AWARD

The Minister for Labour referred this dispute to the Court for consideration and determination on 18th November, 1999, under powers vested in him by section 8 of the Trade Disputes Act (Cap. 234), laws of Kenya (which is hereinafter referred to as the Act). The reference, together with the statutory certificates from the Minister himself and the Labour Commissioner under section 14, subsection 9 (e) and (f) of the Act, were received by the Court on 23rd November, 1999, and the dispute was listed for mention on 15th December, 1999. On this occasion, Casto Nguru and Nzamba Kitonga, advocates, who appeared for the parties respectively, were directed to submit or file their respective written memoranda or statements on or before 21st January, and 29th February, 2000, and the dispute was fixed for hearing on 28th March, 2002. The parties did not submit or file their memoranda or statements as directed; and on 28th March, 2000, the dispute was rescheduled for hearing on 14th June, 2000, and the parties were ordered to submit or file the same on or before 31st March and 28th April, 2000. The union submitted its memorandum on 30th March, 2000, to which the proprietor filed his reply statement on 20th April, 2000. The dispute was, however, taken out of the hearing list on 14th June, 2000, and fixed for hearing, and was in fact heard, at Mombasa, on 28th August, 2000.

The proprietor, J. R. Shah, with whom the union had a recognition agreement since June, 1992, registered a business name, known as Dais Bakery, under his sole proprietorship; but in or around March, 1996, the proprietorship was formed or incorporated into a limited liability company, known as Dais Bakery (1996) Limited, and all the assets of the firm were taken over, and the grievants were offered new employment by the company. In September, 1996, Shah informed the union, inter alia, that his business name had been formed or incorporated into the said company and that all future correspondence should be addressed to the company. But in a letter to the union, dated 17th September, 1996, one of the directors of the company, V. J. Shah, advised the union that any correspondence regarding the sole proprietorship previously ran by J. R. Shah under the business name of Dais Bakery, should not be sent to the company but to J. R. Shah as an individual. The said letter is reproduced below in extenso—

Change of Name:

"This is to inform you that Dais Bakery was under the sole proprietorship of J. R. Shah and that there has not been a change of name only. Dais Bakery (1996) Limited is under the directorship of two other directors each holding equal shares to those held by J. R. Shah. We therefore advise you not to send to us any correspondence regarding Dais Bakery (an individual, J. R. Shah) as Dais Bakery (1996) Limited, is a limited concern and an entirely different entity".

In the circumstances, the union, through their National Secretary-General, submitted a claim of KSh. 364,665 to the proprietor, J. R. Shah, being terminal dues to the grievants who had served him as oven men for between 1 and 7 years. The proprietor did not respond to the demand, and on 26th November, 1996, the union reported a formal trade dispute to the Minister for Labour in accordance with section 4 of the Act. The Minister accepted the dispute and, under section 7 of the Act, appointed J. S. Ngaruuya, of Mombasa Labour Office to act as the investigator. On 14th June, 1999, the minister released his investigation report to the parties, in which he found and recommended as follows:

Findings:

The 38 employees had served in the same company while operating under both names of Dais Bakery Limited and Dais Bakery (1996) Limited. All along they worked under casual employment contract being paid at the end of each day.

Even though these employees worked on casual terms of employment they were repeatedly and continuously engaged by the company for periods ranging between one and seven years.

There had been no change of hands in the management nor ownership of the company except for the name the business, management and ownership remained the same. However, it was imperative that the first employer Dais Bakery Limited paid the terminal dues which in this case was for redundancy as the company was sold. Since this was not paid, the liability is transferred to the next owner and management, Dais Bakery (1996) Limited.

Recommendation:

I recommended that the thirty-eight employees be paid terminal dues on account of redundancy and those still in employment and had been with Dais Bakery Limited, their services should be regarded as continuous. The Minister finally appealed to the parties to accept the recommendation as a basis of resolving the dispute. It is not clear whether the union accepted the recommendation, but the proprietor, through Messrs. A. B. Patel & Patel, advocates, in their letter, Ref. 5/S/47-99, dated 14th July, 1999, rejected it mainly on the following grounds—

- (i) that the provisions of the Employment Act, Cap. 226, did not apply to the grievants as none of them had been employed on permanent basis, or pursuant to a (written) contract between them and the proprietor, but were employed on casual basis; and
- (ii) that the grievants were paid on daily basis at the end of each day and were not engaged for longer period than 24 hours at a time (see union appendices (1 (a) and (b) to 9).

Muchai submitted that all the 38 grievants worked for the proprietor on full time basis between 1 and 7 years, and for which they qualified under section 14 of the Employment Act (Cap. 226), to have had their contracts of service reduced into writing, but the proprietor deliberately and wilfully refused and/or neglected to do so. He pointed out that even if the grievants were casual employees, which was denied, the labour laws did not deprive them of their terminal dues, especially redundancy benefits. Muchai said that the Regulations of Wages and Conditions of Employment Act (Cap. 229), provides for the establishment of Wages Advisory Boards and Wages Council to regulate the remuneration and conditions of employment; and under this Act the Minister issued L.N. No. 225 of 1967, the Regulations of Wages (Baking Flour Confectionery and Biscuit Making Trades) Order, which sets out the terms and conditions of employment in the baking industry and also L.N. No. 120 of 1982, the Regulation of Wages (General) Order, which provides the basic minimum rates of payment, terms and conditions of employment of all employees, "including employees to whom other Wages Regulation Orders made under the Act apply", if the minimum rates and conditions of employment set forth in such orders are less favourable than those contained in the General Order. Therefore, he said, it was under the terms and conditions contained in para. 15 of the General Order that the grievants worked for or served the proprietor and the latter was bound to implement the provisions of the said para. 15 of the General Order before he wound up his affairs.

Finally, Muchai urged the court to find that the grievants suffered loss of employment or occupation or job and/or care through involuntary means, and prayed that they be paid their terminal dues, amounting to KSh. 411,534 made up as follows—

Syed Kassim Shah, the learned counsel for proprietor, resisted the demand or claim on the ground that the grievants were casual employees who received their wages on daily basis, and that there was no contract of service or any other agreement, express, oral or implied, which stipulated to the contrary. He stated that the formation or incorporation of the proprietorship into a limited liability company, and the prolonged period of casual employment of the grievants, did not alter their status as casual employees; and that both parties knew, accepted and understood that their relationship was that of employer/casual employee. The learned counsel took exception to the Minister's and the Unions' attempt to create or write a contract where none existed, based on their lofty notions of fairness and humanitarianism which have no application at all in the enforcement of mutual and contractual labour relationships where adult parties of sound mind have defined their relationship. In any case, he said, section 2 of the Employment Act, Cap. 226, Laws of Kenya, under which "casual employee" is defined, does not contain any provisions or qualifications to accommodate assumed notions of fairplay or prolonged employment, etc. but simply upholds the long standing principle of the law of contract that parties shall be bound by their contract and no third party or Court should endeavour to re-write the contract for them while adjudicating their dispute. In this case, he argued, as soon as the relationship was understood to be casual, then the definition of the words "employee" and "contract of service" in the relevant labour legislations, e.g. the Trade Disputes Act, Cap. 234, the Employment Act, Cap. 226, and the Regulation of Wages and Conditions of Employment Act, Cap. 229, ceased to apply. He asserted that this Court has no jurisdiction to convert casual employment into permanent employment; and if it did so, such a decision would set a dangerous precedent in industrial relations, the labour market and the economy, because an innocent employer who engages casual employees might end up being bound to pay them wages on permanent terms of employment, and this would have adverse effects on his business. Furthermore, he said, such a decision might also discourage the engagement of casual employees, thereby increasing unemployment with disastrous consequences on the economy.

Shah submitted further that the Minister misunderstood the dispute which was reported to him because in his report he erroneously recommended that a non-existent institution called Dias Bakery Ltd.

should pay to the grievants termination/redundancy dues. He pointed out that the demand by the Union that the grievants should be paid termination/redundancy benefits was also untenable because the relationship between them (grievants) and the proprietor was that of casual employment. In the circumstances, the learned counsel strongly denied that the grievants rendered "uninterruption and continuous" service to the proprietor and the latter refused, failed and/or neglected to perform his part of the contract. He maintained that the parties were adults of sound mind who mutually agreed and understood their contractual obligations to each other; and the propriety could not, therefore, have expected any of the grievants to give notice of resignation, or pay in lieu thereof. Shah finally submitted that the union have no locus standi for lack of formal recognition agreement between it and the proprietor.

In conclusion, Shah urged the Court to find that both the demand by the union and the recommendation by the Ministry have no foundation, in law, lacked substance and merit and misconceived; and accordingly prayed that the same be rejected.

In this case, the union demand from the proprietor terminal and/or redundancy benefits under the relevant labour law legislations for the 38 grievants who had worked for him for a period of between 1 and 7 years. But the proprietor has resisted the demand mainly on the ground that the grievants were casual employees whose terms and conditions of service were of casual nature and that there was no contract of service or any other agreement, express, oral or implied, which stipulated to the contrary. In order to appreciate the nature of the terms and conditions of service of the grievants, it is necessary to set out or extract the meanings or definitions of the following words or terms in the Trade Disputes Act, Cap. 234, and the Employment Act, Cap. 226.

Under section 2 of the Trade Disputes Act, Cap. 234:-

"employee" means, subject to section 3—

(a) any person who has entered into or works under a contract with an employer, whether the contract is for manual labour, clerical work or otherwise, is expressed or implied, is entered into orally or in writing, and whether it is a contract of service...

(b) .....

The Employment Act, Cap. 226, defines the term "casual employee" as follows—

"casual employee" means an individual the terms of whose engagement provides for his payment at the end of each day and who is not engaged for a longer period than twenty-four hours at a time".

The same Act, defines "contract of service", inter alia, thus—

"contract of service" means an agreement, whether oral or in writing and whether expressed or implied, to employ or to serve as an employee for any period or time....."

Section 14 of the said Act gives general provision with regard to contracts of service, termination, dismissal, etc., and makes it compulsory under subsection (1) therefore that:-

"(1) Every contract of service—

- (a) for a period, or a number of working days which amount in aggregate to the equivalent, of six months or more; or
- (b) which provides for the performance of any specified work which could not reasonably be expected to be completed within a period, or a number of working days amounting in the aggregate to equivalent of six months. Shall be in writing".

Two questions immediately arise for consideration: the first relates to the jurisdiction of the Industrial Court to impose new obligations upon the parties, and the second is whether the concept of casual employment applied to the grievants. The learned counsel for the proprietor submitted that according to a long standing principle of the law of contract, parties of sound mind should be bound by their contract and no third party or Court should endeavour to re-write the contract for them while adjudicating their dispute. So far as the first question is concerned, namely the general power of the Industrial Court to impose new obligations upon the parties, the matter is now well-settled that it is open to the Court in an appropriate case to impose new obligations on the parties before it, or modify contacts in the interest of industrial peace or give awards which may have the effect of extending existing agreement or making a new one. This power is conditioned by the subject-matter with which the Court is dealing and also by the existing industrial law; but it would not be opened to the Court, while dealing with a particular matter before it, to overlook the industrial law relating to that matter as set down by the legislature or by the Court.

When a dispute between an employee and his employer regarding the termination of his services develops into an industrial dispute, sponsored and supported by the Union, the matter is no longer confined to the limits of contractual rights but other considerations having a larger bearing upon industrial relations and industrial peace come into play. The principle of the industrial law in providing for the adjudications of labour disputes is obviously to conserve and promote just and equitable relations between employers and employees and secure industrial peace through the process of collective bargaining, negotiation, conciliation, or adjudication of such a dispute. It is, therefore, inherent that settlement of such a dispute is above the realm of merely adjudging contractual rights as between an individual employee and his employer with reference to particular terms and conditions of employment. An industrial dispute raised by a group of employees arrayed as a union, by reason of the collective force and exigencies of conserving equitable relations and industrial peace, opens up a wider field beyond individual contractual relations and may involve the question whether, even though an action on the part of the management may be within the contractual power, it is an unfair labour practice, victimization, mala fide, or otherwise improper from the standpoint of just and equitable labour relationship. The jurisdiction of the Industrial Court to which such a dispute is referred for adjudication necessarily extends and includes a power to investigate and adjudicate upon such questions, unfettered by considerations based on contractual rights as between a particular employee and his employer. It is here that nature and scope of the jurisdiction of the Industrial Court, adjudicating upon industrial disputes, differ from those of the civil courts, which can only decide strictly confining themselves to the contractual terms and conditions of the parties.

This wide scope of the jurisdiction of the Industrial Court as stated hereinabove is now well-established. The argument based upon the sanctity and the validity of contracts between the employer and the employee overlooks the fact that when a dispute arises about the employment of a person at the instance of a trade union, or a trade union objects to the employment of a certain person, the definition of a "trade dispute" would cover both those cases. In each of those cases, although the employer may be unwilling to do so, there will be jurisdiction in the Court to direct the employment or non-employment of the person by the employer. The Industrial Court can, therefore, direct in appropriate cases that an employer or employee shall have the relation of employment with the other party, though one of them is unwilling to have such relation.

The Federal Court of India in Western India Automobile Association V.

Industrial Tribunal, Bombay and others, (1949) 1 F. J.R. 97, at page 111, approved the view of Ludwig Teller that:

"Industrial arbitration may involve the extension of an existing agreement or the making of a new one, or in general the creation of a new obligation or modification of old ones, while commercial arbitration generally concerns itself with the interpretation of existing obligations and disputes relating to existing agreements".

The Supreme Court of India also in Rohtas Industries Limited V. Brijnandan Pandey, (1956) 11 F.J.R. 206, at page 216, held that:

"A court of law proceeds on the footing that no power exists in the Court to make contracts for people; and the parties must make their own contracts. The courts reach their limit of power when they enforce contracts which the parties have made. An Industrial Tribunal is not so fettered and may create new obligations or modify contracts in the interests of industrial peace, to protect legitimate trade union activities and to prevent unfair practice or victimization".

In Patna Electric Supply Co. V. Patna Electric Supply Workers' Union, (1959) 16 F.J.R. 210, at page 216, the same Court held that:

"There is no doubt that in appropriate cases industrial adjudication may impose new obligations on the employer in the interest of social justice and with the object of ensuring peace and harmony between the employer and his workmen and full co-operation between them".

That being the nature and extent of the jurisdiction of the Industrial Court, it is too late now to contend that the contractual power of the employer to discharge his employees under the terms of the contract cannot be questioned in any case.

This brings us to the second question, namely, whether the concept of casual employment applied to the grievants. If a person is employed just once or occasionally at comparatively long and irregular intervals, for a limited and temporary purpose, then the hiring or employment in each instance, being a matter of special engagement, cannot but be "casual" in character—e.g. where an employer simply ask a labourer to work for a day without any further commitment. Therefore, for an employee to qualify as casual, he must be paid at the end of each day, and that he should not be employed for a longer period than one day. In other words, the contract expires at the end of each day when he receives his pay. If he is offered employment the following day, this should be considered as an entirely new contract. But if the above conditions are not fulfilled, then that employment is not a casual but permanent employment, in which case his terms of employment must be those covered under section 5 (2) (b), (c) and (d) of the Employment Act, Cap. 226.

On the other hand, a permanent and "continuous" employment must have some degree of stability, frequency and regularity (see Pennsylvania Relations Board V. Yellow Cab and Bus Co., 10 Labour Cases, 63085). "Continuous Service" postulates the continuance of the relationship of master and servant between the employer and his employees. If the employee resigns his employment, service automatically comes to an end. If the employer terminates the services of his employee, that again brings the continuity of service to an end. If the service of an employee is brought to an end by the operation of any law, that again is another instance where the continuance is disrupted.

There is no dispute in this case that the Union had a recognition agreement with the proprietor since 1992, but in or around March, 1996, the proprietorship was formed or incorporated into a limited liability company, known as Dais Bakery (1996) Ltd., which was not a successor or assignee of the proprietor, but a separate legal entity and consequently a different employer (see Salomon V. Salomon and Co. (1897) A.D. 22 and Cause No. 124 of 1999: Bakery, Confectionery, Manufacturing and Allied Workers' Union V. Dais Bakery (1996) Limited.). The Union contended that the grievants had served the proprietor for between 1 and 7 years before the proprietorship was formed into a limited liability company in March, 1996. Hence the claim for terminal dues. But the learned counsel for the proprietor asserted that the grievants were casual employees. If this is so, the burden or onus or proof lay on him pursuant to a well-settled principle of the law of evidence that he who alleges must prove. But the learned counsel for the proprietor was unable to place on the record or before us anything which could prove or show that the grievants were casual employees. The proprietor did not settle his accounts with the grievants before they were engaged by Dais Bakery (1996) Limited; and therefore, the period of their service to the proprietor could not be treated as casual in nature. It is well settled that when a proprietorship is formed or incorporated into a limited liability company, or a company ceases to operate or is taken over by another company, all contracts of services between the defunct proprietorship or company and its employee automatically terminate and thereafter those employees who are elected to serve in the new company and/or are taken over by it serve on such terms and conditions as the new company may choose to impose. A contract of employment is incapable of being transferred unilaterally by the employer, but it can only be done by a tripartite agreement between the previous employer, the new employer as well as the employee or employees or the Union representing the employee or employees (see Nokes V. Docaster Amalgamated Collieries Limited. (1940) A.C. 1014). This is nothing more than, though on a more exalted scale, the application of the principle that underlies the law of master and servant when there is a change of masters.

With the foregoing discussion in view, I find that the grievants were not casual but permanent employees of the proprietor and are entitled to the payment of their terminal dues, amounting to KSh. 411,534, as shown at page 9 hereinabove. I so award and order.

GAZETTE NOTICE NO. 7507

THE TRADE MARKS ACT
(Cap. 506)

NOTICE is given that any person who has grounds of opposition to the registration of any of the trade marks advertised herein according to the classes may, within sixty (60) days from the date of this Gazette, lodge notice of opposition on form TM. No. 6 (in duplicate) together with a fee of KSh. 1,500 (local application) or US$ 75 (foreign application).

Notice is also given that official objection will be taken under rule 21 (3) to all applications in which the specification claims all the goods included in any class unless the registrar is satisfied that the claim is justified by the use of the mark which the applicant has made, or intends to make if and when it is registered. Where an applicant considers that a claim in respect of all the goods included in a class can be justified it will save unnecessary delay in examining applications if a claim is filed simultaneously with the application, accompanied in appropriate cases by supporting documents.

The period for lodging notice of opposition may be extended by the registrar as he thinks fit and upon such terms as he may direct. Any request for such extension should be made to the registrar so as to reach him before the expiry of the period allowed.

Formal opposition should not be lodged until after reasonable notice has been given by letter to the applicant for registration so as to afford him any opportunity of withdrawing his application before the expense of preparing the notice of opposition is incurred. Failure to give such notice will be taken into account in considering any application by an opponent for an order for costs if the opposition is uncontested by the applicant.

Where it is stated in the advertisement of the applicant that the mark, upon its registration, is to be limited to certain colours, the colours are as far as possible, indicated in the accompanying representations of the mark in the usual heraldic manner.

Representations of the marks advertised herein can be seen at the Trade Marks Registry, Kenya Industrial Property Office, Weights and Measures Building, Kapiti Road, off Mombasa Road, Nairobi.

Applications for registration in part A of the register are shown with the official number unaccompanied by any letter. Applications for part B are distinguished by the letter B prefixed to the official number.
