work which she had done half way.

There is no dispute that Mr. Makau approached her and told her of the group chief accountant's instructions but there is a serious disagreement on what transpired thereafter with Mr. Makau maintaining that Mrs. Mwanzi said that she had to complete the transit accounts by Friday, 25th January and that she would come to do A65 on 26th January. Mr. Makau objected to this and Mrs. Mwanzi then went in to see Mr. Colaco and after coming out of his office she said that it had been agreed that she would come to do A65 on Saturday 26th January. After that Mr. Makau told the machine room people that Mrs. Mwanzi had agreed to come and do A65 on Saturday. Mrs. Mwanzi on the other hand stated in evidence that she told Mr. Makau that she would be working for about seven to nine days on transit account and suggested that after she finished that she would work on A65 if Mr. Makau had not found the difference by that time. She added that she further told him that if by time she finished the work she was doing and he had still not found the difference she would assist him even if it meant coming on a Saturday if she did not go to Mombasa. She added that her husband had told her to go to Mombasa that weekend and she proceeded there which she would not have done if she had agreed to work on Saturday as mentioned by Mr. Makau.

Mr. Makau in his evidence also stated that on Saturday 26th January he and others had reported for duty in anticipation of Mrs. Mwanzi also coming to work on A65 but she failed to come after having herself agreed to do so.

The Court has carefully considered the conflicting evidence given by both sides on this particular aspect of the dispute and on balance of probability has come to the conclusion that Mrs. Mwanzi had agreed to come and work on Saturday but later changed her mind and did not come but went to Mombasa.

It is, however, a different matter whether or not the Respondents under these circumstances concerning the incident of Saturday 26th January were right in handing out a summary dismissal to her. The one thing that sticks out is that she was not ordered to come and work on Saturday and she had herself volunteered to do so, so there can be no question of her disobeying a lawful order. The fact that at the Respondents' undertaking they operate on a five-day week also has some bearing on this dispute because Saturday is not a working day. Surprisingly a memo addressed to her from the group chief accountant is very brief and reads as follows:

"You should have attended work on Saturday 26th January, 1980 in the morning but failed to do so. Would you please furnish me with an explanation."

To this Mrs. Mwanzi replied as follows:

"I am referring to your JOC Ref. NBI/ACC/R/101/80 which indicates that I was to attend work on Saturday the 26th.

I am sorry to inform you that nobody informed me about my coming to work on Saturday and as such I wouldn't have come without prior arrangements."

The Respondents have pleaded in their memo that when she was called to a meeting on Monday to explain why she did not come to work on Saturday she denied being aware that she was required to work on that day i.e. 26th January. When those involved related the story of the arrangement made on 24th January she changed her stand and said she was aware but she could not come. The Respondents however have not proved this point as they did not call any witnesses to give evidence of this particular meeting. All that the Court has is the evidence of Mr. Makau who said that he went to the office of the group chief accountant and found him in a meeting but he did not take part in that meeting as he had gone there for some other purpose. He denied that he discussed the conduct of Mrs. Mwanzi when he went to the office of the group chief accountant. Apart from this there is no evidence before the Court on any meeting which the Respondents' senior officers had between themselves or with Mrs. Mwanzi. So there again the Court is left with an impression that the Respondents did not give an opportunity to Mrs. Mwanzi to explain her position on this incident.

The next stage is the Respondents' contention that the company secretary wanted her later but she could not be found anywhere but appeared an hour later. Mrs. Mwanzi's statement on this point was as follows:

"It was about 11 a.m. when my sister approached with high blood problem and requested me Sh. 200. I said I had no such money except Sh. 20. On learning how sick she was I told her wait for a while I ask permission to go to the bank. I found that all my bosses seemed to have a sort of meeting with company secretary in group chief accountant's office. I therefore left a word with my co-workers that I am going to the bank and I would be back as soon as possible. On my arrival at around 11.45 a.m. I informed Mr. Makau that I had been to the bank and I had left a message that I was going to the bank."

The Respondents' representative made certain comments about Mrs. Mwanzi's sister who incidentally also works for them but in the absence of any evidence the Court is not prepared to accept them. The Court has repeatedly pointed out that the parties should strictly prove all the allegations they make in the Court otherwise they will remain mere allegations.

The Court has also considered Mrs. Mwanzi's conduct in not mentioning the warning letters that had been served on her and the replies she had given when she was applying for a loan. She said that there was no regulation which required her to do so. The Court, however, is of the view that an employee who is seeking a loan from an employer has, to say the least, to be honest in all respects. Mrs. Mwanzi was clearly in the wrong by not doing so.

The Court would like to add that it has applied its mind seriously to the Claimants' submission that she had been dismissed for her trade union activities and because of professional jealousy which her superiors had towards her because she claimed that she was better qualified than all of them. The Court feels that her involvement in the trade union activities may have influenced the Respondents in dishing out warning letters to her but there certainly was no element of any professional jealousy which any one had towards her.

The Court has carefully considered the submissions and the evidence tendered in support thereof by the parties in this dispute and has come to the conclusion, mainly because Mrs. Mwanzi's replies to her previous warning letters had not been finalized by the Respondents by instituting proper inquiries and establishing the truth of the allegations made against her and the fact that the third and the final warning was harsh under the circumstances mentioned hereinabove and that the incident of 24th January, 1980 that led to Mrs. Mwanzi's dismissal, at the most, warranted a severe warning that her dismissal was not justified. The Court finds that the Respondents were getting a bit fed up with Mrs. Mwanzi's conduct which was more of a nuisance than anything else but they acted rather precipitately and the Court therefore finds that Mrs. Mwanzi has suffered a wrongful dismissal.

In assessing whether to award a reinstatement in favour of Mrs. Mwanzi or to give her compensation the Court has taken into consideration the indications it got during the hearing from the evidence produced that the way Mrs. Mwanzi was behaving she could not have lasted very long in her employment. The Court therefore has come to the conclusion that she does not deserve reinstatement and that the dictates of justice in this dispute do not warrant a heavy compensation either. After carefully weighing all the circumstances of this dispute the Court awards that the Respondents should pay Mrs. Mwanzi only four months' salary by way of compensation for the wrongful dismissal that she has suffered. This compensation includes the notice period to which she would be entitled on a normal termination.

Given in Nairobi the 17th June, 1981.
