GAZETTE NOTICE NO. 357

THE INDUSTRIAL COURT

CAUSE NO. 11 OF 1986

Parties:

Kenya Union of Commercial Food & Allied Workers
and

Coca-Cola Bottling Company of Nairobi

Issue in dispute:

The refusal to implement sections 8 and 29 of the collective agreement in relation to overtime payment to drivers and long-service increases, respectively.

THE Kenya Union of Commercial Food and Allied Workers shall hereinafter be referred to as the claimants and Coca-Cola Bottling Company of Nairobi shall hereinafter be referred to as the respondents.

2. The parties were heard in Nairobi on 3rd September, 1986, and after the parties opening submissions the court ordered the Division of Manpower Planning and Development to carry out an analysis of the implications of the claimants demand vis-à-vis the existing practice on the first issue and another date of mention was fixed for 24th September, 1986. Finally the parties were heard on 10th November, 1986.

AWARD

3. The Notification of Dispute Form "A" dated 14th October, 1985, duly signed by the parties was received by the court on 21st January, 1986, together with the statutory certificate signed by the Labour Commissioner.

This dispute stems from the 1982-1984 parties collective agreement. The claimants allege that the respondents have violated clauses 8 and 29 of the said agreement.

Overtime Payment to Drivers:

The claimants have raised this dispute in respect of overtime payment to 15 drivers and 23 truck helpers in the transport section in the respondents undertaking. The claimants accused the respondents of introducing a new method of payment to drivers instead of overtime as stipulated in the parties collective agreement. The claimants stated that the respondents are paying transport section drivers mileage allowance of 10 cents, and truck helpers 5 cents, per kilometre instead of overtime thereby denying them overtime payments which would be far more advantageous to them financially.

The claimants further stated that mileage allowance is not contained in the parties collective agreement and that the workers are better-off being paid overtime as other drivers in the production and administration sections who are paid overtime when they are out on safari.

The claimants further submitted that even when these drivers are called upon to work during their rest days or public holidays the respondent pay them mileage allowance instead of overtime at double rate. They submitted that the mileage allowance earned by these employees should be offset against overtime payment entitlement and that if any employee has received more he will refund the difference.

Long-Service Increment:

The court notes that under this issue there are about 377 employees affected.

The claimants submitted that long-service increment is in recognition of seniority which goes with skill improvement and that this increase should be given over and above the employee's basic wage. They further stated that the respondents have all along misinterpreted this clause. They stated that what they are asking for is not too much, but a correction of an anomaly.

Overtime Payment to Drivers:

The respondents on the other hand countered the claimants submissions by submitting that chances of their drivers leaving Nairobi for any trip at 4 o'clock are very slim and that these drivers and truck helpers earn mileage allowance of 10 cents and 5 cents during normal working hours. They stated that this amount is guaranteed and that these employees earn more under mileage allowance compared to overtime payment.

The respondents further submitted that the parties have had this mutual understanding for almost twenty (20) years even though it has never been included in their collective agreements.

They stated that when these employees work during public holidays or their rest days they are paid 20 cents and 10 cents, respectively, and that these employees are not covered by the overtime clause in the parties collective agreement.

The respondents strongly submitted that overtime payment to these employees would lead to lack of control as it would be difficult to monitor their movement while on safari. They stated that drivers in the production and administration sections are paid overtime as they are under strict supervision while on safari, and that the claimants have not produced any evidence to show that these employees are losing money under this arrangement.

Long-Service Increase:

The respondents submitted that the parties have all this time adopted the layout of the Distilling and Bottling Group of F.K.E. collective agreement and that for twenty (20) years they have interpreted this clause the same way. They further submitted that long-service increase is only adjustable after five (5) years and not every year.

They further stated that other parties practice cannot be imposed on them and that if the claimants want any amendment in the parties agreement then the parties should sit down and negotiate.

The court would like to deal with the first issue which is rather interesting because both the parties have advanced valid submissions on their respective positions. The claimants certainly are entitled to insist that only the terms and conditions of employment as laid down in the collective agreement should apply to the workers. On the other hand, the arrangement for long-distance drivers and truck helpers regarding their additional remuneration when they go on safari out of Nairobi has been in existence for over twenty (20) years with the full knowledge and blessings of the claimants albeit outside the provisions of the collective agreement.

In these circumstances it would be unfair to both the parties to make a decision in favour of one or the other. The court finds that the claimants are entitled to press for a provision in the collective agreement to cover the long-distance drivers and truck helpers and the respondents will naturally be entitled to put forward their counter proposals. In other words the court directs the parties to seriously negotiate on this issue at their own level taking into account the difficulties of supervision, etc., of these workers which the respondents have put forward. The court must say that the respondents are wrong in pressing for an arrangement outside the collective agreement to continue in force if the claimants have decided not to do so.

The court must also add that the effective date for any agreement reached by the parties will be from the commencement of the 1982/84 collective agreement. Any payment which the respondents have made to the employees concerned will no doubt be taken into account when the final clause is thrashed out by the parties either at their own level or in the event of a deadlock by an award of the court in a fresh dispute.

Long-Service Increase:

The court notes that this clause has been in existence for close to twenty (20) years or over and during all this time the interpretation has been the same as put forward by the respondents except that the figures have changed with the revisions of the collective agreement. After a careful consideration of all the submissions the court finds that the respondents' interpretation should stand on this issue until the provisions of this clause are amended. The claimants' interpretation is rejected.

THE INDUSTRIAL COURT

CAUSE NO. 62 OF 1986

Parties:

Kenya Union of Commercial Food and Allied Workers
and

Middle East Bank of Kenya Ltd.

Issue in dispute:

Dismissal of Mark M. Okoth.

THE Kenya Union of Commercial Food and Allied Workers shall hereinafter be referred to as the claimants and the Middle East Bank of Kenya Ltd., shall hereinafter be referred to as the respondents.

2. The parties were heard in Nairobi on 18th November, 1986, and relied on their written and verbal submissions.

AWARD

3. The Notification of Dispute Form "A" dated 17th February, 1986, duly signed by the parties was received by the court on 13th June, 1986, together with the statutory certificates signed by the Minister for Labour and the Labour Commissioner.

Mark Okoth was employed by the respondents on 16th November, 1981 as a cashier. It is alleged that on 29th August, 1983, Mr. Okoth received cash amounting to KSh. 520,000 from a client to issue a payment order in favour of Messrs. Kenya Yarn Manufacturers Ltd. Mr. Okoth affixed the "cash received stamp" on the voucher which he passed on to bills department on the strength of which the subject payment order was issued to the customer. On 14th September, 1983, it was discovered that the cash received by Mr. Okoth was not accounted for in his daily cash receipt of 29th August, 1983. As a result, the matter was reported to the police and Mr. Okoth was arrested with a workmate Jared Awiti. Subsequently both were charged before a criminal court but were acquitted.

On 20th September, 1983, before the case was heard, Mr. Okoth had been suspended according to the parties agreement and subsequently dismissed on 30th September, 1983. The claimants contend that the respondents did not follow the parties agreement in regard to cases of this nature while the respondents state that they acted lawfully because they had reasonable and sufficient grounds to suspect Mr. Okoth of having committed a criminal offence to the substantial detriment of his employer and they dismissed him within the provisions of section 17 (g) of the Employment Act.

The claimants told the court that on 14th September, 1983, Mr. Okoth was summoned by the respondents' manager in his office where he found some officers and an Asian gentleman. This Asian client alleged that on 29th September, 1983, he had deposited with Mr. Okoth Sh. 520,000 in cash for the purchase of a bankers' payment order. Mr. Okoth denied the allegation and the matter was reported to the police. Mr. Okoth was arrested together with a workmate and were held in police cells for seven (7) days. Subsequently they were put in remand awaiting trial. While in remand, on 20th September, 1983, Mr. Okoth received a suspension letter from the respondents suspending him under clause 5 (c) (i) of the parties collective agreement. On 30th September, 1983, Mr. Okoth was issued with a dismissal letter under clause 5 (a) (i) of the parties agreement and section 17 (f) and (g) of the Employment Act. Mr. Okoth reported the matter to the claimants who took it up with the respondents. The claimants stated that the respondents did not follow the suspension clause of the parties agreement which they quoted in the suspension letter which reads as follows:

Suspension:

- (i) In respect of dismissal for gross misconduct and/or serious neglect as detailed in paragraph 5 (a) above, the employer shall suspend an employee for a period not exceeding thirty (30) days, during which period the employee shall be entitled to be paid at the rate of half his basic salary.
- (ii) However, in the event that an employee is awaiting trial either on remand or at large and a prosecution is pending on a matter involving moral turpitude as laid down in paragraph 5 (a) (iv) above the suspension period shall be ninety (90) days which may be extended at the discretion of the employer until such time as the case has been finalized by the courts during which period the employee shall be entitled to be paid at the rate of half his basic salary.
- (iii) If during the suspension the employee is proved innocent within the said period of thirty (30) days, or longer in respect of subparagraph (ii) above; the employee shall be reinstated in his employment and shall be paid his full salary for the period during which he was suspended.

The claimants contention is that the respondents ought to have suspended their member until police investigations and court verdict were completed and that their member was entitled to half pay monthly during the suspension period.

The claimants told the court that Mr. Okoth was acquitted by the criminal court as the charges against him were unfounded. For this reason and the fact that the parties agreement provides for reinstatement in such a case, the claimants prayed the court to reinstate Mr. Okoth without loss of service and order the respondents to pay him in full for all the period he has been out of employment.

The respondents told the court that on 29th August, 1983, Mr. Okoth received cash amounting to Sh. 520,000 for payment to issue a payment order in favour of Messrs. Kenya Yarn Manufacturers Ltd. On receiving the cash, Mr. Okoth affixed the "cash received stamp" on the voucher which he sent to bills department on the strength of which the subject payment order was issued. This payment order was presented to the respondents local clearing house in normal course of business on 30th August, 1983, and was met. Later, it was discovered that the cash received by Mr. Okoth was not accounted for in his daily cash receipt book of 29th August, 1983, and the cash receipt voucher was missing from the vouchers of the day in question. The page of the payment order register on which the entries were recorded was also missing. Again the schedules of 30th August, 1983, under which the payment order was presented was also missing. The respondents told the court further that the head of deposit department, Mr. Omolo, confirmed that Mr. Okoth obtained the clearing schedules of 30th August, 1983, from him (Mr. Omolo) for unspecified reasons. The respondents stated that on 14th September, 1983, the customer who deposited the Sh. 520,000 came to the bank and identified Mr. Okoth as the cashier to whom he paid the money. On discovery of the fraud, the police were called in and Mr. Okoth was arrested the same day. As a result of the foregoing, Mr. Okoth was suspended on 20th September, 1983, under the parties collective agreement clause 5 (c) (i) which empowers the employer to suspend an employee for a period not exceeding thirty (30) days and pay the employee half his basic salary. The respondents told the court that they dismissed Mr. Okoth on 30th September, 1983, while he was awaiting trial. The respondents stated that the claimants are mistaken in asserting that when an employee is acquitted by a court he should be reinstated with full pay for the period he was so suspended under clause 5 (c) (i). The respondents told the court that Mr. Okoth's dismissal was justified by clause 5 (a) (i) which reads:

"Any of the following acts on the part of an employee shall constitute gross misconduct and/or serious neglect and shall justify dismissal:

- (i) If he is guilty of misappropriating any funds or property belonging to the employer or belonging to any person having business dealings with the employer.

The respondents told the court that their nature of work requires a trustworthy employee as it involves money transactions. Because of the foregoing the respondents found Mr. Okoth untrustworthy and lost confidence in him. The respondents prayed the court to reject the claimants demand and uphold Mr. Okoth's dismissal.

The court finds that at the material time there was a fraudulent transaction in the respondents' bank as a result of which they lost Sh. 520,000 which money is alleged to have been received by the cashier who on that day was Mr. Okoth. Mr. Okoth was handed over to the police along with another employee and both of them were charged in the criminal court but were acquitted. In the meantime before the criminal trial was over but after the matter had been referred to the police and while he was awaiting trial the respondents suspended him on 20th September, 1983, and dismissed him on 30th September, 1983.

The court has carefully considered the parties' submissions and has noted with great concern that all the relevant documents pertaining to the aforesaid transaction are missing from the bank and the respondents were therefore not in a position to produce any evidence during the hearing.

The court finds that the respondents erred in not letting the suspension period run for at least ninety (90) days in accordance with subclause 2 as he was awaiting trial. So to begin with Mr. Okoth is entitled to be paid for ninety (90) days for which he should have been suspended.

As far as the question of summary dismissal and reinstatement is concerned the court has come to the conclusion that the circumstances of the whole case are such that the respondents being a financial institution had reasonable grounds to lose confidence in Mr. Okoth. That being so the court finds that they should have handed out a normal termination to Mr. Okoth as he was cleared of the criminal charges by the criminal court. The summary dismissal was not justified under the circumstances. The court accordingly rejects the claimants' demands for Mr. Okoth's reinstatement and payment of all salary for the time he was out of employment but awards that the respondents should pay him ninety (90) days' salary being the period during which he should have been suspended plus all his other dues arising out of a normal termination in accordance with the collective agreement in force at the time.

Given in Nairobi on the 13th January, 1987.
