This is an application by the Claimants to seek he Court's approval to declare the following workers redundant —

One Assistant Telephone Operator, Mr E Maina, employed since 1st January, 1972 Salary Sh 660 per month

One Assistant Transfers Clerk, Mr C A Kamau, employed since 10th March, 1971 Salary Sh 660 per month

Three out of six Office Messengers—

Mr C Opondo, employed since 1954 Salary Sh 410 per month

Mr K Kıtachı, employed sınce 1st Aprıl, 1967 Salary Sh 350 per month

Mr S Omulli, employed since 1st October, 1969 Salary Sh 370 per month

The reason put forward by the Claimants for their demand is a marked drop in their business activity which has resulted in their profits falling to such an extent that for the financial year which ended on 31st March, 1974, they made a loss of £481 as against a profit of £21,000 which they made for the year ending 31st March 1973 The causes of the run down of local investment which affected the Claimants' business are the following four —

- (a) Government measures to discourage investment
- (b) The credit squeeze imposed by Government and the general shortage of money resulting therefrom
- (c) The acceleration of inflation as the result of the four-fold increase in the cost of oil imposed by OPEC (the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries)
- (d) The lack of confidence by investors resulting from (a) to (d) above

During the hearing the Claimants elaborated on these points

The Claimants having decided that drastic economies must be effected if their business was to survive decided to economize as follows —

- (1) The first was a reduction in the general overheads
- (11) The second was reduction in the managerial and executive staff
- (111) The third is to be a reduction in unionizable staff

During the hearing the Claimants explained in detail how tev carried out economies in the general overheads and it is important to note that under the second heading four members of the managerial staff ceased to be employed. In fact what happened was that on 1st April, 1973, they employed three secretaries. When one of the three left on 1st August, 1973, she was not replaced. When the second left on 1st August, 1974, she was not replaced. Further when the Assistant Accountant left the Claimants on 1st May, 1974, she was not replaced. Finally when their Accounting Machine Operator left on 1st July, 1974, her job was taken over by an existing member of the accounts section so one employee less was employed.

Redundancy planned by them under the third heading is the subject matter of this application before the Court

The Respondents are resisting this application mainly on the ground that the Claimants had not followed the laid down procedure in that the national officials, particularly the general secretary, was never informed by the Claimants of the intended redundancies. The first time that the Respondents came to know about the intended redundancy was when they were threatened with it when they went to negotiate wage increments for their members which the Claimants refused to discuss

The Respondents rejected the idea that information to their shopsteward was to be construed to mean that they as a union had been informed of the redundancies. Moreover they criticized the Claimants for leaving the difficult decision of deciding on such matters as skill, relative ment, ability and rehability of an employee to a shopsteward as opposed to the national officials

The Respondents did not accept that any of the managerial staff had been declared redundant and put forward the argument that the four employees who the Claimants allege were not replaced was strictly not redundancy but possibly the Claimants have found that they had over employed these people and there fore did not bother to replace them when they themselves left

Finally the Respondents intimated to the Court that had the Claimants dealt with this matter openly and frankly as provided for in the collective agreement it was possible the matter would have been resolved without reference to the Court

The Court notes that the employees as stated hereinabove in the award are already on paid leave from January this year because there is just no work for them in the Claimants' under taking

After careful consideration of all the submissions the Court is satisfied that the Claimants have no doubt a case which fully justifies the intended redundancies. The Court is further satisfied that there is no attempt on the part of the Claimants to victimize only the union members. In fact the way the Claimants have decided to go about affecting economies is quite fair under the circumstances.

Regarding the Respondents' complaint that they were ignored by the Claimants the Court is satisfied that not only the Respondents' shopsteward but also the Respondents' branch secretary of Nairobi branch was fully in the picture. Had the branch secretary not been informed by the Claimants of their intended redundancy then the Respondents might have had a genuine grievance. But once the branch secretary of an important branch is informed of an important issue then even if the national officials were not informed of the intended move then it is clearly the fault of the branch secretary and not of the employer.

The Court hereby gives its approval to the intended redundancies and directs the parties that they should carry it out in accordance with the provisions on this subject as contained in their collective agreement

Given in Nairobi this 16th day of April 1975

Issue in dispute —Refusal by the management to reinstate the employees as agreed by the parties in a joint meeting

AWAPD

3 The Notification of Dispute Form "A" dated 8th August, 1974, was received by the Court on 7th October, along with the statutory certificate signed by the Labour Commissioner

This dispute conceins 24 workers, six of whom were employed by the First Respondent and 18 by the Second Respondent, all of whom lost their jobs as a result of a strike by the First Respondent's employees on 27th June, 1974, and in which the Second Respondent's employees also joined on 1st July, 1974

The Court was told that in November, 1972, the Claimants had made representations to the First Respondent in connexion with the alleged arbitrary withdrawal of benefits enjoyed by their employees when the First Respondent had joined the Distributive and Allied Trades Association (hereinafter referred to as DATA) The matter was subject of correspondence and meetings between the parties

From September, 1973, the Claimants were involved in repre sentations to the Second Respondent again on the question of withdrawal of certain benefits which were being enjoyed by the workers and certain alleged underpayments. This matter dragged until June, 1974, when the Claimants alleged that one of their key shopstewards was transferred and demoted because he was pushing the case regarding underpayment. Furthermore there were allegations of harassment and derogatory comments against African workers by an Asian assistant accountant employed by this Respondent. A meeting was held on 17th June, 1974, when certain agreements were reached on these allegations. The Claimants alleged that despite the agreement the assistant accountant continued to make further salary adjustments contrary to the terms contained therein

The parties' respective position having been placed in its proper perspective the Court would now like to come to the incident which caused a strike by the First Respondent's employees on 27th June, 1974. It is alleged that on that day the cashier who is the brother of the assistant accountant employed by the Second Respondent refused to pay the casual employees their dues after they had completed their task. He told them to come the following day. The Respondents, however, submitted that the casual employees were told that they would be paid in the afternoon, some two hours after they had finished the task.

The casual workers were impatient and they blocked the cashier from going home for lunch with the result that the police intervened and arrested four of them who later pleaded guilty and were fined in a Criminal Court

On 28th June, 1974, 28 unionizable employees of the First Respondent went on strike

On 29th June, 1974, the Senior Labour Officer, Coast Province, issued a circular to all the strikers drawing their attention to provisions of section 18A (a) of the Trade Disputes Act In fact he quoted the relevant part of the section in full as follows—

- 'Any strike shall be unlawful-
- (a) unless a report in writing of a trade dispute has been made to the Minister and twenty-one days have elapsed since the date on which the dispute was so reported"

He further advised the workers that if they had any grievance or trade dispute it should be sorted out in accordance with the provisions of the Trade Disputes Act and in accordance with the machinery laid down in the negotiated agreement

The workers did not take any notice of the Senior Labour Officer's advice and continued the strike although they had been asked by the Senior Labour Officer to resume work not later than 8 a m on 1st July, 1974

On 1st July, 1974, 60 permanent employees of the Second Respondent went on strike in sympathy with the strike of the employees of the First Respondent

The Senior Labour Officer, Coast Province, once again issued the workers with an identical circular to the one he issued to the employees of the First Respondent and asked them to report for duty on 2nd July, 1974

The stilking employees defied the warnings of the Senior Labour Officer and stayed out Consequently the First Respondent terminated the services of all striking employees on 2nd July and the Second Respondent followed suit on 3rd July

The Court has noted that up to this point the national officials of the Claimants were not in the picture at all. In fact the first time that the national officials came to know anything about the unpleasant developments was on 2nd July. By this time the strike was spreading to other employees who were also members of DATA

On 4th July, 1974, the Claimants' national officials intervened and persuaded all the workers to report for work on 5th July

The Court at this stage must emphasize that no return to work formula was worked out or signed between the parties

The resulting situation was that all the strikers were allowed to return to their work by all the other employers except the four employers which included the two Respondents. The other two employers subsequently also allowed their workers to resume duty

On 10th July, 1974, the Claimants wrote a letter to the Chairman of DATA and in that letter they stated in one paragraph as follows—

"We wish, therefore, to confirm our to-dates telephone conversation that we have met the Managements of the Uganda Lint Marketing Board and the Coffee Marketing Board (Uganda) and as a result of lengthy discussions have assured the Union that they will allow their employees back to work without loss of benefits. As the Union would have wished to have a written document from the employers to this effect, the Union is satisfied with their assurance and your confirmation that the Union should not doubt the association's members' word and that a written document was not neces sary"

Copies of this letter were sent to both the Respondents who wrote letters to the DATA Chairman repudiating the alleged agreement and stated that they had made it clear to the Claimants that all the employees would have to apply afresh for their jobs and then it would be up to them, the Respondents, to re-engage those persons who they decided to

On 13th July 1974 the Claimants issued a threatening statement which touched upon the goods in transit and other services affecting Uganda. The dispute thereby caused a lot of unpleasant publicity concerning a partner State in the newspapers.

The Claimants on the same day reported the existence of a trade dispute to the Minister for Labour

Both the Respondents received new applications from all their employees and allowed all their workers to resume work except the 24 in respect of whom the Claimants are pressing the dispute

The parties signed the Notification of Dispute Form "A" fairly early 1e 8th August, 1974, and the Court received these forms on 7th October, 1974

The Claimants have submitted that the Respondents were in breach of an agreement they had made with them by not allowing all their employees to resume duty after they had agreed to do so with the Claimants They based their case on a letter which they wrote to the DATA Chairman on 10th July, 1974, with copies to the Respondents The Claimants stressed that if in fact there was no agreement as alleged by them then the Respondents should have immediately replied to that effect and repudiated it

The Claimants were very critical of the role played by the Senior Labour Officer, Coast Province, in that they allege that he had sided with the employers and had also usurped the functions of the Minister for Labour in that he had himself declared the aforesaid strike unlawful

The Claimants stressed that they had taken initiative and got all their members back to work before the Minister could make an order declaring the strike illegal, therefore both the Res pondents should not have locked out the 24 workers involved. They asked the Court for reinstatement of all the workers and to declare that all the time they were absent from work should be treated as leave with pay

The Respondents on the other hand emphasized that the damages caused by the strike were considerable and the economic losses suffered by them were very substantial. They denied the existence of an agreement as alleged by the Claimants that all employees would be reinstated following the costly unlawful stoppage of work.

The Respondents pointed out that the Claimants' General Secretary and his deputy had pleaded with them to exercise leniency towards the dismissed workers and in the spirit of good industrial relations the Respondents had asked both these gentlemen to advise their members to reapply for vacancies when each one would be considered on its own merit. The Respondents made it absolutely clear that not all the dismissed personnel would be taken back. In these circumstances they asked the Court to uphold their decision.

After careful consideration of all the submissions the Court finds that there are important principles at stake in this dispute First and foremost every employer should realize that the workers are entitled to be paid for services rendered in accord ance with the statutory provisions contained in the Employment Act or in the collective agreement if any. If any employer deliberately chooses to ignore to comply and carry out his obligations then he can expect nothing but industrial trouble. The Court, however, is doubtful whether the casual employees were told by the First Respondent's cashier to come for their payment the next day or in the afternoon of the same day when they performed their task.

The Court is not, however, convinced that the course of action followed by the casual employees in blocking the cashier's way during the lunch-time was the right to do under the circumstances. The Court would like to discourage such behaviour on the part of aggrieved workers because the Ministry of Labour has competent and enough labour inspectors and labour officers stationed at important centies throughout the country and one of their functions is to ensure that no worker is deprived of his legitimate right. The proper course for these workers was to go to their nearest labour officer and report that an employer is refusing to pay their dues. This they did not do

There is absolutely no doubt whatsoever that the strike by the First Respondent's employees on 27th June was unlawful neither is there any doubt that the sympathy strike by the Second Respondent's employees was equally unlawful as was the strike by employees of the other employers who were members of the DATA The Court would like to uphold the steps taken by the Senior Labour Officer, Coast Province, in trying to meet the unpleasant situation that was developing. The Court finds that his circulars issued to the strikers on 29th June and 1st July were proper and in these circulars he did not declare or purport to declare these strikes unlawful. He merely tried, as is his duty, to draw the strikers' attention to the provisions of the Trade Disputes Act relating to such unlawful stoppage of work

The Court would like to state that section 18A (a) of the Trade Disputes Act does not supercede or cancel out section 19 or 20 of the Trade Disputes Act All these sections are provided to cater for different sets of circumstances and are not by any means contradictory

Section 18A is meant to curb the wildcat strikes, the sort of strikes that took place as mentioned in the award hereinbefore

The Court is satisfied that the Claimants' national officials were bypassed by the shopstewards and the striking workers and were not consulted before withdrawing their labour. This tendancy again is one which the Court would like to discourage in the strongest possible terms.

The Court now comes to the most vital question in this dispute whether or not there was an agreement in existence between the parties as alleged by the Clarmants

The Court has come to the conclusion that if there had been an agreement in such complicated circumstances which had culminated in a big strike with all the ensuing publicity involving a sister State the parties would definitely have reduced it in writing. The Court is very much surprised that whereas in similar circumstances in other disputes which erupt now and then in the country there is invariably a proper return to work formula which is signed by all the parties involved in a dispute in this case there is no such document.

The circumstances on which the Claimants have based their case lead the Court to the conclusion that the DATA Chairman used his good offices to bring to an end the strike before it escalated. He did nothing more than that and there is no evidence that he committed either his association or any of the members in the manner as stated by the Claimants. Both the Respondents refuted the allegation of an agreement as set out by the Claimants in their letter to the DATA Chairman on 10th July and the fact that they did not send letters or their copies to the Claimants, although regrettable, does not alter the situation that there was no agreement between the parties

The Court finds that in the absence of a clearly worded agree ment setting out terms of return to work formula the workers must face the consequences of their unlawful act. The Court is satisfied that the Claimants did the best they could to help their members who had decided without consulting the national officials to embark on an unlawful strike

The Court accordingly rejects the Claimants' demand
