THE REPUBLIC OF KENYA

THE CONSTITUTION OF KENYA

THE NATIONAL TREASURY

DRAFT NATIONAL PUBLIC PROCUREMENT AND ASSET DISPOSAL POLICY

Foreword

The National Public Procurement and Asset disposal system has evolved from an unregulated system to a legally regulated system that is in line with international standards. Notwithstanding this notable development, the Public Procurement system in Kenya still has gaps and therefore requires guidance on various fronts including; the legislative and regulatory framework, institutional framework, human resource development, public procurement operations, integrity, transparency, accountability and address emerging issues.

It is against this background that the National Public Procurement and Asset Disposal Policy is developed in line with the Constitution of Kenya, other relevant laws and international best practices. The Policy is anchored on the guiding principles as provided for in the Constitution of Kenya.

The overall objective of the public procurement and asset disposal policy is to achieve a standard public procurement and asset disposal system that is fair, equitable, transparent, competitive, sustainable and cost effective.

The National Public Procurement and Asset Disposal Policy spells out guidelines to govern Public Procurement and Asset Disposal system in areas of procurement planning, procurement processing, inventory and asset management, disposal of assets and contract management geared towards achieving value for money and promote good governance in public procurement system.

The policy draws from and builds on the previous experience and challenges in the management of public procurement processes and details policy interventions to address such perennial concerns of misprocurement, delayed payments, inflated costs and cost overruns, project delays thus hindering achieving value for money.

The policy defines clearly on how public procurement shall be conducted at both levels of government taking into account the need to achieve value for money by reducing costs involved.

Further, the policy is aimed at achieving targeted socio-economic goals through creation of opportunities for participation of disadvantaged and marginalised groups, and local industries in public procurement. In addition, the policy seeks to promote local content with a view to stimulate economic activity and further investment on local solutions.

The policy takes cognisance of the critical role played by key stakeholders in the implementation of this policy and will continuously engage with them with a view to improve public procurement and asset disposal system.

As a government we are committed to the full implementation of the policy.

UKUR YATANI,
Cabinet Secretary /National Treasury and Planning.

Acknowledgements

Public Procurement in Kenya plays a central role in driving the social economic development of the nation. Yet it is prone to risks which lead to possible loss of funds, goods and services especially where sound procurement procedures and principles are not adhered to. The policy complements the legal framework upon which public sector procurement and asset disposal will be premised.

The Government will continue to carry out reforms towards achieving sound Public Procurement system based on the principles of good governance, integrity, equality, equity, professionalism, value for money, transparency and accountability.

While value for money remains a key objective of all public expenditures, there is need for simple and predictable public procurement and asset disposal processes, robust procurement planning, sound contract formation and management, transparent administrative review procedures, effective inventory management and stock control procedures, and appropriate measures to enhance risk management. For this reason, the National Public Procurement Policy framework has been developed and outlines government policy statements, strategies and objectives including a clear intent to support groups previously marginalized from mainstream public procurement.

I take this opportunity to recognize the stewardship of the public procurement directorate in executing the wide mandate of spearheading the public procurement policy at both levels of Government. Special mention also goes to the Multi-Agency Taskforce, drawn from the National Treasury, Public Procurement Regulatory Authority, Kenya Institute of Supplies Management, Office of the Attorney General and Department of Justice, Kenya Private Sector Alliance and Council of Governors for their immense contribution towards realization of this policy.

Development of this Policy framework is part of ongoing Public Finance Management reforms and all stakeholders are encouraged to play their part to make the public procurement system better. We look forward to engaging with each of the stakeholders on all procurement issues, and together building an efficient and effective Public Procurement System capable of serving Kenya better.

JULIUS MUIA,
Principal Secretary/National Treasury.

Executive Summary

Over the years, the Government of Kenya has been undertaking Public Financial Management Reforms including Public Procurement and Asset Disposal. This National Public Procurement and Asset Disposal Policy presents the Government of Kenya strategy to further reform the public procurement system that is aligned to international best practices to achieve value for money for sustainable economic development.

The policy covers public procurement and asset disposal system in the entire public sector at both levels of Government. It applies to procurement planning, procurement processing, contract management, inventory and asset management and disposal of assets as well as compliance and enforcement mechanisms.

The policy seeks to cure challenges in the Public Procurement and Asset Disposal system which have over the years contributed to loss of Government funds and subsequently led to underdevelopment. It emphasizes on the need for strict compliance to the legal framework and guidelines with a view to strengthen the capacity for enforcement. The policy aims at standardizing and sealing loopholes in procurement and asset disposal processes, contract formation and management which has previously been characterized by among other things, unfairness, unclear contract terms and conditions, nonperformance, unwarranted variations, delays and cost overruns that has led to inherent financial and operational risks.

Similarly, the policy addresses ethical issues among persons involved in public procurement with a view to strengthen governance thus promote competition, accountability, transparency and integrity principles among others. This will ultimately lead to value for money in the procurement of goods, works and services. In addition, the policy seeks to address record management in procuring entities to enhance their accuracy and completeness thus ease audit trails and processes in public procurement and asset disposal.

The policy also seeks to integrate marginalized groups who have been previously disadvantaged economically due to unfair competition or discrimination in government procurement opportunities, promote local industries through local content initiatives. Procurement planning and prudent inventory management is also covered in the policy which hitherto has been a major contributory factor to inefficiencies in the delivery of goods works and services.

To ensure an effective and efficient public procurement and asset disposal system, the policy recognizes the role of various institutions involved in public procurement and the need for stakeholder's engagement.

It takes cognizance of the dynamism in the fast-changing technological world and the need to embrace innovation, emerging trends and sustainable procurement. The policy will be reviewed after every five years to take into account international best practices and emerging issues.

1.0 INTRODUCTION

1.1 Background

The Public Procurement and Asset Disposal System in Kenya has evolved from a system which had no regulations to a legally regulated procurement and asset disposal system in line with International Standards. Key hallmarks in the evolution of the Public Procurement and Asset Disposal were the Treasury Circulars in post-independence Kenya and the Supplies Manual of 1978.

The Government of Kenya has undertaken reforms over the years which commenced with the Review of the Public Procurement System in 1997. The Review identified various gaps that led to the enactment of the Exchequer and Audit (Public Procurement) Regulations, 2001, the Public Procurement and Disposal Act 2005, and the Public Procurement and Disposal Regulations, 2006. In 2010, Kenya promulgated a new Constitution. Article 227 of the Constitution of Kenya provides for a procurement and asset disposal system that is fair, equitable, transparent, competitive and cost-effective. To give effect to the Article, the Public Procurement and Asset Disposal Act, 2015, was enacted.

1.2 Situational Analysis

The current public procurement and asset disposal system in Kenya has been strengthened in a number of aspects including the existence of an elaborate legal framework aligned to the Constitution of Kenya, and Vision 2030. The framework covers the public procurement and asset disposal cycle: establishment of institutions with clear mandates; decentralization of procurement giving procuring entities full autonomy to act within the law; and recognition of procurement as a strategic function in public entities.

Despite the reforms undertaken, the Public Procurement and Asset Disposal system in Kenya still has challenges. The levels of compliance with the legal framework and guidelines are generally low and the capacity for enforcement remains weak. Persons involved in public procurement lack adequate capacity to handle the dynamism of procurement and asset disposal. Similarly, contractors have limited knowledge of the procurement systems and their obligations in the procurement process. This contributes to poor contract formation, management and implementation characterized by unclear contract terms and conditions, nonperformance, unwarranted variations, delays and cost overruns that has led to inherent financial and operational risks often occasioning loss of Government funds.

Similarly, the public procurement and asset disposal system faces ethical challenges occasioned by weak governance that impede competition, accountability, transparency and integrity principles. This partly contributes to the inflated cost which the government procures goods, works and services with the ultimate result being wastage of resources and loss of public funds.

In addition, records management in procuring entities is characterized by scattered, inaccurate and incomplete documentation and poor filing that hampers auditing of public procurement and asset disposal processes.

For a long time, a large segment of society was economically disadvantaged due to unfair competition or discrimination in government procurement opportunities. In addition, local industries have faced stiff competition from well-established foreign firms thereby edging them out of business.

Poor procurement planning by procuring entities is a major contributory factor to inefficiencies in the delivery of goods, works and services resulting in budget overruns and creating pending bills. A lot of wastage and increased cost are incurred due to unnecessary high stocks, poor storage and poor record keeping which is largely manual. Lack of standardization of procurement processes has led to unfairness, lack of transparency and accountability, which hampers competition and compromises value for money. Further it creates room for corrupt practices and loss of government funds. Public procurement and asset disposal system is faced with numerous risks including but not limited to financial, economical, technological, legal, environmental, social and political risks. The occurrence of these risks often leads to loss of public resources which hinders service delivery.

The aforementioned challenges and the emerging issues in the dynamic business environment necessitate policy interventions on various fronts including; legislative and regulatory framework, institutional framework, capacity development, public procurement operational standards and governance.

It is against this background that the National Public Procurement and Asset Disposal Policy is developed to give direction and standardize the functioning of the public procurement and asset disposal system. The Policy will facilitate a sustainable, organized and well-regulated environment that upholds the guiding principles and objectives as outlined in the Constitution of Kenya, 2010.

1.3 Purpose

The Public Procurement and Asset Disposal Policy has been developed to provide direction to all public entities and other stakeholders involved in public procurement and disposal activities.

It informs the Public Procurement and Asset Disposal legal framework which enables public entities to achieve value for money, fairness, competition, equity, equality, supplier diversity, transparency and accountability to ensure confidence in public procurement and asset disposal system.

1.4 Scope of Application

The policy covers public procurement and asset disposal system in the public sector. It applies to all procuring entities of both National and County Governments using public funds for procurement of goods, works or services. It also covers procurement under bilateral/multilateral agreements where such agreements provide for use of country procurement system.

The governing principles outlined in this policy apply to all public entities. Public entities may establish additional internal policies, guidelines or procedures that are consistent with the framework to supplement the governing principles contained in this document.

The policy applies to procurement planning, procurement processing, contract management, inventory and asset management and disposal of assets as well as compliance and enforcement mechanisms.

The public procurement and asset disposal policy takes into consideration the Kenya Vision 2030, the corresponding medium-term plans and other government policies.

1.5 Policy Goal and Objectives

The goal of the Policy is to achieve a robust public procurement and asset disposal system that is fair, equitable, transparent, competitive, sustainable and cost effective. The Policy objectives are to—

- (i) ensure that public procurement and asset disposal system is properly regulated through laws, rules and guidelines;
- (ii) stimulate and encourage socio-economic development;
- (iii) ensure ethical practices and promote professionalism in public procurement and asset disposal system;
