Issue in dispute

Wrongful dismissal of (1) Francis Mwangi Gikonyo, (2) Francis Wagoiri Kariuki, (3) Peter Ndiritu Wamburu, (4) Joseph Mugwasi Obure and (5) Dishon Oburu Abasa

THE Kenya Timber and Furniture Workers' Union shall hereinafter be referred to as the claimants and Mills Complex shall hereinafter be referred to as the respondents

2 The parties were heard in Nairobi on the 22nd October, 1985 and 13th January, 1986 and relied on their written and verbal submissions

AWARD

3 The Notification of Dispute Form "A" dated 16th September, 1983 and 8th February, 1984 duly signed by the parties was received by the court on 20th February, 1985, together with the statutory certificates signed by the Labour Commissioner and Minister for Labour

The dispute arose after the respondents were served with a notice from the auctioneers acting on behalf of their client Messrs Industrial and Commercial Development Corporation (ICDC), calling upon the respondents to repay the money they had borrowed otherwise they would have their business closed and properties sold to clear the outstanding debt Subsequently on 13th September, 1982, the respondents served the employees with notices terminating their services which prompted a meeting with the claimants under the chairmanship of the Provincial Labour Officer, Nyeri, where it was agreed that the notices should be withdrawn until the issue of the intended auction is sorted out, but due respondents did not withdraw the notices as agreed

On 13th September, 1982, a trade dispute was reported and investigation was carried out by the Ministry of Labour and the findings and recommendation stated that they be paid only for the days they had worked, because of their unbecoming behavior of threatening the respondents' managing director in public On the question of underpayment it was recommended that this should be referred to the Nyahururu Labour Officer for action This decision by the ministry was unacceptable to the claimants and the matter is now before the court

The claimants have refuted the accusation that their members had attacked the respondents' managing director and have accused the respondents to be against them

The respondents on the other hand maintained that the grievants took the law in their hands when they confronted their employer at a bus stage and demanded to be paid their wages for August with menace and, that there were eye-witnesses to these events which took place on 11th September, 1982

The court having examined the submissions put forward by the parties is satisfied that the respondents had failed to honour the agreement reached at a meeting chaired by the Provincial Labour Officer, Nyeri, where they were required not to proceed with the termination of the grievants services until the question of debt repayment was sorted out between the respondents and the ICDC It is not disputed that on the 13th September, 1982, notices terminating the services of the grievants were issued to them and no mention of the alleged threat at the bus stage on the 11th September, 1982, was made therein

The court is satisfied that one month's notice pay was never paid to the grievants as required The court, however, does not see any justification for reinstatement of these employees but directs the Provincial Labour Officer, Nyeri, to personally check the issue of underpayment to them by the respondents while in employment The provincial labour officer should settle this issue of underpayment if any, within one month of the date of the award

The court finds that the grievants suffered a wrongful termination and awards the grievants as under (a) salary upto 13th September, 1982, and (b) one month's salary in lieu of notice

3 The notification of dispute form "A" dated 28th November, 1984, duly signed by the parties was received by the court on 14th June 1985 together with the statutory certificates signed by the Minister for Labour and the Labour Commissioner

Martin Odhiambo was employed by the respondents as a room steward on 16th November, 1969. His duties involved care of hotel rooms and other related work. Prior to his job with the respondents he worked for Draft Wood Club in room service and kitchen for two years. The claimants stated that on 6th February, 1980 Martin Odhiambo reported on duty at 7 a.m. and as usual at about 10 a.m. went to prepare room 213. A lady who was occupying room 211 called him and asked him to take a banana carving to the hotel carpenter to cut it to size. Mr Odhiambo did that and brought it back to her.

During the afternoon Mr Odhiambo reported for duty at the swimming pool at 3 p.m. and later at 5.30 p.m. he went back to work in the rooms lowering the mosquito nets in the bedrooms. The following day he reported for duty and soon after starting work he was called by the house-keeper who instructed him to see the management of the hotel as he had been accused of attempting to rape a German tourist lady staying in the hotel the previous day. Mr Odhiambo obeyed the instructions and went to the office but denied all allegations levelled against him in the presence of the lady in question and the management. However, the respondents decided to relieve Mr Odhiambo of his post without thorough investigations. The matter went to court and Mr Odhiambo was later discharged as there was no sufficient evidence to convict him. After the case had been withdrawn, Mr Odhiambo sought redress but without success and the matter was reported as a trade dispute to the Minister for Labour on 29th November, 1982.

The respondents confirmed that Mr Odhiambo was summarily dismissed from service on 17th February, 1980, for committing an in-human and shameful offence against a German tourist lady staying at the hotel during that period. The respondents stated that Mr Odhiambo had been their employee as a room steward from 1969 to 7th February, 1980. On 6th February 1980, the occupant of room 211, a Mrs Hermine, reported to the respondents' director Mrs Menhart that Mr Odhiambo had attempted to rape her. The matter was then reported to the hotel manager, Mr Wandera, who called Mr Odhiambo to confirm or deny the allegations in the complainant's presence. Also present were the personnel officer and the house-keeper. Mr Odhiambo confessed to having attempted to rape the lady. It was then decided not to report the matter to the authorities concerned for certain reasons but it was decided as a deterrent to dismiss him summarily. However, the matter was reported to the police on 11th February, 1980. Mr Odhiambo failed to turn up to sign his confession. Later, Mr Odhiambo was taken to court charged with the serious offence but subsequently the case was withdrawn and Mr Odhiambo was discharged under section 87 (a) of the Criminal Procedure Code, but not acquitted on 1st April 1980. Steps were also taken by management of the hotel to have an affidavit from the lady in question for records.

The respondents asked the court to note that the claimants did not report a trade dispute within the specified period under the Trade Disputes Act, but approached the respondents over this issue two years later, that is, on 17th February, 1982.

Finally, the respondents stated that in view of the above it is sufficient to say that Mr Odhiambo did attempt to rape the lady in question and he actually confessed this. Furthermore the claimants took two years to raise the issue and one can only conclude that the delay was due to guilt.

After very careful consideration of all the submissions and evidence, the court finds that Mr Odhiambo committed a gross misconduct for which he deserved a summary dismissal. The court has found no grounds to disbelieve the evidence of the hotel manager and the house-keeper in whose presence Mr Odhiambo had admitted the aforesaid serious offence saying that the devil had come over him and asked for forgiveness. The court cannot condone the two years delay before the claimants took up the dispute on behalf of their member.

The court rejects all the demands made by them on behalf of Mr Odhiambo.

AWARD

3 The Minister for Labour referred this dispute to the Industrial Court in accordance with section 8 of the Trade Disputes Act on 6th June, 1985.

The dispute concerns five employees of the respondents namely (1) Ng'ang'a Chege, (2) Rose Wandia, (3) Rosaria Muthoni, (4) Linda Nyaga and (5) Daudi Wambugu, who were declared redundant by the respondents on 29th October, 1982. It was alleged that the respondents did not follow the procedures governing redundancy neither did they follow the parties' collective agreement on this item.

The claimants accused the respondents of having declared these employees redundant without following the laid down procedures regarding redundancy and also failed to pay them 15 days' salary for every completed year of service as stipulated in the parties' collective agreement. The claimants told the court that these employees had put in between 6 and 15 years of service with the respondents, and were declared redundant without any benefits at all. The claimants prayed the court to award their members re-instatement and compensation for the loss of employment.

The respondents submitted that they were forced to cut down labour force due to a series of robberies at their premises and also because the type of vehicles they were dealing in were discontinued due to which the business declined. They further told the court that at the same time their bankers were pressing them to repay a million shillings which they owed the bank. The respondents told the court that after one month they sent a word to these employees to come back to work and that only one employee, Linda Nyaga, came back but later resigned. The respondents stated that they had made arrangements with some garages to take over these employees while they remain on the respondents' payroll but none of these employees accepted the offer. The respondents prayed the court to treat them leniently as their business has not picked up yet.

After careful consideration of the submissions by the parties, the court finds that although the respondents did not observe the laid down procedure concerning redundancy, they were victims of circumstances at the time. The court further notes that the respondents had a reputation of keeping their employees for long periods as proved by these employees' lengthy services and also that the respondents tried hard to get these employees employment elsewhere.

After careful consideration of all the submissions and the evidence given by the witnesses, the court has come to the conclusion that to begin with the respondents made a mistake in declaring these employees redundant without the minister's approval but as soon as they realized their mistake they sent for these employees to come and resume work and in fact, Linda Nyaga came and worked until 1st March, 1984 when she resigned. The court rules that she is not entitled to any benefit other than salary earned. As far as the other four employees are concerned, the court finds that they refused to accept the respondents' offer of going back because they did not find the respondents' offer of finding them other jobs while helping them on their payroll to be satisfactory. The fact, however, remains that the respondents did make efforts to lessen the workers' load and their own financial burden.

The court accordingly awards that the respondents should pay these four employees salaries for the number of months as shown against their names by way of their terminal benefits.

(1) Ng'ang'a Chege—Four (4) months' salary

- (2) Rose Wanda—Two (2) months' salary
 (3) Rosaria Muthoni—Two (2) months' salary
 (4) Daudi Wambugu—Three and a quarter (3½) months' salary

Issue in dispute

Termination of Tom Oriedo, Sylvester Onyuro and William Odhiambo

THE Kenya Engineering Workers Union shall hereinafter be referred to as the claimants and Mangal Singh Engineering Works shall hereinafter be referred to as the respondents

2 The parties were heard in Nairobi on 19th and 20th December, 1985, and in addition to relying on their written and verbal submissions called the following witnesses to give evidence on oath

Claimants—

Tom Oriedo, Sylvester Onyuro and William Odhiambo

Respondents—

W S Ruprah and P S Ruprah

AWARD

3 The Minister for Labour referred this dispute to the Industrial Court under section 8 of the Trade Disputes Act which reference was received by the court on 4th July, 1985, together with the statutory certificates signed by him and the Labour Commissioner

Tom Oriedo was employed by the respondents in July 1977 and was suspended on 22nd May, 1981. The claimants told the court that on 19th May, 1981 at around 4 p.m., he and two other employees were picked up by police officers and taken to their respective homes for a search where nothing was found. Thereafter, the police informed the employer that they had found no evidence against the three employees whom he had suspected of stealing company property but the employer insisted that they should be taken to cell. They were released on 21st May 1981 without any charges against them. They went on to say that on the 22nd May, 1981 at round 4 p.m. Mr Oriedo was summoned to the manager's office where he was asked why he had insulted or used abusive language against the works manager. Mr Oriedo strongly denied the charge but the manager went ahead and handed to him a suspension letter.

Sylvester Onyuro and William Odhiambo were engaged by the respondents in 1976 and 1977, respectively, on casual basis. On the 25th May, 1981, the two employees were issued with letters by the employer alleging that they had a duplicate key to the store and for having stolen a lot of things from the workshop.

The claimants further stated that on 19th May, 1981, Messrs Onyuro and Odhiambo, while performing their usual duties, were picked by police as stated above and taken to their respective homes for a search. After the search nothing was found in the homes and were brought to the respondents' premises where the police reported to the management that they had found no evidence against the two employees but the employer insisted that they should be taken to police cell where they stayed from 19th up to 21st May 1981 when they were set free unconditionally.

The claimants accused the respondents of violating the warning procedure clause in their collective agreement and for denying their members a chance to defend themselves. They further stated that their members were not issued with dismissal letters even after being subjected to illegal and unlawful confinement at the respondents' own instigation. Finally they prayed to the court to reinstate the grievants and to award them maximum compensation.

The respondents countered the claimants' submission that Mr Oriedo had at no time been dismissed. They went further to say that Mr Oriedo had been suspended for using abusive language against his superior and that when he was asked to write a letter of apology, he simply wrote back stating that he had no apology to make as he did not know anything concerning the abusive language he had used. The respondents further stated that during conciliation the parties had agreed that Mr Oriedo should write a letter of apology to the management and he would be reinstated but the claimants went ahead and reported a trade dispute. The respondents went further to say that despite the fact that the recommendation of the Ministry of Labour was communicated to the parties on 8th March, 1982, it took the claimants 20 months to reject them. The respondents concluded their submission by saying that Mr Oriedo had refused to apologize and instead looked for another job, which clearly shows that he did not wish to work for the respondents. Therefore, the question of termination or dismissal does not arise and the claimants' demands should be rejected.

On the case of Messrs Onyuro and Odhiambo, the respondents stated that the two were casual employees who were never engaged for more than two months at any one time. They went further to say that the circumstances which led to their leaving the respondents' employment was as a result of a number of thefts from the respondents' stores and after investigation they were suspected of involvement in these thefts. The respondents further stated that the two employees opted not to work from 21st May, 1981, when the management refused to pay them for the two days they were under arrest and that these employees had deserted their jobs. They also pointed out that the two employees chose their own destiny over which the respondents had no control and could not restrain them, therefore the question of their termination or dismissal does not arise. They went further to say that it is most unfair for the claimants to overemphasize that the respondents insisted that the police should put the grievants in cell when they know very well that the respondents have no control over the manner in which the police perform their duties.

The court finds it established that the respondents caused the arrest of the three grievants but they were not charged with any of days.

Tom Oriedo reported for duty and worked until 4 p.m. on offence although they were locked up in police cells for a couple of days. On 22nd May when he was involved in the alleged incident of abusing his superior. The court has carefully considered the words uttered and finds that only a warning letter was warranted and the respondents' insistence on an apology was not the proper way to go about it. The court finds that under the circumstances Mr Oriedo was justified in considering that he had been dismissed which dismissal the court finds to be wrongful.

The court finds that the other two grievants were justified in asking for payment for the days they were in police custody because it was at the behest of the respondents that they were arrested and as it turned out on mere suspicion only without any proof.

The court cannot accept the respondents' plea that they were casual employees as they were paid every week and not every day. In fact they were working on weekly contracts. The court finds that they too have suffered a wrongful dismissal under circumstances of this dispute.

The court in making its award on compensation for these grievants has taken into account the fact that after the Ministry of Labour's investigation report was out the claimants sat over the dispute for 20 months. The court awards that the respondents should pay Tom Oriedo who is now the claimants' Kisumu Branch Secretary, two months compensation only and the other two grievants four weeks pay each only for the wrongful dismissal they have suffered. This compensation will be in addition to their wages for the days they had worked prior to their dismissal including the days when they were in the police custody.
