GAZETTE NOTICE NO. 1625

THE INDUSTRIAL COURT

CAUSE NO. 56 OF 1984

Parties:

Kenya Union of Commercial Food and Allied Workers and Interfico Ltd.

Issue of dispute:

Non-implementation of clause 23 of the collective agreement,
i.e. long service increment.

THE Kenya Union of Commercial Food and Allied Workers shall hereinafter be referred to as the claimants and the Interfico Ltd. shall hereinafter be referred to as the respondents.

2. The parties were heard in Nairobi on 28th March, 1985, and relied on their written and verbal submissions.

AWARD

3. The Notification of Dispute Form "A" dated 11th April, 1983, duly signed by the parties was received by the court on 31st May, 1984, together with the statutory certificate signed by the Labour Commissioner.

The claimants opened their submissions by stating that the respondents had refused to implement clause 23 of the collective bargaining agreement which was the first agreement they had signed with the claimants. This agreement was to last for a period of two years dating from 27th April, 1982.

The claimants went on to say that they had endeavoured to get the respondents to agree to implement the clause in question at some meetings with them but they were adamant as the respondents interpretation of clause 23 differed from theirs.

The claimants demanded that the respondents should introduce a sliding scale as stated in clause 23:

KSh.

"From (1) one year to 5 years ...	150
From (5) five years and above ...	200

This amount will be added on top of their salary good work rendered to the employer and will be awarded at the beginning of every new agreement signed."

According to the claimants this meant that the employees in question are entitled to the said amount which should be added on top of their respective salaries and earned monthly at the beginning of the agreement depending on the number of years an employee has completed in the service of the company. The total amount of money involved if the request is complied with would be in the region of KSh. 73,700 as long service award.

The claimants further stated that they did not consider long service award as bonus but as a monthly income.

The claimants pointed out that four of the former employees had been paid the long service award. However, it turned out to be some special ex gratia payment made to them all at the time they were declared redundant.

The respondents stated that the parties signed a collective agreement on 1st March, 1982, effective 1st September, 1981, and it was to run for two years. The dispute concerned clause 23 of this agreement.

The respondents further stated that the wording of the clause assumed the same format as in the claimants' proposal and the recording of the minutes which discussed the issue. When the agreement was implemented, the claimants contended that the KSh. 150 or KSh. 200 were monthly payments while the respondents maintained that the amounts were payable once at the beginning of every new agreement signed. The respondents understood that this amount would be paid once at the time the new salaries were being paid.

The respondents therefore submitted that the parties could not have anticipated that the amounts were to be monthly payment as it is clear that they were considered as bonuses. This is explicit from the statement:

"This amount will be added on top of their salary for good work rendered."

The respondents pointed out that it is a practice that bonuses are payable at intervals of not less than one year. It was never the intention of the respondents to award the employees further wage increases in terms of KSh. 150 and KSh. 200 besides the wage increases they gave according to the agreement of 12½ per cent in the first year and 12½ per cent in the second year.

The respondents had given the employees maximum compensation under the guidelines by awarding them 12½ per cent increase each year.

Thus on top of 25 per cent wage increase, the claimants are demanding for KSh. 150 for former employees who had worked for less than 5 years. If one was earning a basic minimum wage of KSh. 495 at that time an increase of 25 per cent in the form of general wage increase and a further KSh. 150 would mean a total increase of 53 per cent in wages during the two years period of the agreement. The respondents therefore felt that it would indeed be a violation of the then permissible wage increases.

The respondents pointed out that looking at the disputed collective agreement it will be noted that it is divided into two main parts. The first part deals with other terms and conditions of service not being wages. Part II deals specifically with wages. The respondents therefore submit that if the parties wanted clause 23 to be considered as part of the wages it should have been incorporated under part II of the agreement.

Finally, the respondents informed the court that they had since ceased to operate in Nairobi due to lack of business and had therefore declared all their employees redundant and revoked their collective agreement with effect from 1st July, 1983. The claimants were made aware of all these action and gave their consent.

The court finds that the demand by the claimants is not in line with the guidelines and if awarded would far exceed the percentage allowed. The agreement specifically states that the disputed amount of money will be added on top of their salaries for good work rendered at the beginning of every new collective agreement signed.

The court agrees with the respondents submission that it is a practice that bonuses are payable at intervals of not less than one year and that there was no intention to award the employees further wage increases in terms of KSh. 150 and KSh. 200 per month besides the wage increases they gave according to the agreement of 12½ per cent in the first year and 12½ per cent in the second year.

The court, however, is not satisfied at the wording of the disputed clause 23 which is most ambiguous and to which ambiguity no doubt both the parties contributed. Keeping this in mind the court has come to the conclusion that each employee involved in this dispute will get additional payment of KSh. 300 and KSh. 400 depending on their years of service, and the court so awards. The court rejects the claimants demand that these payments were part of workers monthly salaries.

The court directs the respondents to make the aforesaid payments immediately to all the workers concerned.

Given in Nairobi on the 11th April, 1985.
