THE INDUSTRIAL COURT

CAUSE No. 23 OF 1970

Parties:—

Kenya Motor Engineering and Allied Workers' Union
and
Motor Trade and Allied Industries Employers' Association

Issues in dispute:—

1. Whether or not Motor Car Salesmen in the Motor Industry fall within the category of unionizable employees in accordance with the Union/Association Agreement.
2. (a) Whether in the existing agreement on grades between the Union and the Association there exists a Clerical Grade II job description.
- (b) Whether in the existing agreement on grades between the Union and the Association there exists a Clerical Grade II job description and if the Court should decide that no such description exists then the employers request the Court to give its recommendation on the necessity or otherwise of such a grade.
3. Gradings for employees in stores departments known as pickers and binners.

1. The Kenya Motor Engineering and Allied Workers' Union shall hereinafter be referred to as the Claimants and the Motor Trade and Allied Industries Employers' Association shall herein-after be referred to as the Respondents.

2. The parties were heard in Nairobi on the 14th and 15th day of September 1970, and relied on their written and verbal submissions.

AWARD

3. The Claimants took up the question of salesmen, with a view to including them among those categories of employees who are unionizable and are represented by the Claimants, first in 1966 and then in May 1967. As a result, this question was referred to the Joint Industrial Council (JIC) and discussions took place on it on 5th June, 14th July and 31st August 1967. The relevant minutes on this point were made available to the Court. Since the Respondents had undertaken to prepare a paper on this subject they submitted it to the JIC on 17th October 1967. The Claimants could not accept the views put forward by the Respondents in their paper and declared a deadlock.

The Claimants reported the trade dispute on 4th November 1967, and on 24th November 1967, a conciliator was appointed who happened to be a Senior Labour Inspector. The Court must express its great surprise that on a matter of such great importance and vital to both the parties, and generally considered to be a very delicate and intricate problem in the field of industrial relations in the country, that the Ministry of Labour should have appointed a Senior Labour Inspector as a conciliator. Fortunately his appointment was revoked and a Labour Officer was appointed to conciliate on 29th December 1967.

It is most unfortunate that from then on there was considerable difference of opinion mainly between the conciliator and the Claimants. A meeting was eventually arranged for 27th February 1968, during which the Respondents' paper was tabled and the Claimants tabled their own views on the matter. The conciliator informed the parties that he needed to visit a number of motor companies to find out for himself the views of the salesmen as he felt he would get a true picture of the situation through his own investigation. At this stage there appears to have been a serious misunderstanding between the Claimants and the conciliator because the Claimants submitted during the hearing that as far as they were concerned they considered the conciliation proceedings were over and that the conciliator was to make his inquiries after which he would prepare his report and recommendations. Therefore when on 12th June 1968, they received a letter from him to attend another meeting to finalize the matter they took strong exception to it. To use the Claimants' own words, they treated the subsequent correspondence which they had with the conciliator "with the maximum contempt it deserves". They admitted that they ignored letters informing them to attend meetings. Then followed a most unpleasant and acrimonious exchange of letters between the conciliator, the Claimants and, on a few occasions, the senior officials of the Ministry of Labour.

On 6th August 1968, the Claimants were given 10 days in which to advise the conciliator whether or not they were still interested in the conciliation. It appears that from then on until January 1969 the same sort of correspondence continued between the Claimants and the conciliator with accusations and counter-accusations against each other.

On 3rd February 1969, another official from the Ministry of Labour came into the picture and informed the parties that the dispute was being closed. It elicited from the Claimants, a response which can be expected under the circumstances, and COTU was also drawn into the controversy on or about 19th April 1969.

From January up to April 1970, the Claimants stated they exchanged many letters with the Respondents and the Ministry on the subject but without any success and at one stage the Claimants threatened to issue a seven days' strike notice against the Ministry as a protest. Nothing concrete appears to have come out of this and the unfortunate controversy continued. Eventually the Claimants gave a strike notice dated 3rd July 1970. Subsequently the Claimants signed the notification of dispute form to the Industrial Court on or about 18th April 1970, but the Respondents did not agree to refer the matter to the Court until 7th July 1970, and that only at the express request of the Ministry of Labour.

During the hearing the Claimants made a vigorous attack on the officials of the Ministry of Labour with whom they had to deal in this dispute during conciliation and accused them of being inefficient, biased and extremely lazy. The Respondents on the other hand stated that as far as they were concerned they saw nothing wrong in the conduct of these officials. In view of these contradictory statements the Court can do no more than hope that the authorities concerned will look into the background of this dispute with a view to ascertaining where the blame lies for this almost 2½ years' delay since the matter was reported to the Ministry of Labour as a trade dispute.

Now coming to the dispute itself, it would be convenient to start with the Recognition Agreement that exists between the parties. In this agreement unionizable employees are set out in appendix B where it is stated "all categories of employees of member companies of the Respondents engaged in employment directly connected with the motor trade and its allied industries in Kenya except the following categories—confidential staff, directive and administrative staff and supervisory staff". The confidential staff is defined as follows:—

"Any person who is engaged in work of a confidential nature, e.g. who has access to confidential information which could be of use to a Union, or who is directly training for such a position."

The Respondents argued that because every motor car salesman is in possession of some or all of the information which is secret and confidential information of the company, they clearly are not unionizable in terms of their Recognition Agreement. The main theme of their argument was that a salesman in motor industry is a very confidential and highly trusted employee of the Company in possession of secret information which if divulged either to customers or to competitors could do great harm to his employer. They gave details of the alleged secret and confidential information in possession of most of the salesmen. They maintained that all this was information which could not and must not be entrusted to anybody who by reason of his union membership may have divided loyalties.

In addition to the aforesaid arguments the Respondents submitted at length the difficulties they would have to face if the Claimants were granted the right to represent the salesmen. They stated that like every other sphere of life there are good salesmen and there are bad salesmen. The good salesmen in the motor business in Kenya earned a great deal of money, more in many cases than the salaried Executives who are responsible for formulating the Company policies. They strongly maintained that if there are any salesmen who wished the Claimants to intervene on their behalf, they could with confidence say, they are bad salesmen. If the Claimants started negotiations on their behalf, although they have stated that they would not be seeking to interfere with the commission that these salesmen get, there was no doubt whatever that the good salesmen would suffer most and nothing but harm could result from their becoming unionizable.

The Court notes that the total number of salesmen employed by the Respondents' members is about 139 out of which 122 are paid on the basis of salary plus commission, 16 on the basis of commission only and one on the basis of salary only.

The Claimants on the other hand challenged the Respondents to name even one industry in Kenya where salesmen had been denied the right of representation by the unions. They stated that because the salesmen were denied this representation they were being exploited by the Respondents because the salesmen had no security whatsoever and after many years of hard and devoted service found their services terminated with no terminal benefits. They also referred to the International Labour Convention Nos. 84, 87 and 98 on Freedom of Association and the Right to Organize in support of their demand to represent salesmen.

The Court finds that the Respondents' arguments are based on a misconception of the interpretation of the word "Confidential" in the context of the union's right to represent a worker. The Court has no doubt whatsoever that the question of divided loyalty would arise between an employer and the union if a worker, who is also a union member, comes into possession of information which would be of considerable help and significance to the union during its relationship with that employer. If a worker came into possession of confidential information regarding Company affairs which would be of no use to the union in its dealing with the employer then this is not a sufficient reason to deprive him of the union representation.

On a careful perusal of the job descriptions of the clerical grades, the Court finds that to some extent, if not entirely, the alleged secret and confidential information in possession of the salesmen in the motor industry is in fact within the knowledge of the workers in these grades.

The Court has no hesitation in ruling that only those workers who are engaged or deal with staff relations should not be represented by a union and in fact the example which is cited in the definition of "Confidential" in the parties' own Recognition Agreement supports this view. The Court cannot accept the Respondents' argument that the word "Confidential" should be given its ordinary meaning and therefore if a worker is in possession of confidential information, whether it is of any use to a union or not, he should be excluded from union membership.

The Court would like to quote the example of the Banking Industry where the word "Confidential" has been defined as follows:—

"All Secretaries and Personal Assistants to Local Directors, General Managers, Superintendents, Regional Managers, Branch Managers, Deputy Managers, Sub-Managers, Assistant Managers, Accountants and Assistant Accountants, all staff employed in Personnel Departments who are dealing with and have direct access to personnel matters."

Further in the definitions which were worked out by the Federation of Kenya Employers and the Kenya Federation of Labour, the word "Confidential" was defined as follows:—

"A person who is engaged in work of a confidential nature, e.g. who has access to confidential information which could be of use to a Union, or who is directly training for such a position. The following list is indicative of the type of job which would be covered by this definition:—

Management Salaries Staff.

Personnel Department Staff.

Personal Secretaries to Senior Executives."

The Court notes that the first part of the definition quoted hereinbefore is exactly the same as in the Recognition Agreement between the parties.

The Court accepts the Claimants' submission that there is hardly any industry in Kenya where a salesman has been denied the right of union representation so long as he is not holding a managerial position as well.

The Court appreciates and feels that the Respondents' argument regarding the practical difficulties of negotiating rates of pay and fringe benefits is of greater weight than their earlier arguments but unfortunately the Court cannot allow these practical difficulties to persuade it to make a decision on a matter of such a great importance in the field of industrial relations in the country. The Court has no doubt that the salesmen would make their own choice whether or not to become the Claimants' members since it was stated that some of them earn more than the executive in the Motor Industry. The Court doubts if they would allow the Claimants to intervene on their behalf. That being the position, the parties should be able, however difficult it might be, to negotiate and arrive at a workable arrangement in respect of the salary and fringe benefits of the salesmen in the motor industry. Strictly speaking these practical difficulties are not relevant to the issue in dispute.

The Court would like to further clarify the question of the divided loyalty. The Court has stressed in several previous awards that there is a difference between people who manage and the people who are managed. The Court has also made it clear that you cannot have the people who are managing in the same organization as the people who are managed because if you did, when a dispute arose, it would be among members of the same organization. The difficulties that would arise are apparent when you have the management side of an undertaking and the managed side of an undertaking in the same trade union. It is for these reasons that certain categories are excluded from union representation.

The best example of the difficulties that could arise due to divided loyalty is that of a supervisor who has the necessary powers to take effective disciplinary measures against a worker and belongs to the same union as the worker. Then there would be a real danger that the supervisor could find himself in a dilemma because of his loyalty to his employer and to his union. It is for this reason that supervisors with necessary powers are excluded from union representation.

The Court cannot imagine of a person in possession of a more confidential information than a bank employee dealing with customers' accounts, yet in the Banking Industry cashiers and ledger clerks are not denied the right of representation by their union. If a worker divulges confidential information which would be of assistance to a rival firm then that worker exposes himself to severe disciplinary action but the Court cannot accept that a union should be placed in the same bracket as a rival company as far as the possession of confidential information by a worker is concerned.

For the foregoing reasons the Court rules that motor car salesmen in the Motor Industry in accordance with the terms of the Recognition Agreement existing between the parties fall within the category of unionizable employees unless of course any of these salesmen are in possession of confidential information which could be of use to the Claimants.

Issue 2:

Some time about September or October 1968 the Claimants found that one of the Respondents' member companies had employed a clerk in Grade II and pointed out to the Respondents that this was irregular as there was no clerical Grade II job description in their Agreement. From then on the usual pattern emerged which the Court has now come to expect when these two parties are in dispute—exchange of numerous letters between them, accusations and counter-accusations followed with threats of strike and complaints against the official of the Ministry of Labour.

In this manner the dispute dragged on for two years and eventually found its way to the Industrial Court along with the other two issues. The Court does not intend to find fault with either party for this unnecessary waste of time and energy on the part of the representatives of these two parties. It is quite common for them to forget the vital issue in dispute and start personal accusations. The Court only hopes that this trend will be discouraged and the parties will develop a healthier relationship so that even if they disagree they do so pleasantly without resorting to unnecessary hostility. After all, the main purpose in industrial relations is to ensure that the industry continues to function smoothly without any undue interruption of the work.

It is common ground that in this industry since 16th October 1965, there have been "Motor Trade Manual and Artisan Grades" along with Clerical Grades and grades to cater for Tyre Companies who are Respondents' members, which are referred to as "Grades T.1 to T.8". The clerical grades are from 3 to 6.

The parties have appeared before the Industrial Court vide Cause Nos. 58/66, 17/68 and 9/70 and the awards on the issue of wages in these disputes have been made in respect of grades stated hereinabove.

The Respondents' contention in this matter is that there existed in 1963 a job description for Grade II "Clerks and Storekeepers—Trainees" and unless these descriptions have in the meantime been cancelled by mutual agreement they are still valid and in force today. The Claimants say that there is no provision in the Agreement for a Grade II clerk.

It is accepted by the parties that in the early part of 1966 a sub-committee had dealt with the subject of amplified clerical job descriptions. From the documentary evidence which was produced by the Respondents it is clear that there is no specific record that this subcommittee cancelled Grade II clerical job description. The Respondents draw the inference from this that although the clerical grade II does not appear in the other clerical grades the sub-committee had not seen the necessity to amend or amplify a job description in respect of this grade which read—

"Clerical"

Elementary training stage.

Simple filing, postal dispatch.

Work requiring frequent supervision.

Simple tasks needing little initiative."

The Respondents maintained that these trainee clerks were originally to be in the same grade as labours—semi-skilled—and they were therefore entitled to the same wage rate.

The Claimants submitted that the fact that the subcommittee made no reference of clerical grade II was a clear indication that it did not consider it necessary to retain this grade.

The Court has very carefully studied the historical background relevant to this issue and finds that a job description in respect of clerical Grade II existed in 1963 and although there is no record of this description having been cancelled, in view of the subsequent work done by the aforesaid sub-committee on clerical grades and the subsequent negotiations between the parties and the Court awards, this job description in respect of clerical grade II has lapsed. The fact that it was not cancelled can quite easily be attributed to an oversight. The Court is not prepared to accept the Respondents' submission that a typographical error was made in the office of Mr. G. A. Luckhurst, the then Chief Industrial Relations Officer in the Ministry of Labour, on 16th October 1965. The Court is of the view that the Respondents are taking advantage of the fact that this job description was not cancelled to revive it and to justify the payment of a grade 2 mechanic rate to a junior clerk employed by one of their member companies.

It is inconceivable that over the years when the parties had negotiated rates for the clerical grades, this clerical grade II should not have been mentioned along with the other clerical grades. The Court is quite sure, after careful perusal of all the evidence, that at least the Claimants, if not the Respondents as well, did not subscribe to the view that there was a clerical grade II. If what the Respondents say is true then there is no reason why a clerical grade II was not specifically included in the clerical grades with its own rate of pay which could have been the same as that of the mechanic grade 2.

The Court accordingly finds that the job description for the grade II learner clerk was allowed to lapse but in view of the fact that the parties at a Joint Industrial Council (JIC) meeting on 10th December 1968, reached an agreement as shown by the following extract from the relevant minute, the parties should work out a new job description for a clerical learner grade II:—

"After lengthy discussion it was agreed that the Union would put forward its suggested wording for a job description to suit the circumstances and further discussion was deferred."

The Court is satisfied that the Claimants are amenable to discussing the creation of a clerical grade II for learners. The Court also feels that it would not be a bad idea to have such a clerical grade for learners. In view of this finding the Court directs the parties to commence negotiations afresh on this issue to agree on a proper job description, which the Court feels need not be very much different from the one that existed in 1963, and secondly to fix a rate for the said grade.

Issue 3:

This dispute started on 7th August 1968 when the Claimants' President raised the subject of creating a grade for workers employed in stores departments who are colloquially known as "pickers and bidders". The matter was discussed at the JIC meeting on that date and the following was recorded in Minute No. 34/68:—

"Mr. Ndambuki stated that when the Clerical Job Descriptions were revised in 1966 it was apparent that people working in Stores Departments as 'Bidders' and 'Pickers' had been overlooked and no descriptions had been produced. These men were usually put in Grade II by employers but this was not correct because of the skill required in reading the part numbers."

After considerable discussion during which the variety of different ways in which different companies organize the work in their spares departments were noted, it was agreed that the Executive Officer would, as soon as practicable, consult with the Stores Managers of several companies and put forward suggested descriptions for the men concerned under, perhaps, three grades such as, for example, Porters or Stores Assistants Grade I, II and III."

The Respondents went into this problem at great length and arranged a meeting of stores managers of four of the major motor vehicle importing companies in producing what they considered were appropriate descriptions for the jobs in question. These were forwarded to the Claimants' General Secretary on 4th October 1968, and the Claimants' comments were sought. The Claimants did not give any reply and although during subsequent meetings, and in reply to many letters that were addressed to them, they kept on promising that they would send their written proposals to the Respondents, they failed to do so, and discussion on this subject was deferred several times.

During the hearing the Claimants put forward the explanation that they could not reply to the Respondents' proposals because they were in touch with their international organization and were seeking views from them but surprisingly this was not conveyed to the Respondents at any time during this period. The Court must criticize the Claimants for adopting this sort of attitude after raising a matter, as result of which the Respondents were put to all this trouble.

Having waited a long time for the Claimants' reaction without any success, the Respondents in their Circular No. 20/69 dated 13th October 1969, issued the descriptions which they had prepared and informed the Claimants of the action they had taken. This caused the Claimants to react sharply and they warned the Respondents' members of the risk they would be running if they implemented the circular which the Respondents' Executive Officer had sent them. Then followed once again a spate of unpleasant letters from the Claimants to the Respondents with strike threats.

In one of the earlier letters dated 14th April 1969, the Claimants' General Secretary had written to the Respondents as follows:—

"Grading of Pickers and Bidders"

As Bidders sometime work or assist sales clerks on the counter, the Union considers that they should be placed in the same grade as these clerks, i.e. Grade V.

As regards to Pickers, the Union's view is that these employees should be placed in Grade IV."

During the hearing the Claimants submitted that these workers should be considered as clerks and asked the Court to make an award in line with their views quoted above. They further criticized the Respondents for having unilaterally changed the grading structure in that they had created three new grades in respect of stores assistants.

The Respondents on the other hand made it quite clear that they have never suggested and did not now suggest that these people are artisans but they firmly maintained that the employees concerned were manual workers and were definitely not clerks. The fact that some of them have passed School Certificate examination or have attained standard equivalent to that, is not relevant. The important thing is the work that these people are required to do.

After a careful consideration of all the facts and submissions the Court has come to the conclusion that the Respondents' submission that these workers are not clerks is correct. Furthermore, their proposals on job descriptions for the three grades of stores assistants are reasonable and fair. Since the Claimants have had an ample opportunity, after having raised this matter, of putting forward their point of view, it would be most unfair to keep the matter pending for an indefinite period. The Court accordingly awards that the three grades proposed by the Respondents—Stores Assistant Grades 1, 2 and 3—should be implemented and should be deemed to have been so implemented with effect from 13th October 1969, provided that no Stores Assistants who were in employment prior to or on that date should suffer a reduction in their wages.

GAZETTE NOTICE NO. 3341

THE INDUSTRIAL COURT CAUSE NO. 28 OF 1970

Parties:—

Kenya Chemical Workers' Union
and
Refractories Limited

Issue in dispute:—

Wage increases.

1. The Kenya Chemical Workers' Union shall hereinafter be referred to as the Claimants and the Refractories Ltd. shall hereinafter be referred to as the Respondents.

2. The parties were heard in Nairobi on the 13th day of October 1970, and relied on their written and verbal submissions.

AWARD

3. The Respondents are engaged in fire brick making and get their raw material from the hills on the other side of Lake Naivasha 90 miles from Nairobi. There are at present 50 employees working for the Respondents, five of whom are their intake under the Tripartite Agreement. All of them are at the consolidated monthly wage of Sh. 290 p.m.

The present wage is the result of two wage increases of Sh. 25 and Sh. 20 which the workers were granted on 1st November 1967, and 1st November 1968, as a result of a previous Court award. The Claimants had submitted their demands, for the revision of the wages and fringe benefits, to the Respondents on 14th November 1969, and the parties resolved all the other items during the Negotiating Committee meeting. They have also agreed that the effective date of any wage increase should be 1st January 1970, and that it should remain in force for a period of 12 months. They have, however, not been able to agree on the amount of wage increase, with the Claimants demanding Sh. 30 p.m. or 10 per cent wage increase, and the Respondents offering a Sh. 10 wage increase only.

The Claimants stated that the Respondents had unofficially communicated to them that they would be prepared to grant a wage increase of Sh. 15 p.m. but had subsequently withdrawn it due to the extra burden imposed on them by the Tripartite Agreement. The Respondents were quick to reject this suggestion and pointed out that their Sh. 15 offer was based on a duration period of 18 months and since the parties had agreed to a 12-month period they had dropped their offer to Sh. 10 wage increase. The Respondents asked the Court to bear in mind that they are engaged in a diminishing industry and that all their workers, with the exception of four, had no skills and any unskilled labourer could learn the job they did in one day. The cost of making these bricks was very high and they were in direct competition with the importation of similar fire bricks from manufacturers in Europe who are able to supply them at a very competitive price. Finally the Respondents submitted that the raw material required by them being heavy its transport was costly.

The Claimants pointed out that lack of housing and increase in prices of certain basic commodities must be taken seriously particularly because there was no difference between a worker at the bottom of a wage scale and the one at the top in so far as the prices of these commodities were concerned. They emphasized that even with the offers made by the Respondents of Sh. 10 and Sh. 15 p.m. the workers would not be able to meet their basic requirements. They would not be able to meet the school fees in respect of their children. Finally they asked the Court to bear in mind the following necessities which form part of a minimum decent standard of living:—

"Food—enough food everyday to replace energy used in living and working."

Housing—housing of a standard to give protection under healthy conditions.

Hygiene—sanitation and medical care to give protection against disease and treatment in illness.

Clothing—enough clothes to permit body cleanliness and afford protection from the weather.

Security—security against robbery or violence, against loss of opportunity to work, against property due to illness or old age, and Education—education to enable every man, woman and child to develop to the full talents and abilities."

The Court has carefully considered all the submissions made by the parties including the admission by the Claimants that the award in this dispute would be affected by the Tripartite Agreement. The Court also notes with satisfaction that the Respondents during the last agreement increased their work force from 38 to 45.

The Court awards that all the workers should get a wage increase of Sh. 15 p.m. with effect from the already effective date, this being 1st January 1970. The Court further rules that its award should remain in force for a period of 12 months from the said effective date.
