GAZETTE NOTICE NO. 2989

IN THE INDUSTRIAL COURT OF KENYA

CAUSE NO. 36 OF 2005

KENYA HOTELS AND ALLIED WORKERS UNION—(Claimant)

VERSUS

AND

KENYA UNION OF DOMESTIC HOTELS, EDUCATIONAL INSTITUTIONS, HOSPITALS AND ALLIED WORKERS—(Interested Party)

Issues in Dispute:

"Refusal to Sign a Recognition Agreement"

The Kenya Hotels and Allied Workers Union, represented by Walter Musi shall hereinafter be referred to as "the Claimant" and Messrs. Tea Hotel (Kericho), represented by Harrison Okeche, shall hereinafter be referred to as "the Respondent", while the Kenya Union of Domestic, Hotels, Educational Institutions, Hospitals and Allied Workers, represented by Mwari S. Njiru shall hereinafter be referred to as "the interested party".

The parties were heard in Court on 24th January, and 9th March, 2006. They relied on their written memoranda and they also made oral submissions in support of their respective cases.

AWARD

This dispute was referred to the Court by the Minister for Labour and Human Resource Development exercising his powers conferred on him by the provisions of section 8 of the Trade Disputes Act, Cap. 234, hereinafter referred to as "the Act". The letter or reference together with the statutory certificate issued by the Labour Commissioner under the provision of section 14 (9) (e) of the Act, were received by the Court on 17th March, 2005. The parties appeared in Court on 6th April, 2005, when directions on filing of memoranda, enjoining of the interested party and on hearing date were given. These directions were varied by the Court on diverse dates thereafter in order to accommodate the parties due to their failure to file the memoranda as initially directed.

The Claimant filed its memorandum of claim on 29th April, 2005 and a supplementary memorandum on 1st February, 2006. The Respondent filed its reply memorandum on 27th May, 2005 while the interested party filed its memorandum on 23rd June, 2005.

In its memorandum of claim and in the supplementary memorandum, the Claimant Union avers that it was registered in 1999 following the ruling of the High Court in Appeal No. 10 of 1999. The Appeal was against the refusal of the Registrar of Trade Unions to register the Claimant Union. The registration of the Claimant Union introduced the Claimant as a player in the industrial relations system alongside the Kenya Union of Domestic Hotels, Educational Institutions, Hospitals and Allied Workers. The Claimant union contends that it recruited workers in the Respondent Hotel and that such workers withdrew from the Interested Party Union and joined the Claimant Union. A signed check-off notice was forwarded to the Respondent. The Claimant contends that after recruiting fifty (50) out of sixty (60) employees of the Respondent, it approached the latter for recognition and that recognition was refused on the ground that there was already in existence recognition between the Respondent and the Interested Party. The Claimant Union reported a trade dispute to the Minister for Labour in accordance with the provision of the section 4 of the Act. The Minister accepted the report of the dispute and appointed an investigator. The Minister's investigator made a finding that although the Claimant Union had recruited fifty (50) out of sixty (60) employees as contended by the Claimant, there was mass withdrawal of the Respondent employees from the Claimant Union back to the Interested Party Union, and that therefore the Claimant Union should be denied recognition. The Claimant Union rejected the finding and recommendation of the Minister's investigator, and asked the Minister to refer the dispute to this Court.

The Claimant Union further contends that the Respondent has always refused to recognize the Claimant on the ground that the Employer /Respondent is a member of Kenya Association of Hotel Keepers and Caterers, which has an omnibus Collective Agreement with the Interested Party.

The Claimant Union faults the finding of mass withdrawal by the investigator as the basis of refusal by the Respondent to accord recognition; the return of the Interested Party to the industry of representation of the workers in the hotels after the Ministry of Labour in a demarcation committee report in 2002 duly recognized the Claimant as the proper union to represent the workers, and also the legality of the blanket collective agreement between the Interested Party and the Kenya Association of Hotel Keepers and Caterers.

The Claimant Union prays to this Court to order and award;

- (i) That the Minister's findings and recommendations be set aside;
- (ii) That the Claimant Union be the sole legitimate representative of the unionisable employees in the Respondent Hotel;
- (iii) The Respondent to sign a formal recognition agreement with the Claimant within a specified time;
- (iv) The Kenya Association of Hotel Keepers and Caterers (employers Association) to accord formal recognition to the Union Claimant;
- (v) The KUDHEIHA (Interested Party) to amend Rule 3 of its Constitution by deleting the words "Hotels, Restaurant, Casinos, catering and other establishments providing lodging, food beverages or both and further categories of related establishments providing tourism services."

The Respondent in its Reply memorandum has resisted the demand for recognition by the Claimant. It is contended that even though the Claimant Union had at one time recruited fifty (50) out of sixty (60) employees of Respondent, there was a mass withdrawal of such employees from the Claimant Union and back to the Interested Party Union. It was further contended that the Respondent Hotel is a member of the Association of Hotel Keepers and Caterers, and therefore the Claimant Union should have recruited a simple majority of the employees from all the members of the Association. The Respondent therefore argues that at no time did the Claimant Union recruit a simple majority of the Respondent employees in order to be entitled to be accorded recognition as envisaged by the provisions of section 5 (2) of the Act. It was further contended by the Respondent that the Claimant Union did not meet the other two conditions for formal recognition as required by section 5 (2) of the Act, namely;

- (i) that the Claimant Union was not the proper union to represent the employees in the particular industry;
- (ii) that there was no rival union claiming representation

The Respondent argued that the Interested Party had been the union representing employees in the hotel industry and that there was already a recognition agreement between the Kenya Association of Hotels Keepers and Caterers and the Interested Party. It was contended that following the recognition agreement as aforesaid, there was in place a Collective Bargaining Agreement negotiated by the Interested Party and the Association, which bound the Respondent Hotel as a member and which was valid having been registered by this Court in the year 2004.

The Respondent further argued that the Claimant's case infringed on the right of association of the Respondent which right is protected under section 80 (1) of the Constitution of Kenya, and ILO Convention No 87. The Respondent also argued that the quest for recognition of the Claimant offends the principle of equality before the law in that the Respondent will lose the right to be represented by the Association in its collective bargaining.

The Respondent thus prayed to this Court to dismiss the Claimant's demand for recognition.

In its memorandum, the Interested Party averred that as a trade union, it is mandated to represent workers in the hotel industry. It claims that employees in the Respondent hotel had joined the Claimant Union due to euphoria but that the said employees withdrew and rejoined the Interested Party. The Interested Party maintains that it has already negotiated a collective agreement with Respondent through the Association of Hotel Keepers and Caterers. The Interested Party thus submits that the Minister's findings refusing recognition to the Claimant be upheld; that the Claimant Union has not satisfied the requirements for recognition as stipulated in section 5 (2) of the Act, and that by giving recognition to the Claimant Union, the Court may bring chaos to an otherwise very stable situation.

The Interested Party therefore prays the Court to reject the demand for recognition by the Claimant.

The Court has carefully considered the written memoranda and appendices filed by the parties, the oral submissions made by the representative of the parties in support of their respective cases, and the court has also considered the provisions of the law applicable to the issue of the recognition by the employer of the trade union to represent the workers in the respective industry.

The representatives of the parties relied on their respective written memoranda filed. The oral submissions merely amplified the issues contained in the memoranda. The representative of the Claimant Union introduced a number of authorities which comprise of the Industrial Relations Charter revised in 1984, as well as several decisions of this Court touching on the issue of recognition. The diligence of the representative of the Claimant in preparing and producing these authorities is to be commended, but it must be noted that while the authorities are relevant to the issue of recognition, the most important provision of the law in relation to the issue of recognition is to be found in section 5 (2) of the Trade Disputes Act, Cap 234. This provision is that when the Minister for Labour is satisfied that a trade union has recruited a majority of the employees in an enterprise, and where there is no rival union claiming to represent such employees, and also where the constitution of the said trade union allows it to recruit in that particular industry, then the Minister will order the particular employer to accord the trade union formal recognition. That in essence is the legal provision relating to the question of whether a trade union such as the Claimant or the Interested Party shall be the representative of the employees of the Respondent Hotel.

Reference to the Constitution of Kenya as recognizing the right of an employee, or an employer to belong to a trade union or to the Industrial Relations Charter explaining the role of the Government in recognizing the rights and obligations of the employer and worker organizations in the industrial relations system while relevant in general, the provisions of section 5 (2) of the Trade Disputes Act crystallise the requirements which govern whether an employer will accord formal recognition to a trade union. The Court in this regard must therefore determine which of the two trade unions, that is the Claimant or the Interested Party is entitled to be accorded formal recognition.

There is no dispute that both the Interested Party and the Claimant are trade unions which are in the business of representing workers in the hospitality industry. The Interested Party is the older trade union having been registered in 1951 and has been representing employees in the hotel industry until 1998 when the Claimant Union appeared on the scene and applied to the Registrar of Trade Unions. The Registrar refused to register, and the Claimant appealed to the High Court in Appeal No. 10 of 1999 against this refusal. The High Court allowed the appeal, and the Claimant union was given legal blessing to be a player in the industry.

The Claimant then started recruitment, and it is common ground, and is not in dispute, that sometimes between 1999 and December 2003, the union Claimant recruited fifty (50) out of sixty (60) employees of the Respondent. A check-off notice as required by the provisions of the Trade Disputes Act was duly forwarded to the Respondent, and the latter as prescribed by the law, started deducting trade union dues and forwarding them to the Claimant.

The dispute arose when the Claimant sought recognition as the trade union which should represent the employees of the Respondent in collectively negotiating terms and conditions of employment. It was argued that the Claimant would not be accorded recognition because there was already in existence recognition and collective agreements between the Respondent and the Interested Party. Therefore, it became the positions of both the Respondent/Employer and the Interested Party that the Claimant did not satisfy the requirements of the provisions of section 5 (2) of the Act to entitle it to demand formal recognition from the Respondent.

The dispute was reported to the Minister as required by the provisions of section 4 of the act. The Minister accepted report of the dispute and in turn as required by the provisions of section 7 of the Act, he appointed an investigator who in turn released a report of the Minister's findings and recommendation. This report has been availed to the Court by the parties; the Claimant has included it in its memorandum as KHAW 4, while the Respondent has included it as Appendix 3.

It was a finding of the Minister's investigator that at one time the Claimant had recruited fifty (50) out of sixty (60) employees of the Respondent, but that in December 2003, these employee re-defected back to the Interested Party, and therefore it was recommended that the Claimant Union be denied formal recognition because it was unable to sustain the majority recruitment it had mustered.

The Minister's investigator seemed to admit that at that stage the Claimant as a union had satisfied the criteria laid down in section 5(2) of the Act and should have been accorded formal recognition. However the Respondent contends that this was not so because the Respondent was a member of an Association under whose umbrella the Interested Party had negotiated both a recognition and collective agreement, and the Claimant would have to seek a majority recruitment from all Association members.

The investigator had argued that the Claimant was not entitled to be accorded recognition because the employees defected back to the Interested Party. This argument was adopted by the Interested Party as well as by the Respondent. The Claimant contends that this argument is faulty because the defections were not genuine in that the letter of withdrawal from the Claimant Union by the Respondent Employees to the Interested Party is not legally sound in that it does contain the union numbers of the individual workers, was typed by one machine and that it does not amount to a real withdrawal.

This Court will have to determine whether the Respondent Employees after indicating to be members of the Claimant Union withdrew en masse back to the membership of the Interested Party. This determination is the crux of the matter in this dispute and will answer the question behind this dispute; namely, is the Claimant Union entitled to be the union which has recruited a majority of the employees of the Respondent Hotel, and is the Claimant Union the most appropriate to represent the employees in the Respondent Hotel, and is there rival Union? In other words, has the Claimant Union satisfied the criteria laid down in section 5 (2) of the Act to be accorded formal recognition?

The contention by the Respondent that the Hotel is a member of the Association of Hotel Keepers and Caterers under whose umbrella recognition and collective agreements have been negotiated with the Interested Party can only be relevant if the Claimant Union was never registered. The registration of the Claimant union may have been unwelcome to the Interested Party because it introduced competition for recruitment of members, but it cannot be wished away. The same recognition of the right employees and employers to join and be members of trade unions which is protected under section 80 of the Constitution of Kenya and by ILO convention No. 87 is as applicable to both the Interested Party as is to the Claimant Union. There can never be a more favoured trade union, as claimed by the Interested Party, and a lesser one. The Claimant Union is an equal, though younger member of the trade union movement, and together with all others enjoy similar legal rights and obligations. Its registration in 1999 must be seen and understood to have introduced changes in the trade union membership. The Court also observes that the Association of Hotel Keepers and Caterers was at the material time a limited liability company which did not have legal capacity to negotiate recognition and collective bargaining agreement as understood in the Industrial Relations system.

The Court therefore upholds the contention of the Claimant that any agreements negotiated between the Respondent and the Interested Party during the period prior to the 30th December, 2005 when the Association of Hotel Keepers and Caterers was registered as a Trade Union, capable of securing Trade Unions rights of its members, are of doubtful legal validity. This Court will not express any legal opinion of registration of such collective agreements by the Industrial Court since under the provisions of section 17 (2) of the Act, the decisions of Industrial Court cannot be questioned, but this Court holds that it was not the Association which was the "employer" as defined by the Act, but the Respondent (Tea Hotel – Kericho) who should have negotiated and concluded recognition and collective agreements. The Association as a limited liability company, as at that time was not legally competent to represent its members in trade union matters.

A lot has been said of the mass defections of the employees of the Respondent from the Claimant Union to the Interested Party. It is agreed by all the parties that the Claimant Union had at one time recruited fifty (50) out of sixty (60) employees of the Respondent. It was contended by both the Respondent and the Interested Party that all these workers returned to the Interested Party. The Respondent has annexed a copy of a letter from an unnamed shop steward as appendix 4. This letter says that members of the staff of the Hotel have withdrawn from the Kenya Hotels and Allied Workers Union (KHAU). The author of this letter was not identified, and the Court may not place much reliance on this communication. Why did the Respondent not call the author of this letter as a witness? None of the employees was also called. The Court therefore agrees with the contention of the Claimant Union that this mass withdrawal of the employees of the Respondent from the Claimant Union is questionable. The findings by the Minister's investigator that the Claimant Union had recruited a majority of Respondent's employees between 1999 and 2003 is upheld, but the finding that these employees, returned to the membership of the Interested Party is not based on credible evidence, and therefore the recommendation that the Claimant Union be denied recognition is flawed and faulty. This Court cannot uphold the recommendation.

The Court finds the other requirements of the existence of a rival union or as to the appropriate union as having been answered when the Claimant Union was registered. Prior to the registration, the Interested Party was the only union recognized by the law as the only and appropriate union to represent workers in the Hotel Industry. After such registration, the Interested Party ought to confine itself to the other areas outside the Hotel Industry. This is keeping with even the International Standards Classifications of Economic Activity which calls for one trade union for one industry. After all, once the Claimant Union was registered, this was in keeping with Spirit of ILO Convention No. 87 and the Industrial Relations Charter both of which seek to promote and nurture the growth of trade unionism.

The Court has considered all the aspects of this dispute and has concluded that the Claimant has established its case on balance of probability. The registration of the Claimant, under the law meant that the activities, of the Interested Party in representing workers in the Hotel industry became restricted. The Respondent like all other related employers may have had a comfortable relationship with the Interested Party, and may have resented the entry of the Claimant Union, but like the birth of a new baby, the older baby must learn to live in a changed situation where the younger entrant is entitled to protection; so the same situation applies here and the due recognition must be given as prescribed by law.

The Court rejects the contentions of the Respondent and of the Interested Party. It accepts the averments and the demand by the Claimant for recognition, and orders:

- (a) that the Respondent, either by itself or through its trade union which the Association of Hotel Keepers and Caterers accords formal recognition to the Claimant Union, and to sign such recognition agreement relating to representation and collective bargaining within sixty (60) days hereof.
- (b) that the Interested Party, that is the Kenya Union of Domestic, Hotels, Educational Institution Hospitals and Allied Workers (KUDHEIHA) do amend Rule 3 of its constitution by deleting the words "Hotel, Restaurants, Casinos, Catering and similar establishments providing lodging, food beverages or both and further categories of related establishments providing tourism services within ninety (90) days.
- (c) that the Interested Party Union, that is the Kenya Union of Domestic Hotels, Educational Institutions, Hospitals and Allied Workers, and more commonly known as KUDHEIHA, be and is hereby prohibited in any way interfering with the rights of the Claimant Union, that is, Kenya Hotels and Allied Workers Union, in the Industrial Relations system after the expiry of the current collective agreement.

- (1) The Kenya Gazette contains notices of a general nature which do not affect legislation. They are, therefore, submitted to the Government Printer directly.

All "copy" submitted for publication should be prepared on one side of an A4 sheet no matter how small the notice is, each page being numbered, and should be typewritten with double spacing. Copy should be clear, legible and contain no alterations.

Particular attention should be paid to the following points:

- (i) Signature must be supported by rubber-stamping or typing the name of the signatory in capital letters.
- (ii) Dates must be correct and filled in where necessary.
- (iii) Care should be taken to ensure that all headings to notices and references to legislation are up to date and conform with the Revised Edition of the Laws of Kenya.
