THE INDUSTRIAL COURT

CAUSE NO. 6 OF 1984

Parties:
Tailors and Textiles Workers' Union
and Simplex (E.A.) Ltd.

Issues in dispute:

- House allowance.
- Retirement benefits.
- Leave allowance.
- Wages.
- Effective date.

THE Tailors and Textiles Workers' Union shall hereinafter be referred to as the claimants and Simplex (E.A.) Ltd. shall hereinafter be referred to as the respondents.

2. The parties were heard in Nairobi on 18th June, 1984, and relied on their written and verbal submissions.

AWARD

3. The Notification of Dispute Form "A" dated 22nd November, 1983, duly signed by the parties was received by the court on 16th January, 1984, together with the statutory certificate signed by the Labour Commissioner.

After the parties had commenced making their opening submissions the court gave them an opportunity of trying to discuss the matter at their own level with a view to settling some of the issues. As a result of the short adjournment granted by the court they were able to resolve three items in dispute. The issue on retirement benefits was withdrawn by the claimants and the respondents agreed to pay a house allowance of KSh. 189 for one employee and KSh. 130 for the other employee. It was also agreed that the respondents pay their two employees leave travelling allowance of KSh. 140. The parties, however, could not agree on the issue of wages and the effective date.

On the issue of wages the claimants' demand is 35 per cent wage increase for a period of two years, i.e. 17½ per cent each year. They further demand that the wage increases should be from 1st July, 1982, and that the collective agreement should remain in force for a period of two years from that date.

The respondents on the other hand have offered a 5 per cent wage increase each year. The reason put forward by them for this low offer was that for the year 1982/83 they had suffered an accumulated loss of KSh. 72,954 and pleaded that they were dealing in canvas goods and they had not been allowed to import their raw materials. The local material that they had used was four times more expensive than the imported one and its quality was also poor. They also lost their markets in Tanzania and Uganda. In the meantime the respondents stated that they had paid their employees in accordance with the legal rates.

The claimants pointed out that the respondents should strictly belong to the tents and manufacturers group which group paid much superior rates than what the respondents were paying their two employees. In any case they asked the court to make a reasonable award in this dispute.

After careful consideration of all the submissions the court awards that the respondents should give their employees a 10 per cent wage increase each year with effect from 1st July, 1982, and the next one with effect from 1st July, 1983.

On the issue of effective date the court rules that the collective agreement should be effective from 1st July, 1982, and should remain in force for a period of two years.

Issues in dispute:

Refusal to implement the collective agreement RCA 246 of 1980:

- (a) Proper gradings of staff into new minimum wages.
- (b) Wages increase of the first year and calculation based consolidation monthly salary.
- (c) House allowance group IV.

THE Union of Scientific, Research, Technical and Allied Employees (K) shall hereinafter be referred to as the claimants and Mapsurveys Ltd. shall hereinafter be referred to as the respondents.

2. The parties were heard in Nairobi on 28th May, 1984, and relied on their written and verbal submissions.

AWARD

3. The Notification of Dispute Form "A" dated 23rd May, 1983, duly signed by the parties was received by the court on 16th September together with the statutory certificate signed by the Labour Commissioner.

The parties signed a two-year agreement effective from 1st October, 1980, which expired on 30th September, 1982. The dispute before the court has arisen on the alleged wrongful implementation of the said agreement by the respondents specifically on the aforesaid three issues.

Proper gradings of staff into new minimum wages

It appears that the parties carried out a job classification exercise of some sorts prior to agreeing on the grading as they appeared in the collective agreement. They agreed on various grades for operators and surveyors, draftsmen, drivers and messengers.

The court is satisfied from the evidence that the parties through an error when the job categories of operators and surveyors were amalgamated left the messengers to appear in grade 4 instead of them appearing under grade 5.

The claimants' demand is that every employees should be in a proper grade and not between the grades and they should be paid arrears backdated to 1st October, 1980. The respondents strongly refuted this allegation by saying that they had not placed any employees in between the grades and had slotted them in their proper grades. The claimants' demand is based on the salary which particularly employees were earning at the time of the agreement which they feel should be the determining factor in the grading exercise. The respondents strongly challenged this assertion by saying that it was the employees qualifications and experience depending on the job classification and description of each grade which would determine the slotting of the employees into various grades. They added that an employee could earn higher than the minimum of his grade but that does not mean that because of this he should be slotted in the higher grade.

The court has carefully considered this issue and finds that the respondents have acted correctly and that the claimants' approach of expecting to depend on the employees salary is wrong. In this type of exercise the individuals are not considered as such but it is the jobs they perform and their job titles and the classifications that are required for that particular grade that are relevant. In this exercise it is often found that some employees earn above the agreed basic minimum wages because of experience and technical qualifications. This does not mean that they should be promoted to the higher grade.

The court while rejecting the claimants' demand would advise the parties to embark on a proper job classification exercise before the next collective agreement.

Wages increase of the first year and calculation based consolidation monthly salary

The clause that has given rise to this dispute reads as follows:

"6. Wage increase:

An employee who is already in receipt of the new minimum or more will be entitled to a general wage increase on his/her basic minimum (excluding house allowance) as follows:

- (i) Consolidated monthly salary (including house allowance up to KSh. 699/- 10% 1st year, 10% second year.
- (ii) Consolidated monthly salary (including house allowance) of between KSh. 700/- and KSh. 2,499/- 1st year 7½%, 7½% second year.
- (iii) Consolidated monthly salary (including house allowance) of KSh. 2,500 or over 5% 1st year, 5% second year."

The claimants demand that the first year percentage increase agreed to be granted to the workers was to be based on the consolidated monthly salary whereas the respondents had granted the agreed percentage increase on the deconsolidated salary. They demanded that this was contrary to the collective agreement and referred the court to the minutes of meeting held between themselves and the respondents in June/July, 1980, where it was agreed that after the respondents had made those proposals that the following percentage increases would be granted:

Consolidated salary	First year (Percentage)	Second year (Percentage)
Up to KSh. 699 ... ...	10	10
Between KSh. 700 and KSh. 2,499	7½	7½
Over KSh. 2,500 ... ...	5	5

The respondents referred the court to the opening paragraph which clearly states that the general wage increase is to be based on the employee's basic minimum excluding house allowance.

The court has considered the matter carefully and finds that the clause as it is worded is indeed very ambiguous and had it not been for certain facts to which the court will refer hereinafter the court would have been inclined to accept the claimants' interpretation. The facts that go against the claimants are that the parties had deconsolidated salaries prior to the collective agreement and the house allowance increases were clearly granted on the deconsolidated house allowance, i.e. KSh. 75 for those whose house allowance was KSh. 500 and KSh. 50 for the messenger whose house allowance was KSh. 200. In these circumstances it would be logical for the percentage increase to be granted on the deconsolidated wage. One other point that goes against the claimants' demand is that during the first year of the agreement those employees whose consolidated salaries were below the agreed minimums for their grades will at the effective date have their wages brought to the new minimum and there would be no percentage increases for them at all. However, their new basic minimum would be exclusive of house allowance which would be paid separately. The court agrees with the respondents' interpretation that the mention of consolidated monthly salary in subclauses (i), (ii) and (iii) is only for the purposes of determining what percentage increases are to be given to any particular employee. The court rules that the opening paragraph of the wage clause overrides the subclauses. The claimants' demand is accordingly rejected as the court cannot accept their contention that the respondents "slipped in" certain words in the collective agreement without the claimants' knowledge. It was up to the claimants to make sure that the collective agreement represented what they had agreed.

House allowance group IV

The court has already referred to the typing error in the grades and the court finds that the claimants' demand that the messenger should get house allowance of KSh. 575 has no merit. After going through the various documents the court is satisfied that the parties had agreed to a house allowance of KSh. 250 to be paid to messengers. The court accordingly finds that the claimants' demand on this issue must also fail.

AWARD

3. The Notification of Dispute Form "A" dated 3rd January, 1983, duly signed by the parties was received by the court on 23rd September together with the statutory certificates signed by the Minister for Labour and the Labour Commissioner.

The five grievants involved in this dispute used to work for the respondents as musicians and it appears they constituted their resident band. They joined the respondents' service on different dates but were summarily dismissed on 3rd January, 1980. One of them Abdul Aziz Obulo, has since died. Their details are:

Date employed	Salary at time of dismissal (Sh. per month)
L. Juma, 10th October, 1975 ...	2,860
J. Kambale, 10th October, 1975 ...	2,075
K. Kombo, 27th January, 1979 ...	1,800
A. Aziz, 1st October, 1982 ...	2,807.75
J. Nzenze, 29th May, 1978 ...	1,800

The claimants took up the matter of their dismissals and reported a trade dispute to the Minister for Labour and the ministry's finding was that their dismissal was justified for gross misconduct and recommended that the respondents' decision should be upheld. The claimants then decided to bring the matter to the Industrial Court.

The court conducted a very full hearing in this dispute during which the aforesaid witnesses gave evidence in addition to the parties' written and verbal submissions. From the evidence it was established that the musicians were subject to the rule of employment for employees of the respondents. In addition they were each issued with letters of appointment in which the following paragraph which is very relevant to the present dispute appears:

"Unless otherwise instructed your day off will be Sunday and you will play every other day of the week starting at 8 p.m. each evening. Each night's business will determine your finishing time. The duty manager or restaurant manager will advise you accordingly."

The incident that led to their summary dismissal took place on the new year's eve of 1979/80 for which the respondents had advertised a gala dinner/dance with cabaret and free gifts. The price was KSh. 235 plus cover charge of KSh. 100 per person and the court was told, and it has no reason to doubt, that many guests came to the hotel that night with the result that the house was almost full.

The respondents' allegation is that the grievants playing as a band decided unilaterally to stop playing music at about 3 a.m. while there were nearly hundred guests still enjoying the festivities and were showing a lot of enthusiasm. When they ceased playing the general manager who was present during the night intervened and personally instructed the band leader and other musicians that the band should resume playing as the guests wanted entertainment to continue. They flatly refused to obey his orders. The duty manager, E. Waweru, and the maitre d'hôtel, J. Kariuki, also tried to get the band to resume playing but without success. All the grievants were later seen (after having changed their uniforms) running towards Starlight Club. The respondents eventually decided that they deserved summary dismissal for having wilfully committed an act of insubordination and disobedience of lawful orders given by their superiors.

The claimants stated that the band leader—L. Juma Toto—had an agreement with the duty manager and the maitre d'hôtel to finish playing music at 3 a.m. as there were not many guests left by then so they played the closing tune at 3 a.m. and then went to their changing room from where they were summoned to the general manager in the grill room bar. They alleged that the general manager was drunk and he exchanged loud words with them and told them to get back to the stage. After this the band decided to change back into their uniforms to recommence playing music but before they could do so they were told they were not needed any more and were told to pack and leave the hotel.

The court has carefully evaluated the evidence of the various witnesses and finds that the claimants' version as given by Mr. Toto to be untrue as all the respondents' witnesses including the general manager, duty manager and maitre d'hôtel during their evidence stated how they tried to persuade all the grievants to go back to the stage and play the music but to no avail.

The court finds that the conduct of these musicians on that night which was a new year's eve when guests generally continue enjoying themselves up to breakfast time indeed constituted a gross misconduct. The court is satisfied that there were over hundred guests present in the hotel at that time including some very prominent personalities who were all looking forward to enjoying the festivities for another couple of hours. It may well be that the grievants felt that they were being overworked but then they had other avenues open to them for channelling their grievances and not to embark on a course which would not only embarrass the respondents but also cause them financial loss as they had to make certain refunds to the guests.

The court is satisfied on the evidence of the duty manager and the maitre d'hôtel that they did not at any time agree with Mr. Toto that he should cease playing the band at 3 a.m. Mr. Toto and his colleagues decided to stop playing of their own volition quite contrary to and in defiance of their working hours as specified in the letters of appointment.

The court fully agrees with the finding of the Ministry of Labour that their dismissal was justified for gross misconduct. From the details that were submitted in the respondents' written submission it appears that all the five grievants were paid their lawful dues on summary dismissal and the court accordingly rejects all their demands. It is most unfortunate that these musicians behaved in such a reckless manner and they would have been well advised to seek the assistance of the claimants on any alleged grievance they may have had instead of committing an act of gross misconduct.
