Issue in dispute:

Casual employees.

THE Kenya Timber and Furniture Workers' Union shall hereinafter be referred to as the claimants and Bomco Industries Limited shall hereinafter be referred to as the respondents.

2. The parties were heard in Nairobi on 4th September, 20th November, 1986 and 15th January, 1987 and relied on their written and verbal submissions.

AWARD

3. The Notification of Dispute Form "A" dated 22nd March, 1984, duly signed by the parties was received by the court on 12th February, 1986 together with the statutory certificate signed by the Labour Commissioner.

The claimants submitted that 100 employees had worked continuously for the respondents for a period ranging from one to five years as casuals without their services being translated to permanent terms as required by law. They strongly submitted that these employees were being paid their wages fortnightly even though the respondents had made them sign the daily casual employment contract forms.

The claimants stated that in August 1983, they had recruited into their membership 102 employees out of 128 employees in the respondents undertaking. They further stated that after the recruitment exercise, they sought recognition from the respondents as provided for under the Trade Disputes Act, which the respondents strongly resisted, and they reported a trade dispute to the Minister for Labour in December 1983;

The claimants strongly submitted that while they were awaiting the acceptance of the trade dispute on recognition by the Minister for Labour, the respondents decided to give their employees Christmas leave until 3rd January, 1984.

They further submitted that when these employees reported for duty on 3rd January, 1984, they found a notice posted at the gate stating that there was no work until 9th January, 1984. They submitted that when the employees reported on 9th January, 1984, the respondents allowed only 35 employees to resume duty and the rest were locked out, which action led to the locked-out employees question the respondents' motive as all the employees were working under the same terms. They stated that when these employees questioned their action, the respondents decided to lock them out, and termed them as casuals.

The claimants further stated that despite several meetings between the parties and the Ministry of Labour officials, the respondents maintained that these employees were casuals. They stated that during their meeting of 9th February, 1984 with the Permanent Secretary, Ministry of Labour, COTU and the respondents, they agreed to extend the strike deadline under the following terms:

- (a) That the respondents would produce records of alleged casuals for the period between June 1981 and July 1982.
- (b) That the locked-out employees swear affidavits showing when they were employed and the manner in which they were being paid wages.
- (c) That the respondents would make those records available on 14th February, 1984, while the next joint meeting to determine the locked-out and casual's issue would be held on 16th February, 1984, under the chairmanship of the Permanent Secretary.

The claimants submitted that during their meetings and investigations, the respondents failed to produce the employment records of these employees prior to 1st August, 1982, instead, they produced documents showing that the employees were being paid at the end of each day after August 1982 and yet the same documents were not produced before the court during the hearing.

The claimants requested the court to rule that these employees were long-service employees and that they were unlawfully locked-out and requested the court to award them reinstatement without loss of service and to award them compensation for the unlawful lock-out, plus any other terminal benefits based on the number of years of service.

The respondents countered the claimants' submissions by strongly submitting that the claimants' demands have no basis as there is no agreement between them governing the employment of casual workers and that the parties in this dispute cannot enforce the provisions of the Employment Act (Cap. 226), except the Ministry of Labour.

The respondents further submitted that when the claimants were reporting this dispute to the Minister for Labour, the parties had neither a recognition agreement nor a collective agreement. They stated that the claimants were pursuing this dispute to justify their action of calling an unlawful strike in January 1984.

The respondents further stated that they have in their employment 40 regular employees and that they do engage piece and casual workers depending on the number of orders they receive from the government occasionally.

They submitted that they had given their regular employees Christmas holidays from 21st December, 1983 to 9th January, 1984 and that during this time they had 53 casual employees who were being paid on daily basis. They stated that the regular employees were aware that they were required to be on duty on 9th January, 1984.

The respondents further submitted that some of their regular employees participated in the strike of 9th January, 1984 and strongly denied the claimants' submission that they had locked-out these employees.

They submitted that the claimants were aware that their demands in this dispute are misconceived and that their aim was to secure recognition from the respondents. They stated that the Ministry of Labour's investigation confirms that these employees were casuals and that the strike of 9th January was declared unlawful by the Minister for Labour.

The respondents finally submitted that these employees are not entitled to any benefits as they were paid all the days they had worked and that the question of compensation for wrongful lock-out does not arise as there was no lock-out. They requested the court to totally reject the claimants' demand.

The court must say that it is impressed at the manner in which the Ministry of Labour carried out its investigation in this dispute. The investigation indeed was very thorough and the investigator applied her mind to each and every submission put forward by the parties along with detailed inspection of the documentary records relevant to this dispute.

During the hearing, the claimants did not produce any further evidence than the one they had tabled before the investigator neither did the respondents for that matter and both the parties relied on their written and verbal submissions only.

In these circumstances and after careful consideration of all the submissions, the court has come to the conclusion that the findings and recommendation by the Ministry should be endorsed in this dispute. The court can find no evidence for rejecting, amending or tempering with the findings and recommendation of the Ministry of Labour. The court further confirms the Ministry's findings that these employees were casual employees and that they were paid all their dues for the work they did. It is now up to the respondents and their various employees with the assistance of the claimants to seek a conversion to permanent employment of the more experienced of them progressively depending on the availability of work by the respondents.

The court notes that the question of recognition of the claimants by the respondents which sparked this bitter dispute and led to a general strike in the whole of timber and furniture industry in the country has been resolved by the respondents having recognized the claimants. As far as the question of casual employees is concerned, the court can find no basis for differing with the Ministry's findings and recommendation and the court accordingly rejects the claimants' demands in respect of them. The court would like to add that in the absence of a collective agreement containing express provisions on the employment of casuals if any worker is being exploited on the pretext of being a casual worker, then such a fact should be brought to the attention of the Ministry of Labour which is the proper authority to take action against the offending employer.

GAZETTE NOTICE No. 746

THE INDUSTRIAL COURT CAUSE NO. 84 OF 1986

Parties:

Kenya Union of Domestic, Hotels, Educational Institutions, Hospitals and Allied Workers and
Pandy Memorial Hospital

Issue in dispute:

Refusal by the management to negotiate separately with the union on amendment proposal on terms and conditions of employment.

THE Kenya Union of Domestic, Hotels, Educational Institutions, Hospitals and Allied Workers shall hereinafter be referred to as the claimants and Pandy Memorial Hospital shall hereinafter be referred to as the respondents.

2. This dispute was mentioned on 9th October, and 16th December, 1986 and finally the parties were heard on 21st January, 1987, and in addition to relying on written and verbal submissions, the parties called the following witnesses:

Claimants.—Sadiq Abdallah.

Respondents.—Fazal Hussein and Sadru Dhalia.

AWARD

3. The Notification of Dispute Form "A" dated 15th April, 1986, duly signed by the parties was received by the court on 3rd September, 1986 together with the statutory certificate signed by the Labour Commissioner.

The relationship between the parties started way back in 1963 when the parties entered into a one-year collective agreement which was effective from 1st July that year. After the expiry of that agreement, the claimants started negotiating joint agreements between the respondents and the Aga Khan Hospital, Mombasa, in 1965 until 1985 when the claimants wanted to negotiate separately with the respondents.

The claimants submitted that on 13th March, 1985, they forwarded separate amendment proposals to the two parties in the previous agreement and informed them that it was not possible for them to negotiate a joint collective agreement in future with them.

The claimants stated that when the respondents received their proposals they wrote back to them stating that it was not possible to discuss the contents of their proposals unless the Aga Khan Hospital was a party to it.

The claimants further submitted that the matter of separate collective agreements of the two hospitals started before the parties negotiated the agreement in force. They stated that the respondents, had verbally agreed to negotiate separately and on this understanding the claimants had signed the joint agreement. The claimants strongly castigated the respondents for deliberately abusing the mutual trust that has existed all the years between them by backing out of what had been agreed verbally. They submitted that even though the parties had been having joint collective agreements for the last 20 years, there is no reason why they cannot negotiate separately with them as there is no clause binding them to the practice which has been in existence.

They stated that prior to 1965, they had a separate collective agreement with the respondents and that the same circumstances which necessitated them to negotiate joint collective agreements with the Aga Khan Hospital, Mombasa, are the same circumstances which have forced them to demand separate negotiations.

The claimants further submitted that the parties have no recognition agreement and that there is no binding clause in the joint collective agreement prohibiting either party to deviate from the previous practice. They stated that the two hospitals are different entities and that they do not belong to any registered association. They requested the court to direct the respondents to negotiate with them separately as the respondents' employees suffered because of the joint agreement with the Aga Khan Hospital.

The respondents countered the claimants' submissions by submitting that there is no dispute between the parties and that for the last twenty years they have neither refused to negotiate nor to implement the collective agreements as jointly negotiated. They submitted that the two hospitals are in the process of incorporating other private hospitals to form an association for the purpose of negotiating a single collective agreement covering the Coast Province.

The respondents further stated that all the collective agreements they have entered into jointly with the Aga Khan Hospital and the claimants are signed by the administrators of the two hospitals and that the two are jointly and severally bound by those collective agreements. They further stated that there is no recognition agreement between the claimants and respondents or the Aga Khan Hospital and that the group is there merely to negotiate collective agreements with the claimants and they are not a registered association like those associations affiliated to the Federation of Kenya Employers.

The respondents further submitted that during the last twenty years, the claimants have been negotiating with the management of both the respondents and the Aga Khan Hospital, which negotiations have been very successful and fully implemented, therefore, they see no reason why the respondents should negotiate separately with the claimants.

The respondents submitted that the employees' interests have all this time been successfully catered for through the joint collective agreements, therefore the claimants' demand to negotiate separately with them is uncalled for.

They further submitted that the claimants should not be allowed to force them to deviate from the practice which has been in existence for many years as the claimants have always attained their objectives without difficulties through joint negotiations. They requested the court that the claimants' demands should be rejected.

The court finds it hard to believe that the respondents' employees had to wait for their arrears arising from a previous collective agreement because the claimants allege the Aga Khan Hospital did not have funds to pay them. The court is satisfied that the Aga Khan Hospital has at no time been short of funds as alleged by them. The court cannot fathom the real reason why the claimants having negotiated the joint agreement with the respondents and the Aga Khan Hospital, Mombasa, now want to negotiate separate agreements especially as it was at the claimants' insistence that joint collective agreements began to be negotiated.

It is rather surprising that there is no recognition agreement between the claimants and the respondents and between the claimants and the Aga Khan Hospital or between the claimants and both the hospitals. This is indeed a very serious omission.

The court is of the view that if the claimants want to have separate collective agreements, then it is up to them and the respondents should have really no objection to such a move but then proper procedures ought to be followed to bring about the break-up especially in view of the fact that for over twenty years, the claimants have had joint collective agreements with the two hospitals.

The proper procedure which the claimants should follow is to give each hospital one year's notice of their intention to do so and seek separate recognition agreements with them. Having achieved that then they can proceed to have separate collective agreements with the two hospitals.

Accordingly, the court directs that until the claimants take the steps as set out by the court, the claimants and the two hospitals should negotiate jointly and enter into joint collective agreements. The court would not like to force the employees of the two hospitals to wait for improvements in their terms and conditions of employment until all the formalities are completed. The claimants and the two hospitals are directed to embark immediately in joint negotiations and conclude the joint collective agreement which is pending just now.

NOTICE is given that any person who has grounds of opposition to the registration of any of the trade marks advertised herein according to the classes may, within sixty (60) days from the date of this Gazette, lodge notice of opposition on form TM. No. 6 (in duplicate) together with a fee of KSh. 50.

Notice is also given that official objection will be taken under rule 21 (3) to all applications in which the specification claims all the goods included in any class unless the registrar is satisfied that the claim is justified by the use of the mark which the applicant has made, or intends to make if and when it is registered. Where an applicant considers that a claim in respect of all the goods included in a class can be justified it will save unnecessary delay in examining applications if a claim is filed simultaneously with the application, accompanied in appropriate cases by supporting documents.

The period for lodging notice of opposition may be extended by the registrar as he thinks fit and upon such terms as he may direct. Any request for such extension should be made to the registrar so as to reach him before the expiry of the period allowed.

Formal opposition should not be lodged until after reasonable notice has been given by letter to the applicant for registration so as to afford him any opportunity of withdrawing his application before the expense of preparing the notice of opposition is incurred. Failure to give such notice will be taken into account in considering any application by an opponent for an order for costs if the opposition is uncontested by the applicant.

Where it is stated in the advertisement of the applicant that the mark, upon its registration is to be limited to certain colours, the colours are, as far as possible, indicated in the accompanying representation of the mark in the usual heraldic manner.
