The object of this Bill is to give effect to a proposal that pensions should be awarded to Sir Charles Mortimer and Major Cavendish-Bentinck in respect of their valuable past services as Members of the Government.

The pensions provided for in the Bill are in respect of total service of 7 years 6 months in the case of Sir Charles Mortimer and 11 years 10 months in the case of Major Cavendish-Bentinck, and are based on a rate of £100 pension for each year of service and proportionately for part of a year's service. Widows' pensions will be provided under the Bill, in the event of the death of the pensioners, at the rate of 40 per cent of the full pensions.

In each case the commencing date for payment of the pension is the day following the end of leave pending retirement. The figures for total service given above take into consideration the periods of leave pending retirement.

Clause 5 of the Bill applies certain provisions of the Pensions Ordinance, 1950, which are normally included in pensions legislation.

If this Bill is enacted, additional expenditure of public moneys will be incurred annually in the amounts of the pensions provided for in the Bill, for so long as such pensions are payable.
