THE INDUSTRIAL COURT

CAUSE NO. 69 OF 1988

Parties:

Kenya Union of Employees of Voluntary Associations, Trade Unions and Allied Organizations (KUEVATUA.)
and Eastleigh Community Centre.

Issue in dispute:

Redundancy of Jenifer Engara and Elizabeth Mboga.

THE Kenya Union of Employees of Voluntary Associations Trade Unions and Allied Organizations (KUEVATUA) shall hereinafter be referred to as the claimants and Eastleigh Community Centre shall hereinafter be referred to as the respondents.

2. The parties were heard in Nairobi on 31st October and 27th November, 1989, and 11th January, 1990, and relied on their written and verbal submissions.

AWARD

3. The Minister for Labour referred the dispute to the court on 17th June, 1988, in accordance with section 8 of the Trade Disputes Act. The Minister's reference was received by the court on 9th August, 1988, together with the statutory certificates signed by himself and the labour commissioner.

The respondents are a non-profit making body wholly owned by the Presbyterian Church of East Africa (P.C.E.A.) which is affiliated to the National Christian Council of Kenya (N.C.C.K.). They are a charitable and ecumenical centre which was set up by the church to uplift the living standards of the community around it, and also help the needy and destitutes in providing them with technical training so that they might secure some gainful employment elsewhere.

The claimants have alleged that the two grievants were verbally declared redundant by the respondents in 1984. They have also alleged that the respondents did not follow the laid down procedure governing redundancy, and accused the respondents of having declared the grievants redundant without paying them their redundancy benefits.

The claimants pointed out that, after their training at the centre in which they obtained National Trade Test Certificates Nos. 44886 and 44755 respectively, the respondents employed the grievants as regular employees at a consolidated salary of Sh. 350 each. They pointed out that the grievants rendered continuous service to the respondents until they were declared redundant as aforesaid when their salaries stood at Sh. 400.

The parties met at their own level with a view to resolving the matter but their endeavours were unsuccessful. The matter was then reported to the Minister for Labour as a trade dispute, and the councillor's findings and recommendations were as follows:

FINDINGS:

.... the two women were working for Eastleigh Community Centre on a regular basis since 1977 up to December 1985, and that their monthly salary was KSh. 400. It has further been established that they were dismissed on account of redundancy.

RECOMMENDATION:

.... the dismissal of the two ladies was wrongful and therefore recommend that their dismissal be reduced to normal termination on account of redundancy so that they can be paid their redundancy payment. This is in addition to arrears of wages, if any, house allowance and annual leave due."

The claimants accepted the above findings and recommendation but the respondents rejected them; and, in the circumstance, the matter is now before the court for adjudication.

After careful consideration of all the submissions made by the parties, and also thorough perusal and examination of the documentary evidence tendered in support thereof, the court has no hesitation in coming to the conclusion that, despite their long association with the respondents, the grievants did not have continuous and regular employment with them, but were employed as piece-rate workers and were paid in accordance with the work done by them. The grievants' seasonal services were discontinued in 1984, although the respondents told the court that the first grievant has since come back and she is still being assisted by them.

In view of the foregoing, the court therefore takes exception to the Ministry's findings and recommendation; and, in the circumstances, finds that the grievants are not entitled to the awards which the claimants have demanded because the question of redundancy does not arise.

Nevertheless, the court has considered the grievants' length of seasonal employment with the respondents; and, purely on compassionate grounds, it feels that the respondents should pay the grievants an equivalent of three months' pay each, and the court so awards and directs that the amount should be paid to them immediately.

Dated the 22nd February, 1990.

THE INDUSTRIAL COURT

CAUSE NO. 61 OF 1989

Parties:

Transport and Allied Workers' Union
and
Kenya Road Transporters Limited

Issue in dispute:

Suspension of Messrs. D. Tarah, P. Nduati and W. Walichu.

THE Transport and Allied Workers' Union shall hereinafter be referred to as the claimants and the Kenya Road Transporters Limited shall hereinafter be referred to as the respondents.

2. The parties were heard in Nairobi on 9th November, 1989, and relied on their written and verbal submissions.

AWARD

3. The Notification of Dispute Form "A" dated 10th May, 1989, and duly signed by the parties was accordingly received by the court together with the statutory certificates signed by the Minister for Labour and the Labour Commissioner.

The respondents are a transport company based at Industrial Area in Nairobi.

This dispute concerns the former employees of the respondents who had worked for them as motor mechanics at their Industrial Area workshop. The grievants were employed in November 1981, January 1984, and June 1986, respectively, and suspended from duties on 24th November, 1986, for allegedly being involved in the theft or disappearance of some springs of a trailer, reg. No. Z. 9597. At the time of their suspension, the grievants were receiving a monthly salary of Sh. 1,205, Sh. 1,240 and Sh. 1,200 respectively. The grievants were subsequently dismissed in May 1987, after their acquittal in a criminal case. They referred the matter to the claimants whose effort to resolve it with the respondents at their own level failed; and a trade dispute was then reported to the Ministry of Labour.

The Ministry's decision was acceptable to the claimants, but the respondents rejected it, and the matter has been referred to the court for consideration.

The court has seriously considered the submissions made by the parties in this dispute, and notes that, before their alleged suspension and subsequent dismissal, the grievants had worked for the respondents for five and three years and five months respectively. The only worthwhile point which the claimants have put forward on behalf of the grievants is that because the respondents were aware of their arrest by the police and the subsequent criminal charge against them, this was sufficient notice to the respondents that they were in police custody.

The respondents denied this knowledge by arguing that when the grievants were told to look for the missing springs, they disappeared from their place of work and went to report the matter to the police on their own volition; and, on the basis of that report, they were then arrested at the police station and charged with the said offence.

After giving anxious thought to the foregoing arguments, the court does not believe the respondents when they say that the grievants disappeared and went to the police station on their own volition to report the incident.

The court is convinced that the grievants were arrested at their place of work, with the respondents full knowledge and instigation, on 24th November, 1986, and remained in custody for seven days up to 30th November, 1986, when they were released on bond and one surety each.

Now the other important point in this dispute for consideration is to determine whether or not there was any notice to the respondents by the grievants of their absence or whereabouts from duty after their release on bond from 30th November, 1986, up to May 1987, when they came back after their acquittal in order to resume their duties.

The claimants made a spirited attempt in their submission by arguing that, after their release on bond, the grievants engaged an advocate to represent them, and the case went on up to 8th May, 1987, when a ruling was delivered in their favour, but there is no evidence on record to show that the criminal proceedings were heard on day-to-day basis for that length of time in order to justify the grievants' absence from duty for a period of five months. After all, they were out on bond; and under the circumstances, they could have attended to their duties in between the hearing of their criminal case. The court therefore cannot accept that the grievants had discharged the responsibility which lies on every employee in every undertaking of informing their employers the reasons for their absence from duty. It is very much in the interest of every employee that he or she must take appropriate steps to safeguard their employment when, for some reason or the other, they are not able to report on duty.

On the other hand, the respondents were also at fault in the way they handled this matter. As the court stated in cause No. 10 of 1989, Kenya Engineering Workers' Union and Hydro Engineering Ltd, where an employee disappears from his place of work or deserts his duties, without notice to his employer, he has breached his contract, but the contract has not ceased to exist. The employer should, in the circumstances, determine the contract by terminating the services of the absent employee. This the respondents manifestly failed to do.

It is stated that, when the grievants reported on duty after their acquittal, the respondents verbally informed them that they had been dismissed. This was rather odd. The respondents should have taken the trouble to terminate the grievants' service in writing. The employers should realize that it is in their own interest that such steps are taken in writing, even if they are not technically required to give a written notice, because it can be difficult for them to prove such verbal notices.

For the foregoing reasons and bearing in mind the Ministry's findings and recommendation, the court has come to the conclusion that the grievants had indeed deserted their duties, but then the respondents were also technically at fault in not serving them with written notices of termination of their services. In these circumstances, the court finds that, although the respondents are at fault, the grievants do not deserve heavy compensation. Accordingly, the court awards that the grievants verbal dismissal be reduced to normal termination of service, and the respondents should pay them full salaries up to 30th November, 1986. In addition, the grievants should also be paid all their other terminal benefits in accordance with the terms and conditions of the applicable collective agreement between the parties, and one month's salary each by way of compensation for wrongful dismissal that they have suffered.

The court would like to make it clear that the grievants are getting this award only because the respondents technically defaulted in serving them with written termination letters. Had they strictly observed this important provision, it is most unlikely that the grievants would have received anything.

The court has seriously considered the question of the grievants' reinstatement, but after taking into account the circumstances of this dispute, finds that the claimants' demand on this score has no merit.
