THE INDUSTRIAL COURT
CAUSE NO. 98 OF 1985

Parties:
Railways and Harbours Union (Kenya)
and

Kenya Railways Corporation

Issues in dispute:

Dismissal of C. J. Otoya and H. O. Ojonyo of Traffic Department, Nakuru.

THE Railways and Harbours Union (K) shall hereinafter be referred to as the claimants and the Kenya Railways Corporation shall hereinafter be referred to as the respondents.

2. The parties were heard in Nairobi on 17th March, 1987 and on 12th May, 1987, and relied on their written and verbal submissions. The claimants called Mr. Otoya, the grievant, as their witness to give evidence in court.

AWARD

3. The Notification of Dispute Form "A" dated 30th April, 1985 signed by the parties was received by the court on 20th August, 1985, together with the statutory certificates signed by the Minister for Labour and the Labour Commissioner.

The background of this dispute is that Mr. Otoya and the late Mr. Ojonyo were employees of the respondents before they were dismissed on 16th May, 1980. The claimants in their opening submissions withdrew their case concerning the late Mr. Ojonyo and proceeded to submit on behalf of Mr. Otoya only.

The claimants stated that Mr. Otoya was employed by the respondents on 11th January, 1970 as a trainee assistant station master. He was later trained at the Railway Training School in Nairobi and confirmed as an Assistant Station Master grade RB IV in February 1972. Mr. Otoya was promoted in February 1977 and posted to Makutano to be in-charge of the station where he remained until he was arrested on 4th August, 1979 by the railway police for allegedly being in possession of stolen goods.

The claimants told the court that Mr. Otoya had maintained a good record of employment and was also a hard working employee and had not been punished previously by the respondents for any offence related to dishonesty. The claimants went ahead to state that the problems which precipitated the loss of Mr. Otoya's employment were that the respondents had suspected that some galvanized iron sheets which were in transit from Kikuyu Railway Station to Eldoret had been stolen at Makutano Railway Station where the grievant was in-charge. Because of this, the respondents deployed the Nakuru Railway Police to carry out investigations with a view to arrest the culprits.

The claimants continued that on 3rd August, 1979, the police carried out a physical search at the house of Philip Ochieng' who was the Assistant Station Master, Makutano, and instead of finding the galvanized iron sheets they found him in possession of radio cassettes which the railway police also suspected were stolen. The claimants added that when Mr. Ochieng' was questioned by the police to state clearly from where he had obtained the radio cassettes in question, he straightforwardly implicated Mr. Otoya and the late Mr. Ojonyo. The police on hearing this, proceeded to the house of Mr. Otoya who was the Station Master, Makutano, and carried out a physical search which ended up in finding one radio cassette in his possession.

The claimants stated that Mr. Otoya was arrested on 4th August, 1979 and charged in the Nakuru Magistrate's Court in a criminal case No. 766/79 for being in possession of suspected stolen goods and was sentenced to seven (7) years hard labour. They further stated that Mr. Otoya appealed against his conviction by the lower court and was eventually acquitted on 16th May, 1980, having served his sentence for a period of more than nine months. The claimants pointed out that the learned judge in quashing the conviction of the appellant for handling the stolen goods contrary to section 322 (2) of the penal code had observed that the prosecution had failed to prove that the radio cassette had been stolen as this was an essential element in proving the case. When Mr. Otoya was released from prison by the appeal court on 16th May, 1980, he tried to get himself reinstated to his former job, but the respondents did not agree to do so.

The claimants further stated that the case was eventually handed over to them and they wrote to the respondents on 28th November, 1980, requesting reinstatement of their member since the conviction had been quashed by the high court setting him free, but the respondents were still adamant. In view of the fact that the respondents had become stubborn on this issue they had no alternative but to report a dispute to the Ministry of Labour. The Ministry of Labour's recommendation was as follows:

That the dismissal be reduced to normal termination of service and Mr. Otoya be paid five (5) months' salary as compensation for wrongful dismissal and in addition he be paid all his lawful terminal benefits.

The recommendations by the Ministry of Labour were acceptable to the claimants but were rejected by the respondents and as a result, the dispute is now before the court.

The claimants submitted that the respondents had violated their staff regulations G.7 (b) and (f) which read as follows:

(b) When an employee is alleged to have committed such an offence he will be informed in writing in accordance with "letters" as shown in the appendix to the section of the regulations as early as possible of the nature of the alleged offence.

(f) The employee must, within seventy-two (72) hours of the receipt of "letters", either state his defence in writing (or in case of an illiterate employee affix his thumb print in token of his agreement with the statement recorded on his behalf) and in so doing advance any extenuating circumstances; or state in writing that he reserves his defence until the hearing in accordance with the provisions of paragraph (g) and (h).

The claimants also castigated the respondents for violating their staff regulation G.9 (e) which reads as follows:

Action following the criminal charge.—If criminal proceedings are instituted against an employee in court, no proceedings for the dismissal of such an employee, upon any ground involved in the criminal charge will be taken until the conclusion of the criminal proceedings and the determination of any appeal thereof. This does not, however, prohibit or restrict the power to interdict such an employee.

The claimants informed the court that the respondents dismissed Mr. Otoya on 6th May, 1980, ten (10) days before the case was concluded in the appeal court instead of waiting for the outcome of the case in the high court in accordance with the above-quoted staff regulations.

The claimants also condemned the actions of the respondents for refusing to reinstate their member after his acquittal by the high court in accordance with their staff regulation G.9 (f) which reads as follows:

An employee acquitted following criminal charge.—An employee acquitted of a criminal charge in any court may not be dismissed or otherwise be punished on any charge upon which he has been acquitted, but this does not prevent his being dismissed or otherwise punished on any other charges arising out of his conduct in the matter unless the charges raise substantially the same issue on which he has been acquitted.

The claimants ended their submissions by asking the court to accept the fact that Mr. Otoya was an employee of the respondents from the day of his dismissal up to the time of this award and lastly they requested the court to order his reinstatement to his former job and he be adequately compensated for loss of employment he had suffered.

The respondents opened their submissions by telling the court that the events leading to the arrest of Mr. Otoya were similar to what the claimants stated in their opening submissions. The respondents confirmed in court that the charge and the subsequent conviction of Mr. Otoya in the lower court at Nakuru as stated by the claimants in their submissions was true. The respondents stated that there was no way they could have given a chance to Mr. Otoya to defend himself as the matter was in the hands of the police and, therefore, Mr. Otoya had an opportunity to defend himself in court which he did but failed and was convicted.

The respondents also refuted the claimants' accusation that they had violated their staff regulation G.9 (e) by stating that Mr. Otoya was being paid half salary while his case was pending in the lower court at Nakuru. They also protested very strongly in court that they had violated their staff regulation G.9 (f) by stating that they were not aware and were not informed by the claimants that Mr. Otoya had appealed against the lower court's conviction and, therefore, they had to dismiss Mr. Otoya because of the conviction in the lower court at Nakuru.

The respondents told the court that they are a transport organization which must earn its revenue from the carriage of both high rated and low rated goods throughout the railway system. They further informed the court that Mr. Otoya was caught red-handed in possession of suspected stolen goods and was charged and convicted which was a clear proof of a dishonest employee. The respondents stressed in court that the conduct of Mr. Otoya being their employee had betrayed the trust placed on him and, therefore, he was not worthy to continue being their employee.

The respondents ended their submissions by asking the court to uphold their decision to dismiss Mr. Otoya.

The court has, carefully, considered the parties' submissions and finds that it was not disputed by the parties that Mr. Otoya was found in possession of one radio cassette and was charged and sentenced to serve seven (7) years with hard labour. The court also noted the fact that it was not disputed by the parties that Mr. Otoya was subsequently acquitted by the high court on appeal sitting in Nakuru on 16th May, 1980, of the charge on which he was convicted in the lower court, having served more than nine (9) months in jail.

The court finds that the claimants relied mainly on the respondents' staff regulation G.9 (f) quoted in their opening submission which they claimed was violated by the respondents for terminating the services of Mr. Otoya on 6th May, 1980, ten (10) days before the outcome of the appeal in the high court. The claimants have submitted that their member's acquittal on 16th May, 1980 was proof of his innocence and the respondent should have reinstated him to his former job.

On the other hand, the respondents had very strong feelings that Mr. Otoya had betrayed the trust placed on him and had proved to be a very dishonest employee and did not deserve reinstatement to his former job.

The court is not convinced by the respondents' contention that they had to terminate the services of Mr. Otoya on 6th May, 1980 basing their action on the conviction of the lower court simply because they were not informed by the claimants that Mr. Otoya had made an appeal against his conviction by the lower court. In this regard, the court believes that the respondents were aware of the appeal but dismissed Mr. Otoya on 6th May, 1980, ten (10) days before his acquittal in the high court on 16th May, 1980, simply because the principal state counsel had hinted in court that he was not going to support the conviction against Mr. Otoya in the appeal court.

The court agrees with the claimants that the respondents had violated their staff regulation G.9 (f) as the respondents should have waited for the outcome of the appeal and in view of this violation, Mr. Otoya has suffered a wrongful dismissal. But the court feels that ordering Mr. Otoya to his former job would be a futile effort and it would mean asking him to go and work in an hostile environment since the mistrust harboured by the respondents towards him still runs deep and was not demolished by the fact that he was acquitted in the high court. And in any case he has secured another job in a government parastatal, that is department of fisheries and the court feels that he should stay where he is at the moment.

The court, however, awards that Mr. Otoya's dismissal should be reduced to normal termination from the date of his dismissal and he should be paid full salary in lieu of notice in addition to his other lawful dues and a gratuity of KSh. 10,678.50 to which he is entitled.

The court further awards that he should be paid seven (7) months' salary by way of compensation for the wrongful dismissal he suffered.

Given in Nairobi on 23rd June, 1987.

THE INDUSTRIAL COURT

CAUSE NO. 130 OF 1985

Parties : Railways and Harbours Union (Kenya)
and
Kenya Railways Corporation

Issue in dispute :

Unjustifiable down-grading of Leonard Wanalo, locomotive driver, from grade RB: V to grade RG: I by the District Mechanical Engineer, Nakuru, on 1st December, 1981.

THE Railways and Harbours Union (K) shall hereinafter be referred to as the claimants and Kenya Railways Corporation shall hereinafter be referred to as the respondents.

2. The parties were heard in Nairobi on 19th and 26th May, 1987, and relied on their written and verbal submissions.

AWARD

3. The Notification of Dispute Form "A" dated 20th March, 1985, signed by the parties was received by the court on 31st October, 1985, together with the statutory certificate signed by the Labour Commissioner.

The grievant in this dispute, Mr. Wanalo, was first employed on 4th October, 1955, by the then East African Railways and Harbours Administration, as a labourer/cleaner grade NC. I 6-5. He rose through the ranks to fireman grade NC. I and finally to shunter driver grade RB. V in 1968 and in 1975 he was promoted as a main line locomotive driver in which position he served until his down-grading on 1st December, 1981.

The circumstances that led to his down-grading arose when on 18th March, 1981 while driving train No. H76, hauled by locomotive No. 6224 with a load of ten-ton units/634 tons, he left Fort Ternan station and safely arrived at the Tunnel station. After a brief stoppage there, the train started rolling backwards and on reaching a curve, the wagons capsized causing extensive damage to both wagons and truck while the locomotive remained on the line.

Arising from this accident, the respondents appointed a joint committee of inquiry to investigate and determine the cause of the accident. The committee visited the site of the accident and interviewed a number of people including Mr. Wanalo who was in-charge of the locomotive. In addition, they carried out a number of tests and came to the following conclusion:

- (a) That train No. H76 ran away from Tunnel station because it had been left inadequately braked while standing on a 2 per cent down gradient and capsized on a curve after attaining high speed.
- (b) That the vigilance braking system which would have stopped the runaway train had been tampered with thus rendering it ineffective.
- (c) That the committee was unable to confirm whether or not the driver was on the footplate during the runaway. But, the fact that the locomotive brakes were examined and found in working order and the lack of evidence of severe brake application seemed to suggest that he was not on the footplate.

The report and finding of the committee were submitted to the respondents' headquarters who, having studied the report, concluded that the grievant, Mr. Wanalo, had left the train inadequately braked while standing on a 2 per cent down gradient. Further, the grievant was found to have failed to comply with the provision of General Rule 167 (xii) (c) which requires, among other things, that the driver must satisfy himself that before putting the train in motion, instructions regarding the automatic brakes have been complied with.

Under these circumstances, the respondents found the grievant negligent thereby causing the respondents a heavy loss and as a result, he was demoted to fireman grade RC. I with effect from 18th March, 1981. He subsequently appealed against this decision but his appeal was dismissed.

The claimants then took up his case and having gone through the laid down machinery, the case is now before this court for arbitration.

The claimants submitted that the grievant tried to apply the brakes in order to avert the accident but failed because they were defective. When he noticed the train rolling backwards after the emergency brakes had failed, he signalled the guard to assist him by applying hand brakes but all were in vain. They pointed out that the district mechanical engineer had found that the locomotive brakes were defective after carrying out tests and that on 17th March, 1981, a day before the accident, an entry in the repair book stated that the brakes were weak and were overdue for repair. The claimants maintained that the respondents ignored this warning, and went ahead and assigned the grievant to drive this locomotive on a journey knowing very well the possible consequences.

The claimants further stated that when the grievant took over the locomotive from his counterpart from Kisumu, he, the grievant, was never warned of the defects on the brakes. The defects on the brakes came out in the report of the joint committee of inquiry indicating that six out of ten units had defective brakes and the claimants emphasized that this affected the level of braking power on the locomotive, and was far below the level required under General Rule 185 (5) which states:

All other trains on open lines must have the automatic brake fitted and operative at 85 per cent of the total number of vehicles units. The remaining vehicles must be fitted with automatic brake pipes so that the brake pipe can be connected up through the trains. The guard must be able to apply the automatic brake from his brake van.

From the foregoing, the claimants felt that, according to the tests, the braking power fell below the percentage required. This made it impossible to effect the required braking and the grievant could do nothing to avoid the accident.

The claimants submitted that prior to this accident, the grievant was made to remain on duty for a continuous period of fourteen-and-a-half (14½) hours, when the normal working time is 8 hours. And in view of the foregoing reasons, the grievant could not be held responsible for the accident.

The claimants further submitted that the punishment meted out to their member in this case was harsh and excessive as he did not only suffer a salary reduction but also lost his pension rights. They cited past cases of similar nature which had been treated with considerable leniency by the respondents.

The respondents stated that the train had a brief stoppage at the Tunnel station situated on a 2 per cent falling gradient when it started rolling backwards towards Fort Ternan station and on gaining speed, it capsized on reaching a curve and caused considerable damage to the wagons.

As is the practice, the respondents sent a joint enquiry committee to the site and they interviewed various witnesses including the grievant. In addition, they carried out various tests on the locomotive and the wagons to establish the possible cause of the accident, after which a full report was submitted to the respondents for scrutiny and necessary action. The respondents studied the report and came to the conclusion that the grievant was to blame for the accident. The relevant part of the report states as follows:

The committee was unable to confirm whether or not the driver was on the footplate during the runaway. But the fact that the locomotive brakes were examined and found in working order and the lack of evidence of severe brake application seem to suggest that he was not on the footplate.

The respondents further stated that tests carried out on the locomotive on 17th March, 1981, a day before the journey, and on 21st and 25th March, 1981 confirmed that the brakes were sound. However, based on the committee's findings, no sign of severe brake applications coupled with the absence of any skid marks on wheels or rails, went a long way to confirm that the driver was not riding on the footplate at the time of the accident. Attempts by the crew to apply brakes from outside could not stop the locomotive that had gathered momentum. consequently, the driver who was also engaged in similar attempts to save the accident managed to escape with minor bruises.

As a rule, the driver was expected to check the brake power and confirm that they were operational before he left Fort Ternan station. This requirement is contained in General Rule 167 (xii) (c) which makes it mandatory for the driver to satisfy himself that he has complied with the instructions governing automatic brake system in order to ensure safe working of the train. Having established that all the required tests were carried out on this locomotive, the claimants assertion that the tests were abandoned must, therefore, be rejected.

The court's attention was drawn by the claimants to the fact that the grievant had been on continuous duty for fourteen-and-a-half (14½) hours without rest and so he caused the accident through exhaustion. This, the respondents refuted vigorously pointing out that the grievant had only put in eight (8) hours, forty-two (42) minutes after which he was at liberty to ask for full rest before commencing the next journey but he had chosen to continue up to Kipkelion station, as he had stated in his evidence to the committee of inquiry.

With regard to the effect of demotion on the grievant's pension status, the respondents brushed aside the fears of the claimants by confirming that once one is admitted to pensionable status, he remains pensionable irrespective of the change in his grade.

After careful consideration of the parties' submissions, the court cannot accept the claimants argument that the grievant caused the accident through exhaustion as he had opted not to ask for a relief when the respondents could have certainly made one available. The court is further satisfied that the respondents carried out the required service and tests on brakes but, the grievant never checked the same before putting the locomotive on motion and, therefore, contravened General Rule 167 (xii) (c).

The court cannot take lightly the experts report produced by the joint committee of inquiry which established among other things that the locomotive brakes were examined and found in working order, and since there was no evidence of severe brake application it suggested that the grievant was not on the footplate. In the absence of any strong evidence to the contrary, the court finds it difficult to go against the technical report by qualified men appointed by the respondents to determine the prime cause of the accident.

The court notes that the grievant's pension has not been lost by his demotion from RB. V to RC. I. The court finds that the grievant caused the accident through negligence, thereby, causing the respondents a considerable loss. In fact Mr. Wanalo must consider himself very lucky to have got away with demotion instead of a dismissal.

The court upholds the respondents action and the claimants' demand in this dispute is, therefore, rejected.

GAZETTE NOTICE NO. 3285

THE INDUSTRIAL COURT

CAUSE No. 74 OF 1986

Parties:

Railways and Harbours Union (K)
and
Kenya Railways Corporation

Issue in dispute:

Unjustifiable down-grading of George Okara, Grade RB VI, by the District Traffic Superintendent, Mombasa.

THE Railways and Harbours Union (K) shall hereinafter be referred to as the claimants and the Kenya Railways Corporation shall hereinafter be referred to as the respondents.

2. The parties were heard in Nairobi on 3rd June, 1987, and relied on their written and verbal submissions.

AWARD

3. The Notification of Dispute Form "A" dated 18th February, 1986, duly signed by the parties was received by the court on 15th July, 1986, together with the statutory certificate signed by the Labour Commissioner.

The grievant worked for the respondents as a loading clerk and at the time of his down-grading was stationed at Mombasa. The circumstances that led to his down-grading started on 15th November, 1978, when he loaded a consignment of second-hand clothes comprising 76 bales for Kisumu. When these packages were counted at Kisumu station, it was discovered that one bale was short. After investigations by the respondents' District Traffic Superintendent, Mombasa, the grievant was held responsible for this shortage and as a result he was down-graded from clerk grade RB V to grade RB VI.

The claimants told the court that on 15th November, 1978, the grievant loaded wagon No. CL 62823 with packages which included 76 bales of second-hand clothes for a consignee at Kisumu. The loading was witnessed by a police officer from the railway police. After the wagon was loaded it was sealed and labelled for Kisumu where it arrived on 18th November, 1978, with all the seals intact. The claimants told the court that on off-loading, the consignee took the delivery of his goods without any complaint and signed the delivery documents. Surprisingly, on 17th January, 1979, this consignee wrote a complaint that his consignment was one bale short.

The claimants stated that the respondents investigations were contrary to regulations governing lost or damaged goods, which require a report to be made instantly. The claimants submitted that the respondents decided the grievant's case with some bias because previously those who were found guilty of this kind of offence were surcharged and not demoted. The claimants prayed the court to order the restoration of the grievant's grade retrospective to the date of the demotion.

The respondents told the court that on 15th November, 1978, Mr. Okara, who was the loading clerk at Mombasa goods shed carried out the loading of wagon No. CL 62823, with packages which included a consignment of second-hand clothes comprising 76 bales for a consignee at Kisumu. The respondents denied that the police supervised loading of wagons as claimed by the claimants nor do they sign any document related to the loading but the wagons are sealed in their presence. The respondents stated that this wagon arrived at Kisumu on 18th November, 1978, with the seals intact. The seals were broken and off-loading commenced. Upon counting the packages, only 75 bales out of the 76 purportedly loaded at Mombasa were found and the shortage of one bale was immediately reported by telegram to the goods agent, Mombasa, with copies to the district traffic superintendents and the railway police, Mombasa and Kisumu for investigation. The respondents produced a copy of the telegram together with a "Missing and Damaged Goods Report" form dated 18th November, 1978, to prove their case. The respondents told the court that the consignee completed a discrepancy certificate on the spot and claimed compensation.

The police investigated this loss but did not have enough evidence to facilitate court action. The respondents then charged Mr. Okara departmentally because the balance of probability in fixing responsibility in these circumstances weighed heavily against him. The respondents stated that they paid compensation for the lost bale. The respondents told the court that the claimants demand in this dispute has been overtaken by events as their member was re-promoted to grade RB V on 1st October, 1985. The respondents prayed the court to uphold their action.

The court finds that Mr. Okara was entirely responsible for the loading of the consignment in question and sealing of the wagon at Mombasa goods shed. The same wagon arrived at Kisumu station with the seals intact. The court also finds that the wagon was opened in the presence of the consignee on 18th November, 1978, and the discrepancy was discovered at the spot and the necessary documents for reporting lost goods were completed the same time and a telegram to all concerned was sent immediately. The court is left with no alternative but to accept the respondents conclusion that there was "Short Loading" from Mombasa end and that on a balance of probability Mr. Okara was responsible for this shortage.

The court notes that Mr. Okara has been re-promoted to Grade RB V since 1st October, 1985, which is one of the claimants demand. The court upholds the respondents action and rejects all the other demands made by the claimants on his behalf.

THE TRADE MARKS ACT

(Cap. 506)

NOTICE is given that any person who has grounds of opposition to the registration of any of the trade marks advertised herein according to the classes may, within sixty (60) days from the date of this Gazette, lodge notice of opposition on form TM. No. 6 (in duplicate) together with a fee of KSh. 50.

Notice is also given that official objection will be taken under rule 21 (3) to all applications in which the specification claims all the goods included in any class unless the registrar is satisfied that the claim is justified by the use of the mark which the applicant has made, or intends to make if and when it is registered. Where an applicant considers that a claim in respect of all the goods included in a class can be justified it will save unnecessary delay in examining applications if a claim is filed simultaneously with the application, accompanied in appropriate cases by supporting documents.

The period for lodging notice of opposition may be extended by the registrar as he thinks fit and upon such terms as he may direct. Any request for such extension should be made to the registrar so as to reach him before the expiry of the period allowed.

Formal opposition should not be lodged until after reasonable notice has been given by letter to the applicant for registration so as to afford him an opportunity of withdrawing his application before the expense of preparing the notice of opposition is incurred. Failure to give such notice will be taken into account in considering any application by an opponent for an order for costs if the opposition is uncontested by the applicant.

Where it is stated in the advertisement of the applicant that the mark, upon its registration, is to be limited to certain colours, the colours are, as far as possible, indicated in the accompanying representations of the mark in the usual heraldic manner.

All "copy" submitted for publication should be prepared on one side of an A4 sheet no matter how small the notice or Act, each page being numbered, and should be typewritten with double spacing. Copy should be clear, legible and contain a minimum of alterations.

Particular attention should be paid to the following points:

- (i) Signature must be clarified by means of rubber-stamping or typing the name of the signer in capital letters.
- (ii) Dates must be correct and filled in where necessary.
- (iii) Care should be taken to ensure that all headings to notices and references to legislation are up to date and conform with the Revised Edition of the Laws of Kenya.
