GAZETTE NOTICE NO. 1753

THE INDUSTRIAL COURT
CAUSE NO. 104 OF 1985

Parties:

Tailoring and Textile Workers Union
and

National and Seasun Garment Factory Limited

Issue in dispute:

Refusal to implement the terms of Mass Production Group (1980-1982) agreement resulting in underpayment of employees.

THE Tailoring and Textile Workers' Union shall hereinafter be referred to as the claimants and the National and Seasun

Garments Factory Limited shall hereinafter be referred to as the respondents.

2. The parties were heard in Nairobi on 17th April, 1986, 18th December, 1986, 25th and 26th November, 1987, 18th July, 1989 and 7th February, 1990 and relied on their written and verbal submissions. The court also caused extensive checks through the Chief Industrial Relations Officer's office of the records of the respondents' employees regarding the jobs they performed and the payments they received during the material time.

AWARD

3. The Notification of Dispute Form "A" dated 17th April, 1985, duly signed by the parties was received by the court on 24th September, 1985, together with the statutory certificate signed by the Labour Commissioner.

The respondents are manufacturers of garments. As a result of the nature of their business they were members of the Mombasa and Coast Tailors Employers Association. The Association was responsible for negotiating wages and other terms and conditions of employment for the employees of their members with the claimants. The parties have since then entered into several collective agreements and the last of such agreement expired on 31st July, 1980. Consequently, the parties, on 14th January, 1981, renewed their collective agreement with a duration of two years effective from 1st August, 1980 and expiring on 31st July, 1982.

This dispute arose when the respondents allegedly refused to give wage increases to their employees as agreed by the parties in the aforesaid 1980-82 collective agreement.

The department of Industrial Relations in the Ministry of Labour investigated this dispute and its report indicates that a total of 50 employees were actually underpaid. The underpayment is to the tune of KSh. 74,834.

The list of the affected employees and their underpayment is as follows:

Gross Total Arrears Due 74,834

The court gave every possible chance to the respondents to prove that there was no underpayment to their employees under the 1980-82 collective agreement but they failed to do that. The court finds it fully proved that the aforesaid employees were underpaid by the amounts shown against their names.

Under the aforesaid circumstances the court has no alternative but award that the workers should be paid the arrears due to them as a result of underpayments by the respondents. The total amount awarded by the court to the workers is KSh. 74,834.

In view of the respondents financial difficulties the court directs them to pay the arrears (KSh. 74,834) in seven equal monthly instalments commencing on 10th April, 1990 and thereafter on the 10th of each succeeding month.

The respondents should deposit these instalments with the Provincial Labour Officer, Mombasa, from where each worker can go and collect his dues. These dues should be released and paid to the workers only.

As far as the claim regarding casual workers underpayment is concerned the court has decided not to make any award on this issue because the Ministry of Labour had taken the respondents to court over this matter. It is up to the casuals and the Ministry of Labour to pursue their claims if any.

Dated the 12th March, 1990.

2. The parties were heard in Nairobi on 16th January, 15th February and 6th March, 1990, and relied on their written and verbal submissions. The claimants also called the grievants to give evidence on oath. The respondents did not call any witness.

AWARD

3. The Notification of Dispute Form "A" dated 14th November, 1986, and duly signed by the parties was received by the court on 1st December, 1986, together with the statutory certificates signed by the Minister for Labour and the Labour Commissioner.

The respondents are a farmers co-operative society, registered under the Co-operative Societies Act, Cap. 420, Laws of Kenya. They are also affiliated to the Nyeri District Co-operative Union.

The first grievant was employed by the respondents as a general labourer in March 1979, at a monthly salary of KSh. 205. She was promoted in May 1979, to the post of a copy typist to the secretary/manager of the respondents, and her salary went up to KSh. 445 per month. She held this position until her dismissal on 1st March, 1983, when her salary stood at KSh. 860 per month. The grievant had served the respondents for five years.

The second grievant was engaged by the respondents as a copy typist in 1970 at a salary of KSh. 250 per month, and at the time of her dismissal on 1st March, 1983, she was earning a salary of KSh. 1,230 per month. The grievant had worked for the respondents for a period of thirteen years.

The circumstances leading to the grievants' dismissal were that in June 1982, the secretary/manager had instructed the first grievant to type a confidential suspension letter in respect of one, Mr. Machira. She did not do so, but instead passed the same over to the second grievant, to type it. On 12th June, 1982, the first grievant proceeded on her annual leave without ensuring, as it was her normal duty to do so, that the letter was actually typed, signed and sent; and the copy, together with the other confidential documents, properly filed.

However, during the hearing of this dispute, the second grievant who was sharing the office with the first grievant and two other employees, and also helping her with typing and normal routine office work, admitted that she typed the letter and took it to the secretary/manager for signature, but she did not receive it back from him.

On 6th July, 1982, the confidential document was discovered missing. The grievants were eventually summoned to the management committee on 3rd November, 1982, in order to explain about the missing confidential document. The respondents alleged that the grievants were unable to give any satisfactory explanation; and, in the circumstances, they were consequently dismissed for abuse of responsibility.

The claimants took up the matter with the respondents but no settlement was reached, and they proceeded to report a formal trade dispute to the Minister for Labour. A reconciliator was appointed, and on 29th August, 1985, he released his report to the parties in which he recommended that the grievants should be paid five months and ten months salary respectively to compensate them for the wrongful dismissal. In addition, they should also be paid all their terminal entitlements in accordance with the parties' collective agreement.

The claimants accepted the recommendation, but the respondents rejected it in that the investigator failed to set out the basis of the recommendation, and the matter is now before the court for consideration.

The claimant prayed the court to award reinstatement of the grievants to their former jobs and payment of four months salary each as compensation for wrongful dismissal.

The respondents prayed the court to reject the claimants' demand and uphold their action.

The circumstances leading to the grievants' suspension from duty and eventual summary dismissal arose from the loss or disappearance of a document or letter in which Mr. Machira had admitted that he fraudulently obtained some money from the respondents. The respondents maintained that, in view of the grievants' inability to give satisfactory explanation to the management committee surrounding this whole episode, they lost confidence in the grievants and dismissed them.

The court has anxiously considered the submissions by the parties and also analysed the evidence given by the grievants and notes that during their years of employment with the respondents, the grievants were not served with any warning letters at all. The court notes further that the cabinets containing the employees' personal files were faulty. Furthermore, the office was also being shared by the grievants and two other employees—a statistics clerk and a messenger. Under the circumstances, the court feels that the grievants' lapse in their work performance was not substantial and serious, but only called for a warning letter. The respondents were therefore unduly harsh to them.

In view of the respondents' inability to carry their burden of proof on the dismissal of the grievants for abuse of responsibility relating to this incident, the court has also found some difficulty on whom to place the blame for the disappearance or loss of Mr. Machira's incriminating document or letter; and accordingly, it is compelled, on the balance of probabilities to give the grievants the benefit of the doubt but not the extent of awarding reinstatement or heavy compensation.

Considering all the circumstances of this dispute, particularly the grievants' clean records and length of service to the respondents, the court awards that their summary dismissal should be reduced to normal termination of service and they should be paid all their terminal benefits thereof. In addition, the grievants should be paid three and six months' salary respectively by way of compensation for wrongful dismissal.

Dated the 13th March, 1990.

Judge.
