THE INDUSTRIAL COURT

CAUSE No 15 OF 1970

Parties

Mombasa Dockworkers' Union
and

E A Cargo Handling Services Ltd

Issue in Dispute

Minimum wages for dockworkers, serangs' wage scale, foremen's demand, drivers' demands, winchmen scale, motor-boat drivers' demand, demands of tradesmen general and painters, tradesmen special, checkers and others

1 The Mombasa Dockworkers' Union shall hereinafter be referred to as the Claimants and the East African Cargo Handling Services Ltd shall hereinafter be referred to as the Respondent

2 The parties were heard in Mombasa on the 16th and 17th day of June 1970 and relied on their written and verbal submissions

AWARD

3 On 12th July 1969, the parties entered into an agreement and agreed as follows on duration —

"The duration of this Agreement will be for a period of three years commencing on 12th July 1969"

At any time after 13th May 1972, either party may give the other two months' notice in writing expressing its wish for this Agreement to continue in force for a further period to be agreed upon or its intention to terminate the Agreement or alter any clause in the Agreement

In the latter event the parties will enter into negotiations on the terms and conditions of a new Agreement and, until such time as this is finalized, the present Agreement will continue in force

After 1st September 1969 either party may give the other two months' notice in writing of its desire to reopen negotiations on wages and salaries for unionisable employees and the matters set out in Part 5 of this Agreement. In this event both parties will enter into negotiations on these clauses. Any agreement so reached will be effective from 1st November 1969."

The parties have agreed to a duration period of 18 months from 1st November 1969 regarding any wage increases that might be agreed or awarded as a result of negotiations referred to in the last paragraph of the above quotation

Furthermore, the Part 5 mentioned therein relates to eight matters including housing. It was agreed that negotiations would continue in the Joint Industrial Council on this item along with others

In pursuance to the above the current dispute has arisen which concerns mainly the Claimants' demand for an increase in wages and salaries and the payment of a house allowance to an extent of 10 per cent of the basic salary of every dock-worker. These demands also include introduction of incremental scales for certain categories of workers, the details of which appear hereinafter. The parties having failed to settle the issues in dispute at their own level and through the help of the Ministry of Labour, signed the notification of dispute form to the Industrial Court on 18th April 1970.

The Claimants' demands are as follows —

Dockworkers

Sh 400 as a minimum wage for dockworkers whose services range from one to five years
Sh 450 for dockworkers who have completed five years of service
Sh 500 for dockworkers who have completed ten years of service

During the hearing the Respondents presented a critical analysis of the Claimants' demands as stated hereinabove and pointed out that on gross wages and salaries payments for 1969 of £3,249,326 the increase is £1,058,650 equivalent to 32.58 per cent to the salaries and wages bill

At present wages paid to the monthly category of dockworkers are —

The company does not provide housing to unionisable staff, the provision of which is the responsibility of the employee concerned and salaries and wages are consolidated to include an element for housing.

It is inevitable that no single factor should influence the decision of the Court in these proceedings more than the question of whether or not the dockworkers have improved their efforts in the Respondents' target of increased productivity. The Respondents bitterly complained that the increase in productivity which they had hoped for after the July 1968 agreement had not materialized and produced the productivity indices from July 1968 to March 1970. As these are rather important in this dispute they are reproduced hereinbelow —

The Claimants stressed that the dockworkers' achievements were very satisfactory keeping in view the facilities given to them and many times they had scored above the average target of 10,000 tons per day and ships had come and gone even before their scheduled times because of the hard work put in by the dockworkers, recently they had handled extra ships from Dar which could not be worked there due to the heavy rains. The Claimants stated that Mombasa was rated as one of the best operated ports in Africa and even in the world due to the hard work put in by the dockworkers. For these efforts the dockworkers deserved their services to be rewarded in the form of increase to their wages as demanded by the Claimants.

The Claimants severely criticized the Respondents for any drop in productivity alleging that this was entirely due to inefficient management who had displayed very poor planning and organization. This was denied by the Respondents who submitted that they had accepted their responsibilities in this field and had continually examined their administrative and operational procedures so as to obtain optimum results.

The Respondents stated that the increased efforts which had attained high tonnages shortly after the signing of the January agreement this year had not been maintained and except on rare occasions, in general, 6,000 tons per day was considered a normal return. That an employee can influence tonnages and therefore the general level of productivity is amply proved by the fact that at periods of crisis acceptable tonnages are achieved. However, it was an unfortunate fact that as the crisis died away tonnages tended to drop and the concerted effort of the dockworkers fell away.

The Court finds that there is considerable merit in both these submissions and notes with satisfaction that the Joint Productivity Council has once again been revived at the Mombasa port after the January 1970 crisis there. There is no getting away from the fact that the management and the workers share heavy responsibilities in increasing productivity the management by continually examining the administrative and operational procedures so as to obtain optimum result, and the workers by putting in their maximum efforts. The dockworkers should realize and appreciate the fact that if they do their best on the question of productivity they would be fully justified to an increased share in profits through benefits in salaries and had the Respondents been satisfied in this regard there should have been no case for the parties now appearing before the Court.

The Court would like to stress on the parties that whereas it always does its best under the circumstances to create conditions under which smooth work can proceed primarily the duty rests heavily on both the Respondents and the Claimants to ensure that adequately high productivity is maintained at Mombasa which is so very essential for the overall economic development of and benefit to the country.

The Claimants' other main arguments in brief were that the cost of living had risen in Kenya since the last increase awarded to the dockworkers and that the basic minimum required for a family to meet their essentials per month was Sh 555 as against the basic salary of a dockworker i.e. Sh 367/75 p.m. The other grounds put forward were as follows —

- 1 The dockworkers worked throughout their employment in the most hazardous places
- 2 The dockworkers in the absence of any housing facilities in the vicinity of the port area which would suit their pockets had by force to live on the mainland, far away from the port area. This involved extra expenditure on transport from the pockets of the dockworkers and also most of their energy was wasted due to the distance they had to cover before they got to work
- 3 The cost of living in Kenya had risen considerably while the income of the dockworkers had remained steady
- 4 With the passage of time dockworkers' families had expanded and they had to feed more mouths from the same limited and stagnant income
- 5 The day to day prices of the vital consumer goods (which formed basic necessities only) had increased whereas the income had remained the same
- 6 Shortage of houses in Kenya and in particular in Mombasa had forced the dockworkers to pay more for the houses to enable them and their families to live conveniently
- 7 Under the present scales of wages it was practically impossible for dockworkers to lead a decent life and to give education to their children, leave aside the saving for future
- 8 An average dockworker has at least a wife and three school-going children. It should be observed that it would be difficult for such people to have even one square meal per day for the family on the existing scales
- 9 With the passage of time and with the number of years put in by the worker with the same institution it was appropriate that the worker should be given some increment and impetus by more pay rather than keeping him on the same scale for a number of years without any incentive

- 10 Every individual with the passage of time and the number of years put in the employment, always hoped that he and his family's standard of living should improve It was the hope of increased reward in future that kept an individual working throughout his life
- 11 The dock industry was vital and the only industry of its kind in the country It could not be compared with any other industry or industries in Kenya

The Claimants made a vigorous submission on the issue of house allowance and submitted that they had from the very beginning claimed that every worker in the dock industry should be given house allowance by the Respondents This claim was supported by the following grounds —

- (a) Due to odd hours of work in the docks it was absolutely necessary that a dockworker should maintain a house in the vicinity of the port area
- (b) Due to being out of the house during odd hours to enable them to be on duty it was necessary that for the safety of the family the house should be situated in a safe area
- (c) The involvement of the worker in hard labour when on duty would exhaust him of his energy to such an extent that it would be difficult and impossible for him to walk or go on a bicycle to a long distance after completion of duty
- (d) On scrutinizing wages, benefits salaries and facilities the Court would observe that a worker could hardly save to enable him to procure transport to take him to and from his house
- (e) The Claimants did not wish that all these extra expenses incurred by the worker to maintain a house in the vicinity of the port area be wholly paid or met by the Respondents but it was their strongest submission that the Respondents should contribute 10 per cent of the basic salary of each dockworker to enable him to keep a safe house in the vicinity of the port area
- (f) It was ridiculous to note that most of the workers were compelled to live far from the vicinity of port to secure reasonable houses with the few cents they were left with If they happened to have a family (which was the case always) they would have to accommodate all members of their families in that one room It had become difficult for the workers to live conveniently and as a result they got frustrated and carried all their problems with them to work

The Respondents submitted that it was not their intention or desire to deny increases in wages in times of their prosperity This had been amply proved in the past, the factors which normally governed them when considering increases in wages, salaries and benefits are productivity, cost of living, protection of port users from increased rates and the comparative wages paid to other workers in Kenya They maintained that on the basis of productivity alone there could be no justification for wage increases and that the small increases in the cost of living had been amply covered by the wages negotiated in July 1968, that the Mombasa branch for the year 1969 showed an overall working surplus of £266 only against £123,000 for the first quarter of 1968 immediately preceding the July agreement

The Respondents strongly maintained that it was impossible for their wage structure to be regarded in isolation and that strictly speaking they were Community employees There must be a comparison between wages paid to dockworkers and the comparable wages paid in other industries in Kenya to employees performing the same or similar work The Respondents produced an analysis of wages paid in a number of major local industries which employed workers in similar occupations as the docks and claimed that the favourable position which the dockworkers enjoyed was clearly proved

The Respondents expressed their great concern at the Claimants' demand for the introduction of a house allowance distinct from salary and wages They stated that this was merely a manoeuvre by the Claimants to support an extremely weak case for salary and wage increases They asked the Court to rule that the issue of house allowance in an industry which has provided consolidated salary and wages scales over years of negotiation and tested on innumerable occasions before arbitrators and the Industrial Court, could not now be reasonably revived

The Respondents commented as follows on the points made by the Claimants in respect of their demand on housing —

- (a) The Respondents could not economically build a housing estate to house its 7,000 workers and therefore there was no alternative for the majority of workers other than to live at some distance from the port area The Respondents had a permanent arrangement with the Municipal Housing Estate at Tudor and Changamwe whereby as many employees as possible were accommodated depending on the houses available and the Respondents collected and guaranteed rents and water bills At the present moment at Tudor 145, Makande 27 and Changamwe 240 workers were assisted in this manner and if it were possible for these estates to be vastly increased in size the problem of dockworkers housing could be greatly relieved

(b) The Claimants had overlooked a very vital fact which must be taken into consideration when considering the housing of the dockworkers A very large proportion of dockworkers had lived in the coast area for the best part of their lives, indeed many of them had been there for several generations, and consequently had established themselves in areas around Mombasa and at some distance from the port, no matter how advantageous in theory it was a practical fact that the majority of these workers would not easily be persuaded to leave their present houses and living areas and move into the vicinity of the port Thus it was neither within the Respondents' economical competence at the present time to build a vast housing estate nor did they believe that it would be a practical proposition even if such a housing estate was provided for the majority of the port workers to leave their long established homes and move into a new area adjacent to the port

(c) The Claimants claim that the dockworker was exhausted after shift's work was an exaggeration but again the Respondents did not deny that the shorter his route to his house the better it would be for all concerned The Respondents had through their Club endeavoured to assist workers to obtain bicycles at a cheap rate and on repayment terms 5,474 bicycles had been provided on this basis

(d) In the main it was not as the Claimants claim a lack of money which ultimately decided where the dockworker lived The problem of housing was not peculiar to the dockworker as there was a shortage on the island and increased wages would not solve this problem there was no doubt that until housing estates could be provided a large number of industrial and dockworkers would continue to live at a distance from their work

The Respondents reiterated that this was a factor which had been taken into account when wages and salaries had been negotiated and scales formulated in the past An element therefore in the salaries and wages had always been present to provide for housing and the necessity for those at a long distance to use public transport This was not a new feature

The Respondents stated that it was understood that since the last pay award there had been increases in Municipal housing rents but it must also be accepted that previous to these increases there had been a considerable period of rent stability during which the Respondents' wages had moved upward substantially without any increase in Municipal rents, furthermore, rent increases were equally applicable to all residents and not merely to those employed in the docks The majority of these residents enjoyed substantially lower emoluments than the Respondents' employees

The Respondents vigorously urged the Court to reject this attempt to break down a long established consolidated wage structure by the introduction of this new item of house allowance

The Court has carefully considered the various submissions made by the parties and has paid particular attention to the Claimants' contention that conditions at the Mombasa Port were such that they contributed to the poor health of the dockworkers The Court finds that the conditions at the docks have not deteriorated in any way since the parties appeared before the Court previously The fact that 19 or so employees have been medically boarded out, from a total labour force of many thousands is not very significant The Court has always taken into consideration the arduous nature of a docker's work in considering the amount of wage increase to be granted The Court notes that due to the gradual process of mechanization at the port the dockworkers' physical efforts have been considerably lightened

The Court has taken due note of the fact that the Claimants' demands have frequently included in this dispute submissions for altering incremental scales The fact is that in previous years the parties have negotiated towards the establishment of a single rate for the job throughout the manual grades For the first time in July 1968 agreement, the Respondents and the Claimants agreed to introduce wage scales in a wide range of categories applicable to length of service and the agreement provided specific wages for under 5 years, 5-10 years and over 10 years This was just about 18 months ago and the Court cannot see any justification for awarding a vastly increased differential in these three categories The Court is aware that in the Clerical, Foremen and Supervisory scales incremental scales exist covering the range from the Junior Checker right through to the B 3 Supervisor with only promotional breaks intervening

The Court has come to the conclusion that house allowance should not be introduced as a separate item at present and that the past practice of paying workers a consolidated wage should continue The Court has taken into consideration, in assessing the wage increase to the workers, the very strong submissions which were made by the Claimants on the issue of house allowance

The Claimants have also demanded that the title "serang" be substituted with the title 'junior foreman' and that serangs be removed from manual terms and conditions of service into staff terms and conditions of service Further they have asked the Court to award that the post of a head winchman be created who would be responsible for the winchmen in the port area

The Court has very carefully considered these demands but finds that sufficient evidence was not placed before it to come to any conclusion on this matter. In any case, the Court finds that the question that a serang's job has radically changed over the years and that he should therefore be designated a "junior foreman" should be gone into as and when the parties decide to embark on a job evaluation exercise. This is a decision which no doubt could be taken at some future date as the evidence suggests that there is no urgency for re-evaluating jobs. That would also be the appropriate time for considering the creation of a new post of 'head winchman'. In the meantime both these demands are rejected.

The Court notes that the average earnings of monthly dock-workers for 1969 were Sh 471/43 p.m. The average earnings of winchmen for the same year were Sh 618/15, of serangs Sh 613/88, of drivers Sh 639/84 and of ITD drivers Sh 536/87. The Court appreciates that these include the overtime put in by the workers but the fact remains that opportunities and conditions exist whereby the workers can increase their take home wage considerably.

The Court notes that sometime back during negotiations the Respondents had offered a general increase of Sh 10 p.m. to be paid to all workers which after they withdrew during the hearing and asked the Court to make a nil award. This the Court is not prepared to do and the Court finds that the dock-workers are entitled to a wage increase. One rather embarrassing feature of this dispute is that as a result of the July 1968 agreement between the parties the effective date of any wage increase has already been agreed to be 1st November 1969.

The Court awards a wage increase of Sh 15 p.m. to all workers except those supervisors who are at present on incremental scales B 5, B 4 and B 3, with effect from 1st November 1969, for a period of nine months, thereafter the said workers shall get another increase of Sh 10 p.m. for the next nine months.

The Court would like to strongly urge the parties to take due note of the Court's feelings as expressed hereinabove on the question of productivity.

GAZETTE NOTICE NO 2113

THE INDUSTRIAL COURT CAUSE NO 17 OF 1970

Parties —

Kenya Union of Commercial Food and Allied Workers
and

Tea Samples Distributors

Issues in dispute —

- 1 Wages increase
- 2 Annual leave
- 3 Leave travelling allowance
- 4 Effective date

1 The Kenya Union of Commercial Food and Allied Workers shall hereinafter be referred to as the Claimants and the Tea Samples Distributors shall hereinafter be referred to as the Respondents.

2 The parties were heard in Mombasa on the 15th day of June 1970, and relied on their written and verbal submissions

AWARD

3 A recognition agreement was signed between the parties on 29th February 1968 and an agreement on terms and conditions of employment was signed on 23rd May 1968, effective from 1st May 1968, for a period of 18 months.

The Claimants gave notice by letter dated 17th October 1969 of their intention to vary the 1968 agreement and stated that the proposed amendments to the agreement would follow. In December 1969, they submitted their proposals on revised terms and conditions of employment to the Respondents and meetings took place between the parties to discuss them. The last meeting was held on 17th February 1970. The Respondents criticized the Claimants for failing to arrange and attend meetings on 8th January and 3rd February 1970. At the meeting of 17th February deadlock was registered on four issues in dispute and the Claimants reported the existence of the trade dispute to the Ministry of Labour and a conciliator was appointed on 6th March 1970. The final conciliation was held on 26th March 1970, but no agreement could be reached on the first three items and the parties decided to refer the matter to the Industrial Court and signed the notification of dispute form on 27th April 1970.

The Claimants alleged that when the notification of dispute form had been prepared, as far as they were concerned there were only three issues in dispute, as the issue of effective date and duration was settled during conciliation. They produced a copy of a letter dated 10th April 1970, addressed by the Conciliator to the Permanent Secretary, Ministry of Labour, in which under the heading of "effective date" it is stated as follows —

"The Union agreed to compromise, and proposed 1st February 1970, as effective date. It was agreed on a 36-month duration period."

In view of this they were rather surprised when they noticed that the Respondents had added the issue of "effective date" on the notification of dispute form and asked the Court to rule that this issue was not in dispute. The Respondents stated that as far as they were concerned they were under the impression that this issue was still outstanding and they had therefore put it in so that the Court could give its ruling on it.

The Court has carefully gone through the relevant evidence on this point and has come to the conclusion that the issue of effective date and duration has been settled as claimed by the Claimants and therefore rules that this issue is not in dispute.

The Court accepts the Respondents' submission that they are a service company and not a trading organization as they provide a service to the Tea Industry and East Africa Tea Traders' Association sampling for the recently established East Africa Auctions of tea in Mombasa. The Respondents informed the Court that they are provided with tea in small debbies from either the warehouses in Mombasa or direct from the tea estates. This tea is bulked and packed into small sample envelopes each containing from 2 to 8 oz of tea. These samples are carefully tabulated and then distributed to the prospective buyers of tea thus enabling them to taste the quality of the tea which would be coming up for auction and to enable them to send samples to all foreign countries to obtain bids on behalf of the overseas buyers. They maintained that no charge was made for this service but the company was financed by a monthly payment made by the African Tea Brokers Ltd which is not a variable amount and must cover all the expenses including rent, wages, salaries, postages, etc.

The Claimants on the other hand maintained that they were demanding wage increases for the employees already in employment as the Respondents' business was prosperous and stated that in 1968 the Respondents had granted wage increases ranging from Sh 30 to Sh 40 p.m. for a period of 18 months and as their business has greatly improved since then, they were in a better and healthy position to afford a better increase in wages than the one in 1968.

The Court notes that prior to the first agreement tea samplers were paid Sh 180 p.m. consolidated. This was increased by the first agreement to Sh 220 p.m. and thereafter on the Respondents being satisfied with their services employees were given a merit increase of a further Sh 10 on the 1st July 1969, raising the existing minimum rate to Sh 230 p.m. for tea samplers and Sh 290 p.m. for the driver. During negotiations the Respondents had offered an increase of Sh 20 p.m. to all the employees. This offer was later increased to 10 per cent giving tea samplers an increase of Sh 23 p.m. and the driver Sh 29 p.m. The Claimants had not moved from their final demand of Sh 35 for tea samplers and Sh 40 for the driver.

Wage increase — After a careful consideration of all the submissions the Court makes the following award on wages. The Court awards that new entrants for the job of tea sampler should get a consolidated rate of Sh 245 p.m. and after 18 months they should go up to Sh 270 p.m. Those who are already in employment should get a consolidated monthly wage of Sh 255 p.m. for the first 18 months and Sh 280 consolidated p.m. for the next 18 months. In the case of the driver he should get a consolidated monthly wage of Sh 320 p.m. for the first 18 months and Sh 350 p.m. for the next 18 months.

It should be noted that the current rates for those already in employment as tea samplers is Sh 230 consolidated p.m. and the driver gets Sh 290 p.m.

The parties have agreed as stated hereinabove in the award that the effective date is 1st February 1970, and that the duration period is 36 months.

Annual leave — The Court can see no reason to vary the existing provision granting 21 consecutive days' leave with full pay and therefore makes a nil award.

Leave travelling allowance — The Claimants have demanded that the leave travelling allowance should be increased to Sh 80 per year. The Court is satisfied that during conciliation the Respondents had offered to increase the current leave travelling allowance from Sh 40 to Sh 60 to be paid to employees proceeding on annual leave. Accordingly the Court awards that the workers should be paid a leave travelling allowance of Sh 60 when they proceed on leave.
