CAUSE NO. 80 OF 1988

Parties:

Tailors and Textile Workers Union
and
East African Fine Spinners Limited

Issue in dispute:

Termination of Mrs. Sarah Andere's services.

THE Tailors and Textile Workers Union shall hereinafter be referred to as the claimants and the East African Fine Spinners Limited shall hereinafter be referred to as the respondents.

2. The parties were heard in Nairobi on 20th and 21st September, and 26th October, 1989, 9th January and 1st February, 1990, and relied on their written and verbal submissions. In addition they called the following witnesses to give evidence on oath:

Claimants:

Sarah Andere (Mrs.)
Harrison Achuti.
Yohannes Ajuok.

Respondents:

Joseph Kanyiri.
Mutiso Mwansau.
Samuel Ngachir.
Wilson R. Mithamo.

AWARD

3. The Notification of Dispute Form "A", dated 23rd June, 1988, and duly signed by the parties was received by the court on 10th October, 1988, together with the statutory certificates signed by the Minister for Labour and the Labour Commissioner.

The grievant was initially employed by the respondents, who are a parastatal, on casual basis in November 1973; and, in January 1974, she was confirmed on permanent terms of employment. She was terminated on 22nd August, 1985, allegedly for stealing four spools of thread.

The respondents alleged that on 20th August, 1985, at about 10.00 p.m., when the shift workers were reporting off duty, the grievant was seen by a hired security guard from Intersec Security Company drop four spools of thread which she had stolen from her place of work. In consequence, her services were terminated by a letter dated 22nd August, 1985.

The parties met at their own level with a view to reaching a mutually acceptable compromise, but no settlement was reached. The claimants therefore formally reported a trade dispute to the Minister for Labour, and an official investigation was carried out as usual. On 17th May, 1988, the Chief Industrial Relations Officer forwarded his report to the parties in which he stated that the management had no sufficient grounds to dispense with Mrs. Andere's services, and as such she suffered wrongful termination. He, therefore, recommended that Mrs. Sarah Andere be paid four months' salary as compensation for wrongful termination in addition to the terminal benefits offered by the management.

The recommendation was acceptable to the respondents but the claimants rejected it, and the matter is now before the court for adjudication.

The claimants prayed the court to reinstate the grievant to her former job, without any loss of seniority or benefits, and also order the respondents to pay her for the period she has been out of employment.

The respondents prayed the court to reject the claimants' demand and uphold their decision.

This case involves the grievant who had worked for the respondents for a period of 12 years. The respondents accused her of having stolen four spools of thread of 1,000 yards each on the night of 20th August, 1985, for which she was arrested inside the bus, after she identified herself, and escorted to the security office at the main gate for further investigation. In her statement which was taken immediately after her arrest, she denied that she stole and dropped the spools of thread. She has persisted in her denial and refused to accept the terminal benefits offered to her by the respondents.

Although the written and verbal submissions in this dispute, and the evidence tendered in support thereof, were detailed and lengthy, the issue for determination is simple, and it is "whether or not the grievant stole the aforementioned spools of thread". But, before that issue is determined, at every stage of the hearing of this dispute the court was faced with the great anxiety of "how far should the court go into matters which seemed to show that the grievant was guilty of a criminal offence". The answer is simple: This court is not the suitable forum to determine criminal guilt or innocence of the grievant.

The court was able to check the evidence of one witness against that of another and found that on the whole, the evidence tendered by the witnesses in this dispute was far-fetched and fell so far short of any evidential value for the court to place any reliance on it. The only material witnesses who would have assisted the court in this matter were the Intersec Security guards, particularly the male guard, who were alleged to have seen the grievant drop the spools of thread outside the inspection room, and arrested her. The respondents were unable to call them on the ground that the firm has since closed down; and, in the absence of their evidence, the court finds that they acted unfairly and unreasonably in terminating the grievant's services.

Considering all the facts of this dispute, the court finds them in favour of the grievant, and provides a devastatingly glaring example of a great injustice against a poor woman on the ground of suspicion only; and, in such a case, the court must always remember the cardinal principle of justice that no man is to be condemned on suspicion. There must be evidence which proves her guilt before she is pronounced to be so. The termination of her services was, therefore, a bit sinister, a bit strange and a bit unsavoury.

Having made the above observations, and after serious consideration and thorough examination of all the submissions made by the parties, and the evidence tendered by the witnesses in this dispute, the court is convinced that, although it exercises its powers of ordering the reinstatement of an employee most cautiously and sparingly, the grievant's reinstatement in this case is fully merited despite the lapse of four years and seven months since she lost her job.

In the circumstances, the court awards that the grievant should be reinstated to her job which she was doing when her services were terminated with effect from the first day of the month following the court award. Her services should be deemed to have continued without a break as far as seniority, wage increments, etc., are concerned. The court further awards that the grievant should be paid six months' salary by way of compensation for the wrongful termination that she has suffered. She is not, however, entitled to any salary for the period she was out of work.

Dated the 3rd April, 1990.

THE INDUSTRIAL COURT CAUSE NO. 59 OF 1989

Parties:

Bakery, Confectionery, Manufacturing and Allied Workers' Union
and Elliots Bakeries Ltd.

Issue in dispute:

Wrongful dismissal of two employees, namely Samuel Asiyo and David Nyaigoti.

THE Bakery, Confectionery, Manufacturing and Allied Workers' Union shall hereinafter be referred to as the claimants and the Elliots Bakeries Limited shall hereinafter be referred to as the respondents.

2. The parties were heard in Nairobi on 14th November, 1989, and 19th and 25th February, 1990, and relied on their written and verbal submissions. In addition, the claimants called the first grievant to give evidence on oath.

AWARD

3. The Notification of Dispute Form "A" dated 27th February, 1989, and duly signed by the parties, was received by the court on 27th July, 1989, together with the statutory certificates signed by the Minister for Labour and the Labour Commissioner.

The respondents are the largest company involved in bread baking and allied products in their branches in Nairobi, Nakuru and Nyeri. In addition, they have a large distribution outlets throughout the country.

The first grievant was employed by the respondents on 1st April, 1974, as a plant hand at a salary of Sh. 351 per month. He was promoted to a doughmaker, and at the time of his summary dismissal on 10th June, 1985, his salary stood at Sh. 1,915 per month. The grievant served the respondents for a period of eleven years.

The second grievant was employed by the respondents on 25th July, 1978, also as a plant hand at a salary of Sh. 592 per month. He was promoted to a dividerman, and at the time of his summary dismissal on 12th June, 1985, he was receiving a salary of Sh. 1,915 per month. The grievant served the respondents for a period of six years.

The first grievant's services were terminated on the allegation that he was caught "red-handed" attempting to steal yeast. The second grievant's services were terminated because he refused to explain how the conveyor belt which was attached to the dividers had been cut by a sharp object.

The parties met at their own level with a view to resolving the matter, but no settlement was reached. The claimants then reported a formal trade dispute to the Minister for Labour, and, having gone through the usual machinery of investigation, the Ministry's recommendations were that the grievants' dismissal be reduced to normal termination and be paid all their terminal benefits. Further, they should be paid six months' and four months' salary, respectively, as compensation for wrongful dismissal.

The recommendations were acceptable to the claimants, but the respondents rejected them. Hence the matter is now before the court for consideration.

The court has carefully considered and analysed the written submissions and verbal arguments made by the parties, and the evidence tendered in respect of the first grievant, and notes that the grievant was summarily dismissed by the respondents on suspicion of criminal wrongdoing in connection with his employment. This is apparent from his letter of summary dismissal wherein the respondents stated that the grievant was "caught red-handed" attempting to steal yeast. On the other hand, the respondents contended in their written submissions and verbal arguments that the shift controller, Mr. Maina, met the grievant at the main doughroom door holding an empty carton; and, after carrying out a search in the doughroom, he found a hidden carton containing some yeast behind a discharger. In consequence, the respondents called for some written statements from the grievant's workmates in connection with the alleged theft.

From the foregoing, it is therefore manifestly clear to the court that the respondents' letter of the grievant's summary dismissal and their written submissions and verbal arguments are radically contradictory, to say the least.

Although a criminal activity of an employee related to his work would seem to be sufficient misconduct, the court is convinced that in this case the grievant was only suspected of a criminal act, but there was no, or sufficient, evidence to warrant his summary dismissal.

Accordingly, the court has come to the conclusion that the grievant was wrongfully dismissed; and, in the circumstances, awards that his summary dismissal be reduced to normal termination of service and he should be paid all his terminal benefits as stipulated in the parties' collective agreement. In addition, he should also be paid nine months' salary by way of compensation for wrongful dismissal.

The second grievant's services were terminated by the respondents on the ground that he "refused to give an explanation" regarding the damaged conveyor belt, which "was found to have been cut by a sharp object." On 7th May, 1985, the grievant was requested to give his explanation in writing so as to reach the respondents on 9th May, 1985 at 8.30 a.m. but he refused or failed to do so, and was summarily dismissed as aforesaid.

It is not clear from the respondents' written and verbal submissions, and the letter of his summary dismissal, whether the grievant lost his job because he damaged the conveyor belt or as a result of his insubordination in refusing to give an explanation regarding the damaged conveyor belt. Although the last paragraph of the letter of his summary dismissal states "that the company considers that the offence committed by you as serious," it is quite uncertain to which of the two offences did the respondents have in their mind.

In view of this ambiguity, the court has decided, on the balance of probabilities, to give the second grievant the benefit of the doubt; and award that his summary dismissal be reduced to normal termination of service; and in addition to his terminal benefits as per the parties' collective agreement, he should be paid five (5) months' salary as compensation.

Having come to the above decisions, the claimants' demand for reinstatement of the grievants does not therefore arise and it is accordingly rejected.

Dated the 27th March, 1990.

Judge.

THE INDUSTRIAL COURT CAUSE NO. 67 OF 1989

Parties:

Kenya Shoe and Leather Workers' Union
and
Bata Shoe Co. (K) Limited

Issue in Dispute:

Wrongful termination of J. B. Ngugi's services.

THE Kenya Shoe and Leather Workers Union shall hereinafter be referred to as the claimants and the Bata Shoe Co. (K) Limited shall hereinafter be referred to as the respondents.

2. The parties were heard in Nairobi on 28th February, 1990 and relied on their written and verbal submissions.

AWARD

3. The Notification of Dispute Form "A" dated 14th January, 1989, duly signed by the parties was received by the court on 21st August, 1989, together with the statutory certificates signed by the Minister for Labour and the Labour Commissioner.

Mr. J. B. Ngugi was employed by the respondents on 26th June, 1969, as a trainee salesman at a fortnightly salary of KSh. 161.50 and KSh. 33 house allowance per month. He gradually moved up to KSh. 600 per fortnight.

The claimants alleged that Mr. J. B. Ngugi's services were terminated unlawfully in July 1981, after serving the respondents for 12 years and 1 (one) month. While the respondents alleged that the grievant ceased to be their employee on 31st December, 1973, after a service of 4½ years.

This dispute was reported to the Minister for Labour on 16th January, 1986. Thereafter, the dispute was investigated by the Ministry and the findings and recommendation were released to the parties on 2nd December, 1988. The Ministry's findings were that the respondents had breached Mr. Ngugi's contract of service without any justifiable or apparent reasons. Further to that the respondents had also failed to prove how they paid the grievant's terminal dues on 31st December, 1973.

The Ministry recommended that Mr. Ngugi be paid his terminal dues in accordance with the parties' collective agreement, in addition to six months salary as compensation for wrongful termination that he has suffered.

This dispute had originally been started by the Kenya Management Staff Association (K.M.S.A.). At that time the K.M.S.A. had reported a trade dispute on behalf of Mr. Ngugi and Mr. Nyoike. It is admitted that the respondents paid Mr. Nyoike a sum of KSh. 21,144.50 and settled his claim but have persistently refused to accept any liability to pay the grievant anything because they maintain that the grievant was paid his terminal dues on 31st December, 1973, after which he ceased to be their employee. Unfortunately for the respondents, they have not been able to prove either with documentary evidence or otherwise that the grievant was paid his terminal dues. The grievant has most strongly denied that he has received any terminal dues from the respondents.

The court can see no reason why the grievant should be treated any differently from Mr. Nyoike and the court finds that the respondents are liable to pay the grievant his terminal dues as at 31st December, 1973.

As far as the grievant's alleged service with the respondents after 31st December, 1973 is concerned, the court is inclined to believe that the new Bata shop owners assumed responsibility for the grievant's services.

Under the aforesaid circumstances the court awards that the respondents should pay the grievant a sum of KSh. 27,000 in full and final settlement of all his dues representing his terminal benefits as at 31st December, 1973.

Recognition Agreement.

THE Kenya Union of Employees of Voluntary Associations, Trade Unions and Allied Organizations (KUEVATUA) shall hereinafter be referred to as the claimants and the Baptist Publications House shall hereinafter be referred to as the respondents. The Kenya Union of Printing, Publishing, Paper Manufacturing and Allied Workers (KUPRIPUPA) shall hereinafter be referred to as the interested party.

2. The parties were heard in Nairobi on 18th January, 1990, and relied on their written and verbal submissions.

AWARD

3. The Notification of Dispute Form "A" dated 8th February, 1989, and duly signed by the parties was received by the court on 15th September, 1989, together with the statutory certificates signed by the Labour Commissioner.

The respondents, who are publishers of religious literature, commenced their operations in 1962. They employ at present 20 workers and their main activities include printing, publishing, editing, writing, book sales, literature sales, lithographic, marketing and distribution of printed materials.

The interested party negotiated and signed a recognition agreement with the respondents in March 1981, and following their recruitment of majority of the respondents' employees into their union, has concluded several collective agreements with them. The claimants now want the respondents to revoke the recognition agreement with the interested party and accord them recognition as the sole representative of their employees.

The claimants have alleged that this dispute arose because the interested party had failed in their responsibilities and obligations to the respondents' employees who have since joined their union. The dispute was reported to the Ministry of Labour for investigation, and its recommendation was that the claimants should not be accorded recognition.

The claimants rejected the Ministry's recommendation and the matter is now before the court for consideration. After careful consideration of the parties' submissions and thorough scrutiny of the documentary evidence before it, the court finds that the interested party has had a valid recognition and several collective agreements with the respondents; but the claimants have argued that the respondents' undertaking fell under their constitution. Moreover, almost all the respondents' employees are their members. But unfortunately for the claimants, they did not produce the check-off list of the alleged employees who have joined their union in order to support their case. As this court has repeatedly pointed out in some other awards, a majority of membership alone by itself is not indeed the criteria on which recognition dispute can be decided. The court has also in the past given several decisions in this respect, and has consistently upheld the system of industrial trade unionism that has developed over the years in Kenya. The trade union movement in this country has always enjoyed the enviable position of having the highest reputation in the field of industrial relations and boards of a negotiating machinery which conforms very closely with the industrial trade unionism.

It should also be remembered that, although the workers in Kenya are guaranteed freedom of association, such freedom has got to be exercised in accordance with the established industrial relations system prevailing in this country.

In this case, if the employees have any complaints regarding the terms and conditions of their employment, then they must channel these complaints through the interested party, which is their current proper trade union, who will no doubt make the necessary representation to the respondents.

For these reasons and keeping in view the principle of industrial trade unionism in the country, the court finds that a situation where trade unions encroach on each other's area of representation creates unnecessary conflicts and this cannot be in the interest of the Government, employers and the employees. The court does not also wish to be used to destroy valid existing bargains or to enforce some recognition agreements which might prop up flabby trade union structures.

In the circumstances, the court finds no ground for disturbing the recognition agreement existing between the respondents and the interested party, and has therefore come to the conclusion that it must uphold the recommendation made by the Ministry of Labour and awards that the status quo should be maintained.

The claimants' demand is accordingly rejected.
