THE INDUSTRIAL COURT

CAUSE NO. 23 OF 1971

Parties:—

Kenya Union of Commercial Food & Allied Workers and Embu Co-operative Union Ltd.

Issue in dispute:—

Whether the provisions of clause No. 13 (redundancy) of the negotiated agreement is valid after date of the expiry of the said agreement.

1. The Kenya Union of Commercial Food & Allied Workers shall hereinafter be referred to as the Claimants and the Embu Co-operative Union Ltd. shall hereinafter be referred to as the Respondents.

2. The parties were heard in Nairobi on the 2nd day of June, 1971, and relied on their written and verbal submissions.

AWARD

3. The Claimants were recognized by the Respondents on 25th June, 1964. Thereafter they negotiated a collective agreement covering terms and conditions of employment of the Respondents' employees. This agreement was effective from 1st July, 1965, and was to expire on 30th September, 1966. The exact wording was as follows:—

"This agreement shall come into force as from 1st July, 1965, and shall expire on 30th September, 1966."

In the same agreement there is a clause 13 on redundancy which reads:—

"The principle of 'first in last out' shall be followed provided always that the Co-operative Union may disregard such principle where in their opinion, an employee with less service possesses greater ability than the one with longer service. When an employee is declared redundant, he/she shall be entitled to severance pay as may be discussed and agreed between the Union and the Co-operative Union."

After the expiry of the above agreement, the parties took no action until January, 1967, to discuss its renewal. During the lifetime of the said agreement the relationship between the parties was not at all healthy and the Respondents had at one time threatened revocation of the agreement. With the estranged relationship that existed between the parties and due to an indication from the Ministry of Co-operatives and Social Services that unified terms and conditions of service for all co-operative unions and societies would be introduced, negotiations for the renewal of the aforesaid agreement did not produce any results.

On 24th November, 1967, the Commissioner for Co-operative Development (hereinafter referred to as the Commissioner) issued a directive to certain co-operative unions, including the Respondents, that they must terminate the services of the field staff by the end of December, 1967. As a result of this directive, 38 employees were declared redundant by the Respondents. The Claimants approached the Respondents to discuss the question of their redundancy benefits but were told by the Respondents that they should contact the Commissioner.

The Claimants failed to achieve any satisfactory settlement with the Respondents and the Commissioner, and reported the existence of the trade dispute to the Ministry of Labour on 14th March, 1969. As the issues reported to the Ministry were not specific, the dispute could not be accepted and they were advised to pursue further negotiations with a view to settling all the outstanding matters.

On 3rd October, 1969, the Permanent Secretary for Labour informed the Claimants that he had been given to understand that arrangements were being made by the Respondents to pay severance pay to the redundant employees. Meetings took place on 27th November and 31st December, 1969, but the Respondents would not commit themselves on this issue. Accordingly, on 8th July, 1970, the Ministry of Labour accepted the dispute and a conciliator was appointed. Conciliation meetings were deferred as the Respondents wanted to await the outcome of the Industrial Court award in Cause No. 25/70. The final conciliation meeting took place on 4th March, 1971, when the parties decided to refer the matter to the Industrial Court and signed the Notification of Dispute Form A on 17th March, 1971.

The Claimants submitted that despite the fact that the collective agreement had expired on 30th September, 1966, it had continued in force by implication as was customary in the country. In fact the Respondents had applied all the terms and conditions contained therein to their new employees as well and it was only the clause on redundancy that they were refusing to apply. They asked the Court to find that the 1965/66 agreement is valid even though it has expired.

The Respondents on the other hand submitted that the intentions of the parties are explicit and it is clearly stated that the agreement would come to an end on 30th September, 1966.

They pointed out that this clause was worded differently from the usual clause on effective date and duration in the numerous other agreements concluded by the Claimants. In the circumstances, the Respondents stated that they must maintain that there is no precedent for the terms of a contract which has expired being enforced. Even were this agreement to fail, then there is the second phase of the Respondents' view on this dispute: that if the Court holds that by implication the terms of an agreement continue by tacit consent to exist then the terms in which they exist must be established. The clause which the Claimants maintain is in force, is not a mandatory clause. The severance payment that is talked about is a matter for discussion and subsequent agreement. It is not qualified by the obligatory "shall" but by the word "may" envisaging easily a situation where no agreement need be reached. It is not enough for the Claimants to establish the existence of an agreement after its expiry, it devolves upon them to establish the terms in which it existed. It also devolves upon them to establish that the terms in which it existed after its expiry were agreed. The Respondents further submitted that in the absence of such facts, it must be held that the parties to a contract are released from its obligation on its expiry unless there exists evidence to show that by specific consent, or by implication, any or all of its terms continue to have application.

The Court is surprised that the parties failed to settle this matter at their own level. In fact the point involved in this dispute is very elementary and one on which all the interested parties in the country, involved in collective agreements, should have no doubt. It is clearly understood that a collective agreement, even when it has expired, continues in force until such time as it is superseded by another agreement either voluntarily made or as a result of a Court award. If the Court was to rule otherwise, then the parties would find that there were no binding terms and conditions of employment in respect of the workers and it would create an impossible situation. The Court finds it naive for an employer to come and claim before the Court that because a collective agreement has expired he is at liberty to impose such terms and conditions of employment as he may deem fit. The position is that through a collective agreement the parties establish a certain level of wages and fringe benefits and in the absence of another agreement replacing it, the existing wages and fringe benefits continue in force. In these circumstances and the Court having satisfied itself that the collective agreement between the parties which expired on 30th September, 1966, was not replaced by another collective agreement, the Court has no alternative but to find that the provisions of clause 13 on redundancy are still valid although technically the agreement has expired.

The Court was informed during the hearing that on 26th April, 1971, the parties had agreed on 15th days' pay for each completed year of service to be paid to employees when they are declared redundant. In view of this agreement and the Court's ruling on the issue in dispute, the Court sees no difficulty why the parties should not discuss and settle the question of redundancy payments to the employees involved in this dispute without any further delay.

Given in Nairobi this 16th day of June, 1971.

President.

GAZETTE NOTICE No. 1633

THE TRADE MARKS ACT
(Cap. 506)

NOTICE is hereby given that any person who has grounds of opposition to the registration of any of the trade marks advertised herein according to the classes may, within 60 days from the date of this Gazette, lodge notice of opposition on Form T.M. No. 6 (in duplicate) together with a fee of Sh. 50.

Notice is also hereby given that official objection will be taken under rule 21 (3) to all applications in which the specification claims all the goods included in any class unless the Registrar is satisfied that the claim is justified by the use of the mark which the applicant has made, or intends to make if and when it is registered. Where an applicant considers that a claim in respect of all the goods included in a class can be justified it will save unnecessary delay in examining applications if a claim is filed simultaneously with the application, accompanied in appropriate cases by supporting documents.

The period for lodging notice of opposition may be extended by the Registrar as he thinks fit and upon such terms as he may direct. Any request for such extension should be made to the Registrar so as to reach him before the expiry of the period allowed.

Formal opposition should not be lodged until after reasonable notice has been given by letter to the applicant for registration so as to afford him any opportunity of withdrawing his application before the expense of preparing the notice of opposition is incurred. Failure to give such notice will be taken into account in considering any application by an opponent for an order for costs if the opposition is uncontested by the applicant.

Where it is stated in the advertisement of the applicant that the mark, upon its registration, is to be limited to certain colours, the colours are, as far as possible, indicated in the accompanying representations of the mark in the usual heraldic manner.

Representations of the marks advertised herein can be seen at the Trade Marks Registry, State Law Office, Nairobi.

Applications for registration in Part A of the Register are shown with the official number unaccompanied by any letter. Applications for Part B are distinguished by the letter B prefixed to the official number.
